("Which you would be quite incapable of filling," interpolated her brother, sotto voce.)

"For I haven't the patience to put up with an old maid's quips and cranks."

"Pshaw!" said Harold, who had not yet spoken, "I think an old maid far preferable to a widow. She will probably be so grateful to father for marrying her that she will behave very decently. Generally an old maid's chief fault is romancing about her former offers, and Mrs. Foster will probably not do that, now she has really had one."

"That is so," chimed in Jim. "Whereas a widow is always resurrecting her dear defunct, whenever his substitute does anything to displease her. Oh! undoubtedly, things might be worse."

"Yes," returned Gertrude, "but how can a man with a heart fall in love again so soon, anyway?"

"Maybe she was his first love, from whom he was separated by a misunderstanding," said Harold, putting his hand over his heart sentimentally.

"Hello! The rain has stopped—and there comes a livery stable carriage. How dramatic! Rain stops. Enter, hero! Come along, Jim, we would not be here to embarrass the greetings of two young and loving hearts." He disappeared through the door while Jim slowly followed, in his lazy, languid way, saying: "Tell Dick I will see him at supper."

By this time the carriage had entered the gates and was coming rapidly up the long avenue that led to the house. The Fosters prided themselves on their well-kept grounds, especially the drive from the lodge gate to the house, which was bordered on either side by maple trees.

They gave a delightful shade during the summer months, and their gorgeous foliage in the fall made the Foster place the glory of the neighborhood.

But neither Richard nor Gertrude thought of the maples as he was driving under them that afternoon. He had been abroad two years his only thought was that, at last, he was really to be with his fiancee once more, while she forgot her father's second marriage in the joy of seeing her lover again.

But, after they had been together an hour or two, Gertrude remembered the letter, and her face fell.

"Oh, Dick!" she said, "father is married again. I received a note just a few minutes before you came, telling me about it. He said he should be home in a few days, and wanted me to have everything done to make her home-coming pleasant."

Dick looked grave—then replied: "Well, it will be only for a little time, but," cheerfully, "I will take you away, right off, if you like."

Gertrude laughed. "Oh! I guess I can support her presence a few weeks, but isn't it dreadful—for a man to get married a second time?"

"Awful," he returned, with conviction. Then, after a second's pause: "I mean as a rule; of course there are exceptional cases. That reminds me," he added, "you have heard me speak of my Aunt Marion?"

"The aunt who, you say, has redeemed the race of old maids in your estimation?" asked Gertrude.

"The same," he answered. "Well, mother wrote me some time ago that she was going to be married. I suppose I shall hear all about it to-night, when I go home. You know," he continued, "a great many years ago Aunt Marion fell in love. She was boarding in the country at the time, and, although he reciprocated her affection, they had not confessed their mutual attachment, when her dearest friend came to board at the same place. This young lady also was fascinated by the same gentleman, and began to think how she could supplant my aunt in his estimation. She had recourse to strategy; told numberless falsehoods to both of them, and managed, in a short space of time, to provoke a quarrel between them.

"Aunt Marion was very proud and sensitive, sought no explanation from her whilom admirer, trusted her friend, and lost her lover.

"In a year or two she heard of their marriage, which opened her eyes a little, and caused the girlish friendship to be broken off. Two years ago she received a letter from this woman, who, it seems, was dying, confessing the whole truth. She also left an explanation for her husband, which he found when she was dead. After awhile, Aunt Marion acceded to the widower's repeated entreaties to be allowed to call—and in a few months they were engaged. I guess my prospective uncle made the other woman a good husband, but he did not really love her, for his wife wrote that he had never forgotten his first love, and only married her in gratitude for the sympathy and tenderness she showed when telling how my aunt had deceived him. I think," continued Richard, "that I would never have made known the truth, if I had been in her place. But I suppose the voice of conscience gets very loud in the presence of death. It was a tardy reparation, though."

"Dick, what is your aunt's name?" asked Gertrude, abruptly.

"Why the same as my mother's," he answered, somewhat astonished at the question; "Moore. Marion Moore. Pretty name, isn't it?" he added. "Too pretty to change, I think. Why, Gertie, what is the matter?"

For the girl had grown deathly white, and did not seem to hear his last remark.

"Nothing," she said, at last, making an effort to recover her self-possession, "only your aunt is—my stepmother."

"What!" ejaculated Richard. "Aunt Marion your stepmother! It cannot be—and yet—I never knew her lover's name, never heard it. Is that her name, Gertie? Are you sure?"

"Here is my letter; you can read for yourself," she answered, faintly. He saw there was no mistake and wondered how in the world he could recall his words.

"I am sorry, Gertie," he said, at last. "Of course you know I never would have told you had I dreamed of such a thing. I dare say I exaggerated. I never heard Aunt Marion say anything about it. All my information came from her sisters, who did not like your—her friend. Just forget all about it, Gertie."

Gertie was weeping as if her heart would break, but as he finished speaking she handed him her ring without looking up.

"What is that for?" asked Richard, aghast. "I did not mean to hurt you; surely, you are not going to punish me like that, when I offended so unintentionally?"

"No," sobbed Gertrude, "it isn't that, only I shouldn't think you would want to marry the daughter of such a mother."

Richard laughed, as he took the ring and placed it on Gertrude's finger again.

"What a silly child you are!" he said fondly. "It wouldn't make any difference to me if every relative you had was in the penitentiary. You would not be responsible for their sins. Besides, I suppose your mother thought she had every right to try and win your father. He was not engaged to my aunt, you know, and, they say, all is fair in love and war. So think no more about it—and we will never mention it again."

Gertrude never did mention it again, but she thought about it many times; and when Mr. Foster brought his wife home, he found everything arranged to his liking.

He had said to her: "The boys will be all right, and if Gertrude does not treat you well let me know."

"Never, James," replied Mrs. Foster, "for you might be tempted to tell her the history of the years that are gone, and children should reverence their mother's memory, which I doubt if she could do, knowing all."

But there was no trouble. Gertrude treated her stepmother with the utmost respect and courtesy, and behaved in such a way that Mrs. Foster actually dreaded the girl's wedding day.

As she watched the carriage that contained her nephew and his bride drive down the maple avenue, now resplendent in its autumnal coloring, she sighed—then turned toward her husband, who was standing near. "I never thought to have loved Louisa's child so well," she said.

WOMAN AND HOME.

WILD MORNING GLORY.

A Handsome Figure for a Quilt and How to Form It.

One of the most beautiful designs for a quilt that I ever saw is the wild morning glory, originated by myself, and a sketch of which I send you. Directions given are for one square, twelve of which with a six-inch border make a quilt. The ground is composed of five pieces; one piece of white, 12x12 inches; one piece of yellow, 6x12 inches; one piece of red, 2x18 inches, and two pieces of blue, 2x18 inches. Sew the ground together, putting a red strip between two blue ones. Sew a yellow piece at bottom where the leaves are, and a white one where the morning glory is; then sew all together, the yellow piece toward you, and red and blue strips to the right. The red strip forms a pole for the vine. The vine, leaves and flower cups are of green, and the flowers and buds of red and blue.

To make the flower take a blue piece, 6x8 inches; fold it four double; round off the corner so as to make an oval; cut five strips of red, and sew on as shown in sketch. Cut a piece of red about 3 inches square. Sew an oval, letting it lap over the red piece; then cut flower cup and sew on, letting it lap on red piece also.

For the buds cut pieces of blue the shape of an incandescent lamp, and sew red stripes on. Cut flower cups and sew on, letting the cup over lap the buds. Cut six pieces of vine, and sew on red strip as indicated; then cut and sew on flower stem and leaves. Cut a piece, 18x18 inches, of white for a lining, put cotton batting in and quilt by the piece. All the work on this quilt can be done on any ordinary sewing machine. Make machine tension very tight when quilting, to give an embossed appearance to the flowers.—Mrs. R. W. J. Stewart, in Household Queen.

HOUSEHOLD NOTES.

BREAD crumbs cleanse silk gowns.

GLOVES can be cleaned at home by rubbing with gasoline.

CORKS warmed in oil make excellent substitutes for glass stoppers.

THE fumes of a brimstone match will remove berry stains from the fingers.

MILK, applied once a week with a soft cloth, freshens and preserves boots and shoes.

A LUMP of camphor in your clothespress will keep steel ornaments from tarnishing.

WEAK spots in a black silk waist may be strengthened by "sticking" court plaster underneath.

YOU can drive nails into hard wood without bending them if you dip them first in lard.

LIGHT scorch marks may be removed by simply moistening them with water and laying in the sun.

A NICKEL'S worth of whiting and a bottle of ammonia will keep silver forks, spoons and other table ware always bright and shining.

GUM arabic and gum tragacanth, in equal parts dissolved in hot water, make the best and most convenient mucilage you can keep in the house.

A CREAM-WHITE jacket of cloth trimmed as the wearer may see fit, to make it appropriate for the use for which it is designed, is called the Eulalia.

IF a little cornstarch is put into the salt for the table it will keep it from lumping, and the pretty little shakers will not have so hard a scolding in damp weather.

GREASE may be taken out of carpets by covering the spot with powdered French chalk, laying a soft brown paper over the chalk and covering with a warm iron.

IF one wishes to cool a hot dish in a hurry, it will be found that if the dish be placed in a vessel full of cold, salty water it will cool more rapidly than if it stood in water free from salt.

NICE SEWING BASKET.

A Charming Novelty When Properly Made and Ornamented.

The large, round Japanese basket illustrated may be either bronzed or left the natural color. It is lined with a strip of soft silk as long as the largest circumference of the basket. It should be wide enough so that when the lower edge is gathered to fit the bottom and the lining is tacked in place the upper edge will project far enough beyond the top of the basket to form a cover, allowing for the amount turned down to form a casing for the two gathering strings. The basket is ornamented on opposite sides with bows and ribbons matching the lining in color.—N. Y. World.

TO CLEAN DRESSES.

Follow Directions Here Given and You Will Not Be Disappointed.

Get five cents' worth of soap bark from the druggist (about a teacupful). For one dress take half of it and steep in about one quart of boiling water for about half an hour or more, then strain through a cloth.

For a silk dress, while the liquid is warm take piece of white flannel and dip into it at intervals, and rub the silk or satin with it until it seems cleansed. When done, pull the material straight and hang it to dry. Do not iron either the silk or satin. If the dress is very much soiled, use clear water for silk, or it will not stiffen up well.

For a woolen dress, dip the part to be cleansed, or the whole of it, if needed, into the liquor. This can be rinsed in the same after washing, or in clean, warm water. If very dirty, put the dress to soak in a tub in the liquid with more water added before cleaning or washing. The woolen goods should be pressed until quite dry.

Water in which potatoes have been boiled will cleanse delicate-colored woolen or worsted goods. The dress should be wet all over. Use no soap. Rinse in clear, warm water. Press while still damp. This will not injure the most delicate colors.

LAUNDERING CURTAINS.

Work That Requires Great Care and Considerable Patience.

Clear white and cream or ecru curtains must be washed separately, to get the best results. Shake out the dust thoroughly and put in a warm, strong suds, made of pearline, or any good laundry soap, and soft water, laying in first those that are the least soiled. If they are old and tender, pat and squeeze carefully with the hands, but if strong they can be rubbed lightly on the board. Tears should be carefully darned before wetting the articles. Holes may be neatly mended by appliqueing under them bits of blond lace, using very fine white thread. Now run the curtains through the wringer into clean water, changing this and repeating the wringing several times, until clear; put all in a pillow case, or muslin bag, and scald in clean, hot suds. Be particular to use soft water throughout, or to soften the water with ammonia or borax, as hard water contains lime, which yellows and shrinks the thread. If you wish them white, blue in two waters, and use a little blue, also, in the thin, clear starch. If they are to be cream or ecru, get some yellow ochre, which dissolves readily in warm water, and add a little of it to the starch, to give the desired tinge. After starching, run them several times through the wringer, to get them as dry as possible. Tack a couple of sheets securely and smoothly to the floor of an unused room, and pin your curtains down carefully to the sheets, putting a pin through each scallop, and seeing that they are absolutely without crease or wrinkle. Two curtains of the same size may be pinned one on top of the other. If the weather be mild, open doors and windows, and the curtains will dry in a single night.—Edna Lee, in American Agriculturist.

Best Number at a Dinner Party.

A well-known and popular dinner out as popular with one sex as the other, was asked what he considered to be the best number for a dinner party. His characteristic reply was: "Two; or if not, four, three of them being ladies." He then conceded that eight was the outside limit diners should reach. It offered advantages all round, socially and domestically speaking. Socially, because the eight guests could be chosen to form a perfect octave as regards knowledge of each other, reciprocity of tastes, personal regard and the rest; domestically, because the household staff would be equal to the demands made upon it, and no outside element need be introduced to disturb the precision and order of the whole.—St. Louis Republic.

Lotion for Painful Swellings.

No matter in what disease they may occur, or what their cause may be, the heat and pain of inflammations and swellings can almost be miraculously subdued by the following lotion. Mothers and housekeepers should note that this is included in their list of handy household remedies: One-half ounce of sugar of lead, one-half gallon of water and one-half pint of alcohol, should be thoroughly mixed together, and kept in a stone jug ready for use. When it is to be used shake well, then saturate cloths with it, and lay over the affected parts. When they become dry and warm, simply moisten them with a small quantity of the lotion. This truly "acts like a charm."

Hickory Nut Cookies.

A very simple recipe for hickory nut cookies is to take one pound of sugar, one-half pound of butter, two eggs, one pint of hickory nut meat chopped fine and some flour. Cream the butter and sugar together, add the eggs and hickory nuts, and then mix in enough flour to make the dough stiff enough to roll out. Sprinkle each cooky with granulated sugar and bake in a moderately quick oven. Hickory nuts can be used the same as cocoanut in icing and filling for layer cakes, if the meats be pounded into a paste.

Saved by a Narrow Margin.

"Been to lodge, have you, Absalom?" said Mrs. Rambo, in a metallic tone of voice.

"Yes, m' dear," replied Absalom.

"What time does the lodge usually let out?"

"About—um—about eleven o'clock."

"And what time do you think it is now?"

"Er—It's about twelve, isn't it?"

"It is half-past two. Does it take three hours and a half to come home?"

"Yes, m' dear. Lodge bodies move slowly."

And Mrs. Rambo went gaspingly upstairs to bed.—Chicago Tribune.

Which?

A lady leading a St. Bernard dog passed the window of a club at which some of the members were sitting, when one of them exclaimed, loud enough to be overheard: "What a beautiful creature."

Feigning resentment she turned to a policeman and said: "Did you hear that insolent man? He called me a beautiful creature."

"I think you're mistaken, mum," replied the policeman. "He referred to the dog."—Judge.

THE WIFE'S ALLOWANCE.

A Curious Inconsistency of Our American Men.

Very few men treat their womenkind openly and frankly in regard to money matters, and it is no uncommon thing for a man to be apparently willing that the scale of the household expenses should be connected on the most lavish basis, pay the monthly bills without a murmur, and yet apparently grudging every dollar that he hands over to his wife and daughters. It is a curious inconsistency, and one that causes no little ill-feeling and sense of injustice on the part of a woman who can not understand why the head of the house should be at the same time so careless and so close, or why ten dollars more or less on a bill is not even considered, and the actual money in hand is so hard to obtain. It is very trying for a sensitive woman to have to ask for every cent for her personal expenses, and a man of any generosity should appreciate the situation, and give his wife a regular allowance in accordance with his means and other expenditures. In England this is considered in the settlement, and, as a rule, the bride's relatives see that she is guaranteed enough for her personal expenses. In this country such an arrangement is seldom if ever though of and the bride puts herself and her future with unquestioning faith into the man's power. To the honor of American manhood be it said that our men are of all men the most generous; but it is not always pleasant even for a loving wife to be absolutely dependent, however liberal her husband may be, and the sense of "money begrudged" is absolute torture to most women. If taken in no other light, the housewife fairly earns a salary. To oversee a house, large or small, to provide for the welfare of the family, and to perform all the multifarious duties that such a position involves actually deserves a large financial recompense, and a woman should have it recorded to her as her right, not doled out to her as a favor.—N. Y. Tribune.

HISTORIC AMERICAN TRIUMPH.

Notable Visit of the Foreign World's Fair Commissioners to North Dakota to View Harvesting Machinery at Work.

Forty-five Deering Twine Binders, forming a procession half a mile in length, and steadily moving through a waving sea of wheat—such was the sight that greeted the Foreign Commissioners to the World's Fair during their recent famous visit to the bonanza farms of North Dakota. This imposing spectacle was witnessed on the great Elk Valley farm at Larimore, North Dakota, a farm comprising 12,000 acres or nearly 19 square miles, 10,000 acres of which formed one unbroken fenceless field of wheat. To witness this sight the distinguished spectators, comprising fifty foreign diplomats, World's Fair Commissioners and representatives of the foreign press, together with an equal number of Americans, eminent in World's Fair, Railroad and Commercial circles, had undertaken the discomforts of a thousand mile journey from Chicago; and the exclamations of delight and surprise, and the cries of "bravo" that rang out on the air showed that their expectations were vastly more than realized. Sent here to study all things American, these gentlemen had been especially desirous of witnessing the methods in vogue on the much talked-of "bonanza" wheat farms. Four days before they had left Chicago as guests of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railroad, along whose route from Chicago to St. Paul they had received one continuous ovation. From St. Paul through Minnesota and North Dakota they traveled as guests of the Great Northern Railroad, and the farther north they traveled the warmer and more cordial was their reception. Here at Larimore they found the climax of interest and the height of hospitality. They were met at their train and escorted to carriages by what seemed to be the whole population of the little city of Larimore, headed by O. H. Phillips, the Mayor, Gov. Shortridge, and N. G. Larimore, the proprietor of the great farm which they were to see. Silently and almost breathlessly at first they viewed the mighty phalanx of machines; then quickly alighting from their conveyances they followed the machines on foot, eagerly peering into their mechanism as if bent on finding the secret of their perfect, automatic, almost noiseless action. For an hour or more they followed the machines, asking innumerable questions of Mr. Larimore and his sons, when they were called to one side of the field where scientific tests of draft were being made under the supervision of Mayor O. H. Phillips and Mr. C. H. Olmstead. The machines tested—the Deering Pony binder and the Deering Ideal mower—were remarkable because embodying the ball and roller bearings, such as are used in bicycles and bicycle sulkies. Twelve tests were made on each machine with a registered Osterheld & Eickmeyer dynamometer, each representing the draft involved in cutting a six-foot swath, 100 feet in length, in twenty to twenty-five seconds of time. The six cutting tests of the binder showed an average of only 298 pounds of draft. The six tests in which the machine was run in gear over the tops of the stubble just cut, known as the "rolling draft" test, showed an average draft of only 207 pounds. The Deering Ideal mower, a new machine also fitted with the bicycle bearings, in heavy grass showed a cutting draft averaging 126 pounds, and the rolling draft ninety-two pounds. The remarkably low draft—about half the draft of ordinary machines—shown by these figures for both machines was carefully noted by the astonished visitors as demonstrating the practicability of the bicycle bearings. The same Pony binder, drawn by two light mules, cut an acre of wheat in twenty-two and a half minutes.

PAPER TWINE USED.

A notable feature of the binder test was the use on the Pony binder of the Deering "paper" twine, made from a wood fibre. This twine, patented by William Deering & Co., bids fair to prove a Waterloo to the twine trust, for it can be made and sold at prices considerably below those now paid for the hemp and sisal fibres.

At the close of these tests the commissioners, together with a party of spectators, were tendered a good, substantial, prairie chicken dinner by Mrs. Larimore and her neighbors. Toasts followed. Gov. Shortridge, Mayor Phillips and Rev J. H. Keeley delivered eloquent addresses of welcome, which were responded to by D. M. De Peralta, of Costa Rica; Mr. A. Grineysky, the assistant Russian commissioner; Don Alberto Gomez Ruano, of Uruguay; Mr. Harry Vincent, of Costa Rica, and Judge Atwater, of Minneapolis. Mr. Larimore also spoke. He said that by using the best methods and machinery he had reduced the cost of raising and marketing wheat to between $4.50 and $5.00 an acre.

MR. APPLEBY SURPRISES THE COMMISSIONERS.

Mr. John F. Appleby, the inventor of the Appleby twine binder, whose presence was a surprise to the commissioners, told of the history of his early struggles and the final universal adoption of his invention. He paid a glowing tribute to Mr. William Deering, to whose enterprise he said the world was indebted for the introduction and general adoption of the machine. Said he:

"In 1879, when the Deering Company made seventy-five of these binders, people smiled knowingly and predicted failure. The next year when Mr. Deering made 3,000 of the machines, the manufacturers of the old reaper and the wire binder said he was crazy. If he was crazy all the manufacturers of harvesting machinery who have been forced to follow his example have also become violently insane [laughter] and the millions of farmers who now use the invention are fit candidates for a lunatic asylum." [Laughter and applause.]

The excursionists left for Alton and the great Dairymple farms at 4 p. m., where they witnessed threshing machines at work on a crop of wheat that was cut from 77,000 acres by 190 Deering binders—a make that is used exclusively by the Dairymples. From Alton they journeyed to Fargo, where they were royally received and shown the marvelous result of western pluck, which in a season of hard times had built a solid city of brick and mortar on the bed of ashes that had lain smoking there only ninety days before. From Fargo, the guests returned to Chicago brimful of enthusiasm over the wonders they had seen.

KENNEDY'S MEDICAL DISCOVERY.

DONALD KENNEDY, OF ROXBURY, MASS.,

Has discovered in one of our common pasture weeds a remedy that cures every kind of Humor, from the worst Scrofula down to a common Pimple.

He has tried it in over eleven hundred cases, and never failed except in two cases (both thunder humor). He has now in his possession over two hundred certificates of its value, all within twenty miles of Boston.

A benefit is always experienced from the first bottle, and a perfect cure is warranted when the right quantity is taken.

When the lungs are affected it causes shooting pains, like needles passing through them; the same with the Liver or Bowels. This is caused by the ducts being stopped, and always disappears in a week after taking it.

If the stomach is foul or bilious it will cause squeamish feelings at first.

No change of diet ever necessary. Eat the best you can get, and enough of it. Dose, one tablespoonful in water at bedtime. Read the Label. Send for Book.

DELANO DIARY

—Old papers for sale at this office.

—Brick $8 per 1000 at John Coolen's.

—If you need lime, call on John Coolen. 27.

—This is Gopher day at the World's Fair.

—Martin Nelson has built an addition to his residence.

—Frank Scherer is moving into his residence on South Second street.

—The Watertown Mill Co. shipped a car load of flour from this point this week.

--Rev. J. R. Davies has been transferred to Brooklyn Center, where he will soon go with his family.

—John Lohmiller was seen following one of those big white refrigerator cars down the tract yesterday morning.

—Joe and Bob's restaurant on Railroad avenue, puts on metropolitan airs, with bill of fare and other city styles.

—Andrew Hansman has been spending odd times patching up the barn, chicken house and so forth for winter. He claims to be about prepared.

--Rev. J. W. Powell, the new Methodist minister will preach at the M. E. church on Sunday evening at 7:30. He will be at Montrose at the usual hour also.

--Dr. C. B. Ames informs us this morning that he has a case of "compound comminuted fracture" down below Rockford that he spent the night with.

--People are moving and preparing for winter. Charley Green will board with his father-in-law, L. M. Maxfield. John Cameron will occupy Green's residence.

—The M. E. sociable held at L. M. Maxfield's residence last evening was well attended, and an enjoyable time had. Several wished for them street cars to carry them home.

—Hehl vs. Ziebarth, for damages, which was postponed from last week until Wednesday morning last did not come off. Both parties to the action were in town but the Justice had gone duck hunting.

—Several adults among Delanoites are having the whoopingcough. This is usually considered a childrens disease but this season has proven to our citizens that it is not always confined to the little folks.

--Altogether too many intoxicated individuals were to be seen on our streets last Saturday. It will probably result in the arrest of some of our saloon keepers for selling to drunken men if it is repeated.

—Rev. J. S. Sherrill, of Minneapolis, editor of the North Western Presbyterian, preached at the Presbyterian church here last Sunday forenoon and at Maple Plain in the afternoon.

--The Fair last Saturday was unusually well attended. Milk cows seemed to find a ready sale at from $25 to $30. Horses were more plenty than purchasers, at reduced prices. There will be another fair on Saturday, November 11.

—Prof. Geo. Aiton, High school inspector is, we understand, expected here in a couple of weeks, to ascertain how near our school is to being up to the grade required of high schols. It is to be hoped that we are pretty nearly there.

—P. B. Burns, a son-in-law of Carl Lique, of Holliwood, met his death by falling between the cars of a freight train on the west side of Crow river at this place on Monday night, while on his way to Willmar in search of work. His wife and mother from Holliwood came down and removed the remains to Watertown on Tuesday.

—Some of our citizens think it would be highly proper to hold an inquest where a man is found dead on the railroak track. Two have been found near this place within a year the last one this week. If no investigation whatever is to be made all a murderer would have to do to cover up his crime would be to carry his victim onto a track after he had killed him.

—The apportionment of school funds from the state has been made at the rate of $3 per head for all children in attendance. At this rate if the children who attended the porochial school here were attending the public school our district would be considerably the gainer and the families who send to the private school would have that much assistace toward defraying educational expenses of their families.

—One of Prof. Dewey's pupils called in on Monday and suggested to us that "it the council would appropriate a $100 for them to hire an instructor he thought the Delano school might get up a pretty good foot ball team." We are of opinion that the city fathers have no more right to hire foot ball teachers than to hire brass band teachers. Not a bit. Not but teaching a class in this fashionable accomplishment is worth considerable money.

—Delano has ample material for a first-class Literary Society, and the questions of vital importance to our nation now being discussed all over the land are interesting enough to furnish a chance to our wood-be orators and future statesmen to practice up against the day when they may be called upon to take a still more active part in settling some of them. We also have a good public hall which will furnish a fine place for meetings. Let's have a literary society this winter.

—Our school grounds are proving altogether inadequate to the wants of the present pupils who indulge in the fashionable games of the day, foot ball, base ball, etc, etc. The green grass around the the terrace that has been set and wattered with such care is daily being tramped to a level with the street, and neighbors complain that intrusions onto their premises in search og a stray ball are too frequent. More level play ground is demanded if our young folks are to be sufficiently educated in the leading University features to enable them to hold up the credit of the Delano High school.

—The clerks in the City Grocery are having considerable sport at the expense of a neighboring business man who thought he knew enough about other people's business to wait on himself in a grocery store. A new young lady clerk had lately been employed and the business man came in in the evening for some kerosene. The new clerk said she was not familiar with that part of the business yet, so the busines man volenteered to help himself. The new clerk held the light while "old business" drawed the "oil" from one of the numerous barrels and paying cash hurried himself home to fill the lamps. Much to his surprise the oil was of very poor quality, and the lights uncommonly dim. In the morning he thought he would use the oil for kindling so he saturated some wood with a bountiful supply of the "poor stuff" and very cautiously applied match after match in hopes of soon having a nice warm breakfast. After mature deliberation he concluded to return the petroleum to the City Grocery and very valiantly marched in feeling a good deal as almost any hungry man would and demanded an explanation. Mr. Green examined the "oil" and thought it rather highly colored, and asked the purchaser where he got it? "Here of course." "I never sold you any such oil as that." "Come," says old business, "and I'll show you where I got it" and he proudly marched into the back room followed by the meek little merchant and pointed out the "identical" barrel from which he had drawn the oil himself. "Why," says Mr. Green, proudly, "That's vinegar." Old biz very meekly replied: "Oh!"

Personals.

Perry Ball came home from the big prairie on Saturday.

Dr Knight, of Minneapolis, tarried in Delano on Sunday.

Mrs. Goodwin and daughter went to Maple Plain Wednesday.

A. W. Rader, of Sauk Center, is visiting in this neighborhood.

Dave Gorman, of Litchfield, visited Delano professionally, on Tuesday.

Prof. Manchester and Mr. Kohler, of Watertown drove over on Sunday.

C. Hehl, of Long Lake, visited Delano, on business, last Wednesday.

E. J. Swedeback and family are taking in the World's Fair this week.

Miss Ada Nelson, of Minneapolis, visited in Delano several days this week.

Mr. Nelson, of the firm of Jim Nelson and Jim Hill was in town yesterday.

C. G. Roosen and I. Gutzwiller, Jr., made a business trip to Buffalo yesterday.

Miss Irene Checley returned Monday morning from a visit to Minnetonka Mills.

Fred Adicks, Sr., of West Franklin, was a pleasant GAZETTE caller this morning.

J. B. Connelly, of Holliwood, is studying the intricacies of post office life at Delano.

Leon Fruzee and wife returned from Alexandria last Saturday, they drove across the country.

Mrs. A. A. Davis, son and daughter Floss, left Wednesday evening for a visit at Hamline and Princeton.

Misses Jennie McAlpine, of Maple Lake and Delia Hallenin, of Bismark, are guests at Young's Hotel.

Miss Mary Catlin and Rev. J. R. and Mrs. Davies attended the M. E. Conference at Minneapolis.

S. S. Brown, of Minneapolis, T. Perison and son E. of Buffalo, were among visitors at the Fair last Saturday.

Rockfords combination athlete Johnson came over on his wheel on Sabbath last. He seems less liable to have Kyphosis Bicyclistorum than he was a few moons hence.

County Cullings.

The County Attorney has been requested by the requisite number of tax payers to take an appeal on the Mill Creek bridge, on the ground that there was never any contract. –Journal.

The last democratic tariff—that of 1857—bankrupted the U. S. treasury. That's why the people feel some anxiety about the next one.—Buffalo Journal.

What's making the people feel so much anxiety about the present one—a republican tariff—the highest ever known?

Senator Eaton, who is a member of the Pine Land Committee investigating for frauds thinks they have found some; and thinks that additional reports sent in by purchasers of timber, who have become frightened at the investigation exceeds the whole amount appropriated for the use of the committee. It must be a self supporting committee, at least. We would not be surprised if a committee of one or more could support itself for a short time in the same manner looking up inadvertances of the state Senate of which the honorable gentleman is a member.

The GAZETTE and Eagle are at logger heads over the village council of Delano having voted $100 out of the village treasury to hire an instructor for the band. The Eagle approves of this action and the GAZETTE condemns it. It does seem as though such an expenditure of public money is unjustifiable and wholly without any sanction of law. On the same principles we do not see why the villge council could not vote public village funds to employ a music teacher for the public or parochial schools or a teacher in book keeping or penmanship. The Gazette seems to be on the right side this time.—Buffalo Journal.

The M. E. Conference, at Minneapolis under Bishop W. X. Ninde, com completed its labors on Monday evening. Changes in which Wright county people are interested are as follows: The new presiding elder for the Minneapolis district is J. F. Chaffee. Annandale, G. N. Kinston; Buffalo and Rockford, D. M. Shannon; Delano and Montrose, J. W. Powell; Howard Lake, J. E. Henderson; Monticello, C. M. Heard; Clearwater, W. H. Barkaloo; Elk River and Otsego, D. S. Higgins.

Presiding Elder John Stafford goes to the Mankato district. Norwood and Lester Prairie, F. E. Higgins; Watertown, B. E. Sherwin; Long Prairie, B. F. Kephart; Wyoming, Noah Lathrop; Alber Lea, Alfred Cressy; Faribault, J. J. Crist; Morristown, Levi Gleason; Waterville and Elysian Jabez Blackhurst. Forest City, Mannana and Union Grove, L. E. Fairbanks.

Rev. John Doran was changed from effective to superannuate relation.

At the North German Conference in St. Paul Sept. 2, the following were chosen for the Minneapolis district: Presiding Elder, W. F. Fritz. Brownton, Gotthilf Raible; Clearwater, G. R. Fritz; Crow River, William Mass.

Agricultural Society.

The annual meeting of members of the society was well attended. There was no important business except the election of officers for 1894, which resulted as follows: President H. C. Bull, of Cokato; vice-president, A. W. Hoar, Monticello; secretary, H. M. Dickey, Howard Lake; treasurer, Lemuel McGraw, Howard Lake; executive committee, Carl Luhmann chairman, H. F. Merriman, W. D. Thompson, Daniel Mast, H. W. Holbrook. The executive committee are all of Howard Lake and vicinity, except Daniel Mast of Monticello.--Howard Lake Herald.

Among Our Exchanges.

Seven tin plate mills resumed work last week. Democratic organs will not make a note of the fact, however. —Minneapolis Journal.

The democratic organs will likely be heard from about a week after the Ohio election announcing their closing down again.

After some routine business last night the park board discussed the question of using the park board funds to aid the unimployed. Mr. Wheelock favored using $50,000, but Mr. Horton thought it illegal. Mr. Wheelock said he should call a special meeting to consider it.—Globe.

TOPEKA, Oct. 8.—Democrats of Kansas are abandoning fusion with either party. In Franklin county, Friday, fusion received a set back by straight-out nominations. Cleveland was indorced and a free coinage resolution defeated. For the first time in four years Lyon county democrocy put up a full party ticket. The democrats of Saline county also severed connection with the populists and will try to win with a straight ticket.--Minneapolis Times.

Which Buffalo Lawyer is It?

By some strange chance there floated onto our exchange table a copy of the American Economist, which, under this good name, seeks to spread the doctrine of waste by protection. We find a lot of letters in it in which the writers give their reasons why McKinley should be elected governor of Ohio. Singularly, few of these are from Ohio, and the most are from states where wishes and reasons will be ineffective. But among the letters is one from a Minnesota lawyer residing in Buffalo, who fires a batch of reasons which scatter all over history and the world like a charge of birdshot out of an old muzzle-loader. He is especially desirous of the election of the diminutive Napoleon because the democrats want to flood the country with cheap foreign made goods, and because they want to take away protection to American labor. We will wager dollars to doughnuts than when this doughty lawyer wants to get a legal printed in his home newspaper he makes the poor printer divide fees with him, and when he wants a suit of clothes he doesn't give a continental whether the goods were made here or abroad, provided only that they are the cheapest he can get. And the fellow is so ignorant that he favors the election of a man who gave us a tariff averaging over 50 per cent when the latest national convention of his party demanded a tariff sufficient to equalize the difference in labor cost only, which averages 18 per cent. But then, if all republicans knew the truth and stood by it, where would that party be?—Globe.

—Hehl vs. Ziebarth, for damages, which was postponed from last week until Wednesday morning last did not come off. Both parties to the action were in town but the Justice had gone duck hunting.

—Several adults among Delanoites are having the whoopingcough. This is usually considered a childrens disease but this season has proven to our citizens that it is not always confined to the little folks.

--Altogether too many intoxicated individuals were to be seen on our streets last Saturday. It will probably result in the arrest of some of our saloon keepers for selling to drunken men if it is repeated.

—Rev. J. S. Sherrill, of Minneapolis, editor of the North Western Presbyterian, preached at the Presbyterian church here last Sunday forenoon and at Maple Plain in the afternoon.

--The Fair last Saturday was unusually well attended. Milk cows seemed to find a ready sale at from $25 to $30. Horses were more plenty than purchasers, at reduced prices. There will be another fair on Saturday, November 11.

—Prof. Geo. Aiton, High school inspector is, we understand, expected here in a couple of weeks, to ascertain how near our school is to being up to the grade required of high schols. It is to be hoped that we are pretty nearly there.

—P. B. Burns, a son-in-law of Carl Lique, of Holliwood, met his death by falling between the cars of a freight train on the west side of Crow river at this place on Monday night, while on his way to Willmar in search of work. His wife and mother from Holliwood came down and removed the remains to Watertown on Tuesday.

—Some of our citizens think it would be highly proper to hold an inquest where a man is found dead on the railroak track. Two have been found near this place within a year the last one this week. If no investigation whatever is to be made all a murderer would have to do to cover up his crime would be to carry his victim onto a track after he had killed him.

—The apportionment of school funds from the state has been made at the rate of $3 per head for all children in attendance. At this rate if the children who attended the porochial school here were attending the public school our district would be considerably the gainer and the families who send to the private school would have that much assistace toward defraying educational expenses of their families.

—One of Prof. Dewey's pupils called in on Monday and suggested to us that "if the council would appropriate a $100 for them to hire an instructor he thought the Delano school might get up a pretty good foot ball team." We are of opinion that the city fathers have no more right to hire foot ball teachers than to hire brass band teachers. Not a bit. Not but teaching a class in this fashionable accomplishment is worth considerable money.

—Delano has ample material for a first-class Literary Society, and the questions of vital importance to our nation now being discussed all over the land are interesting enough to furnish a chance to our wood-be orators and future statesmen to practice up against the day when they may be called upon to take a still more active part in settling some of them. We also have a good public hall which will furnish a fine place for meetings. Let's have a literary society this winter.

—Our school grounds are proving altogether inadequate to the wants of the present pupils who indulge in the fashionable games of the day, foot ball, base ball, etc, etc. The green grass around the the terrace that has been set and wattered with such care is daily being tramped to a level with the street, and neighbors complain that intrusions onto their premises in search og a stray ball are too frequent. More level play ground is demanded if our young folks are to be sufficiently educated in the leading University features to enable them to hold up the credit of the Delano High school.

—The clerks in the City Grocery are having considerable sport at the expense of a neighboring business man who thought he knew enough about other people's business to wait on himself in a grocery store. A new young lady clerk had lately been employed and the business man came in in the evening for some kerosene. The new clerk said she was not familiar with that part of the business yet, so the busines man volenteered to help himself. The new clerk held the light while "old business" drawed the "oil" from one of the numerous barrels and paying cash hurried himself home to fill the lamps. Much to his surprise the oil was of very poor quality, and the lights uncommonly dim. In the morning he thought he would use the oil for kindling so he saturated some wood with a bountiful supply of the "poor stuff" and very cautiously applied match after match in hopes of soon having a nice warm breakfast. After mature deliberation he concluded to return the petroleum to the City Grocery and very valiantly marched in feeling a good deal as almost any hungry man would and demanded an explanation. Mr. Green examined the "oil" and thought it rather highly colored, and asked the purchaser where he got it? "Here of course." "I never sold you any such oil as that." "Come," says old business, "and I'll show you where I got it" and he proudly marched into the back room followed by the meek little merchant and pointed out the "identical" barrel from which he had drawn the oil himself. "Why," says Mr. Green, proudly, "That's vinegar." Old biz very meekly replied: "Oh!"

Personals.

County Cullings.

The County Attorney has been requested by the requisite number of tax payers to take an appeal on the Mill Creek bridge, on the ground that there was never any contract. —Journal.

The last democratic tariff—that of 1857—bankrupted the U. S. treasury. That's why the people feel some anxiety about the next one.—Buffalo Journal.

What's making the people feel so much anxiety about the present one—a republican tariff—the highest ever known?

Senator Eaton, who is a member of the Pine Land Committee investigating for frauds thinks they have found some; and thinks that additional reports sent in by purchasers of timber, who have become frightened at the investigation exceeds the whole amount appropriated for the use of the committee. It must be a self supporting committee, at least. We would not be surprised if a committee of one or more could support itself for a short time in the same manner looking up inadvertances of the state Senate of which the honorable gentleman is a member.

The GAZETTE and Eagle are at logger heads over the village council of Delano having voted $100 out of the village treasury to hire an instructor for the band. The Eagle approves of this action and the GAZETTE condemns it. It does seem as though such an expenditure of public money is unjustifiable and wholly without any sanction of law. On the same principles we do not see why the villge council could not vote public village funds to employ a music teacher for the public or parochial schools or a teacher in book keeping or penmanship. The Gazette seems to be on the right side this time.—Buffalo Journal.

The M. E. Conference, at Minneapolis under Bishop W. X. Ninde, com completed its labors on Monday evening. Changes in which Wright county people are interested are as follows: The new presiding elder for the Minneapolis district is J. F. Chaffee. Annandale, G. N. Kiniston; Buffalo and Rockford, D. M. Shannon; Delano and Montrose, J. W. Powell; Howard Lake, J. E. Henderson; Monticello, C. M. Heard; Clearwater, W. H. Barkaloo; Elk River and Otsego, D. S. Higgins.

Presiding Elder John Stafford goes to the Mankato district. Norwood and Lester Prairie, F. E. Higgins; Watertown, B. E. Sherwin; Long Prairie, B. F. Kephart; Wyoming, Noah Lathrop; Alber Lea, Alfred Cressy; Faribault, J. J. Crist; Morristown, Levi Gleason; Waterville and Elysian Jabez Blackhurst. Forest City, Mannana and Union Grove, L. E. Fairbanks.

Rev. John Doran was changed from effetcive to superannuate relation.

At the North German Conference in St. Paul Sept. 2, the following were chosen for the Minneapolis district: Presiding Elder, W. F. Fritz. Brownton, Gotthilf Raible; Clearwater, G. R. Fritz; Crow River, William Mass.

Agricultaral Society.

The annual meeting of members of the society was well attended. There was no important business except the election of officers for 1894, which resulted as follows: President H. C. Bull, of Cokato; vice-president, A. W. Hoar, Monticello; secretary, H. M. Dickey, Howard Lake; treasurer, Lemuel McGraw, Howard Lake; executive committee, Carl Luhmann chairman, H. F. Merriman, W. D. Thompson, Daniel Mast, H. W. Holbrook. The executive committee are all of Howard Lake and vicinity, except Daniel Mast of Monticello.--Howard Lake Herald.

Among Our Exchanges.

Seven tin plate mills resumed work last week. Democratic organs will not make a note of the fact, however. —Minneapolis Journal.

The democratic organs will likely be heard from about a week after the Ohio election announcing their closing down again.

After some routine business last night the park board discussed the question of using the park board funds to aid the unimployed. Mr. Wheelock favored using $50,000, but Mr. Horton thought it illegal. Mr. Wheelock said he should call a special meeting to consider it.—Globe.

TOPEKA, Oct. 8.—Democrats of Kansas are abandoning fusion with either party. In Franklin county, Friday, fusion received a set back by straight-out nominations. Cleveland was indorced and a free coinage resolution defeated. For the first time in four years Lyon county democrocy put up a full party ticket. The democrats of Saline county also severed connection with the populists and will try to win with a straight ticket.--Minneapolis Times.

Which Buffalo Lawyer is It?

By some strange chance there floated onto our exchange table a copy of the American Economist, which, under this good name, seeks to spread the doctrine of waste by protection. We find a lot of letters in it in which the writers give their reasons why McKinley should be elected governor of Ohio. Singularly, few of these are from Ohio, and the most are from states where wishes and reasons will be ineffective. But among the letters is one from a Minnesota lawyer residing in Buffalo, who fires a batch of reasons which scatter all over history and the world like a charge of birdshot out of an old muzzle-loader. He is especially desirous of the election of the diminutive Napoleon because the democrats want to flood the country with cheap foreign made goods, and because they want to take away protection to American labor. We will wager dollars to doughnuts than when this doughty lawyer wants to get a legal printed in his home newspaper he makes the poor printer divide fees with him, and when he wants a suit of clothes he doesn't give a continental whether the goods were made here or abroad, provided only that they are the cheapest he can get. And the fellow is so ignorant that he favors the election of a man who gave us a tariff averaging over 50 per cent when the latest national convention of his party demanded a tariff sufficient to equalize the difference in labor cost only, which averages 18 per cent. But then, if all republicans knew the truth and stood by it, where would that party be?—Globe.

HOW A PUZZLE WAS SOLVED.

When you want a certain article, you want the best make of that article, don't you?

But how to determine which make is best is what puzzles you, isn't it?

And when the puzzle is solved for you, by authority which cannot be questioned, you are pleased, aren't you?

And you would like to hear of one puzzle that has been solved for the people of the whole world, wouldn't you?

Well, we will tell you about that very puzzle, and its solution.

At the Universal Exposition of 1889 at Paris, France, the best sewing machines of the world, including those of America, were in competition. They were passed upon by a jury composed of the best foreign mechanical experts, two of whom were the leading sewing machine manufacturers of France.

This jury, after exhaustive examination and tests, adjudged that the Wheeler & Wilson machines were the best of all, and awarded that company the highest prize offered, the GRAND PRIZE, giving other companies only gold, silver and bronze medals.

The French Government, as a further recognition of superiority, decorated Mr. Nathaniel Wheeler, president of the company, with the Cross of the Legion of Honor, the most prized honor of France.

That is how the puzzle of the best sewing machine in the world was fully solved by the most competent authority in the world in favor of the No. 9 and No. 12 Wheeler & Wilson machines.

The No. 9, for family use, and the No. 12, for manufacturing uses, are the best in the world to-day.

And now, when you want a sewing machine, if you do not get the best, it will be your own fault.

Ask your sewing machine dealer for the No. 9 Wheeler & Wilson machine, and if he does not keep them, write to us for descriptive catalogue, prices and terms.

Agents wanted in all unoccupied territory.

THE LAWYERS' WAYS.

I've been list'nin' to them lawyers
In the court house up the street,
And I've come to the conclusion
That I'm most completely beat.
Fust one feller rose to argy,
And he boldly waded in
As he dressed the tremblin' prisoner
In a coat o' deep dyed sin.

Why, he painted him all over
In a hue o' blackest crime,
And he smeared his reputation
With the thickest kind o' crime,
Till I found myself a wand'rin',
In a misty way and dim,
How the Lord had come to fashion
Such an awful man as him.

Then the other lawyer started,
And with brimmin' tearful eyes,
Said his client was a martyr
That was brought to sacrifice.
And he gave to that same prisoner
Every blessed human grace,
Till I found the light o' virtue
Fairly shinin' from his face.

Then I owned 'at I was puzzled
How such things could rightly be:
'An' this aggrevatin' question
Seems to be a puzzlin' me.
So, will some one please inform me,
An' this mystery unroll—
How an angel an' a devil
Can persess the self-same soul?
—Paul Dunbar, in Chicago Record.

THE St. Paul news now announces itself independent.

THE U. S. Senate, tied down by the rules they claim, is making a laughing stock of itself for the civilized world.

OUR country still lives notwithstanding the fact that the Senate has been setting on the John Sherman Silver bill for more than six weeks.

THE Press, of New Paynesville, appeared this morning among our exchanges, for the first time. It is under the management of Geo. R. Stephens and bids fair to take care of itself among the papers of the state.

SENATOR HILL, of New York, is trying to have the Senate rules changed so that a majority can rule. If the Seate has a right to vote on a motion to change its rules it must have the same right to vote on the repeal of the Sherman bill.

FROM the Pioneer Press we learn that "Major Baldwin threatens to become famous. He is on record as having declared that he would rather resign his seat in Congress than recommend the appointment of any man to an office for which he knew him to be unfit." If Major Baldwin ever said so he expressad the right sentiments but we would advise him to become better acquainted with a few of his applicants before recommending them for appointments.

THE Governor of our State, Knute Nelson, is accused of having given utterance to some swear words when asked for an explanation of the Meeker county Treasurer suspension affairs, by a newspaper repopter. This adds nothing to the dignity of our state. It is about time Minnesota was able to support a chief executive officer who could express himself in language sufficiently forcible without breaking over the bounds of good society. Don't swear, Governor, even if things don't go exactly as you would have them!

That Majority.

The fact that although in a majority in the United States Senate, the Democrats do not pass the repeal of the John Sherman silver bill, although most of the Republicans are assisting them looks strange. That a small minority should effectually block the wheels of this great government for weeks and months, perhaps for ever, is a very strange thing. That a few men interested in the silver producing states should, in the interest of this one particular metal, prevent the law making powers from repealing an obnoxious clause in a compromise bill which a large majority in both houses of Congress, the Chief Executive backed up by a large majority of the voters in the two political parties of the country is an anomoly hard to see the necessity of. Certainly the law making powers need a governor on their engine. Something to regulate the motion, that the machine don't run away and burst itself up, but it seems as if the governor should not be heavier than the steam can raise. It ought not to prevent the engine from running. The minority should be heard. All due respect should be paid to its grievances. But when its leaders resort to such tactics as calling for a roll call to see if there is a qnorum to do business and then themselves refrain from voting that there may be none, in order to carry their points, it does look as if they had about exhausted their rights, used up their privileges and as if it were time to do a little business for the country; to pass the bill repealing the John Sherman silver law. It is necessary in the machinery of a great government like this to have plenty of gearing. To have checks enough so as to prevent any hasty legislation but it looks at this time, with Congress and the Senate, constituted as they are, and both fovoring the passage of this particular bill, and a President of the United States ready to sign it, as if the bill ought to be passed. It seems as if with a Congress chosen every two years, a Senate chosen ever six years and a President chosen every four years that each being a check on the other sufficient safe guards for ordinary purposes had been provided for, without depriving an honorable body as the United States Lower House or Senate is supposed to be, of the privilege of passing a bill that a majority of its members favor.

Diphtheria.

One of the most prevalent and fatal diseases with which Minnesotans have to contend is diphtheria. It is considered a children's disease, and most of the victims are young, but it does not always confine itself to children, often the older members of families are attacked. At the present time it is raging in several parts of the state and has appeared in our own township. It is usually sudden in its outset, the children complaining of headache, often severe feverishness, chills, nausea, vomiting, swelling behind the angles of the lower jaw, loss of appetite, sore throat. These symptoms may or may not all be present. Any of them is sufficient to place the parent on guard when diphtheria is the neighborhood. Some time the disease appears in a more insideous from a general indisposition, peevishness, loss of appetite may be premonatory symptoms for several day. The treatment is not always the same. Some need local applications to the throat and rapidly recover; others seem to be so overcome at first as not to recover from the first shock. Some linger for ten days or two weeks to finally die by inanition, or for the want of nourishment. Patients who take plenty of milk from the first and have proper care at the start usually do best. Fresh air but no draft to chill the patient is a good thing. The temperature of the room should be as noar equally kept as can be. The patient should be kept as quiet as possible. All cases as soon as discovered should be placed in a room away from the balance of the family and every precaution used to prevent others from taking the disease. Quarantine laws are very strict and should be judiciously enforced in all cases.

Pessimistic.

The Waverly Tribune takes exceptions to our advice to "each voter to post himself; to secure an encyclopedia, a political almanac, or other useful books, and find out from an unbiased and non-partizan standpoint where he desires to stand on all the live questions of the day," and to take the papers, and to post up generally, before he comes to vote. The Tribune says, "we think that the remedy is of too mild a nature," and advises us to "read the riot act to them vigorously and if they refuse to heed you, strike out from the sholder and create a stir among the dry bones. In our opinion there's very little government purity to uphold and all the 'unalloyed democracy' that you wish to fire at them should be rubbed in with pepper and salt." It looks to us as if the Tribune editor had been "calamity howling" so long that it had become a sort of second nature to him, and now he can't wait a few days for the head howlers at Washington to howl themselves out so that the democrats can, according to the prescribed rules and regulations, of the Senate get a vote on the repeal bill. You must remember that the Chief Executive of the country advocated waiting another month before calling congress together, but finally yielded to the general clamor to call it thirty days sooner. Had his first impressions been followed out most of the debating might have been done out side the Capitol city, and at no expense to the Government. "Large bodies move slowly" and it will probably come out all right. "All's well that ends well." As for reading the riot act it looks as if that had been done sufficiently And, instead of continually dinning in the ears of our readers that the country is going to the dogs, it is better to advise them to look into things themselves, for, from among them may arise the ideas that will deprive the dogs of their savory meal. Some of the best minds are raised from the farm and the work shop, and we still insist that these people should take pains to do a little thinking for themselves, and not like a flock of sheep, run themselves to death following some old bell weather, and a black one at that, who, frightened at his own shadow, starts off on a tangent, gaming impetus at each jump until he lands the whole flock at the bottom of some yawning abyss that could have been crossed in safety had they but taken a little more time to seek the bridge. In regard to the purity of the Government we are sorry the editor has so little faith in it, and hope he may think better of it soon.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

(From our Regular Correspondent.)

WASHINGTON, D. C., Oct. 13, 1893.

Senator Voohees began his attempt to force a vote on his bill for the unconditional repeal of the purchasing clause of the Sherman silver law, on Wednesday, by compelling the Senate to remain in continuous session. It was clear from the beginning that the margin over and above a quorum, which the followers of Mr. Voorhees were compelled to keep on the floor constantly, was entirely too small, even if half of them were not republicans who had not pledged themselves to any extra efforts, to give him any reasonable hope of tiring out the opponents of the bill, who could get all the rest they needed, as they only kept two or three Senators on the floor at a time, one to speak and the others to demand a call of the Senate whenever the number present fell below a quorum. That being the situation it seems to your correspondent that the only real reason for holding this continuous session is to convince those outside of Congress who have been so strenuously insisting upon conditional repeal, and of the necessity for a compromise. There was some talk early in the week of adjourning Congress it the continued session of the Senate failed to reach a vote, but the idea was not popular with the Senators, and it looks now as though some disposition will certainly be made of the silver question before there is an adjournment, and that it will be a compromise which can be accepted without any sacrifice of principle by all the democratic Senators, although Senator Voorhees is very positive in saying that he will take no part in a compromise.

Everybody in Washington knew that the number of what are usually spoken of as "office-holding families," the members of which were never known to engage in any other employment than working for the Government, was considerable, but no one dreamed its actual extent until Representative Dockery this week presented to the House a partial report of the joint committee which is investigating departmental methods and work. More than 4000 families have two or more members in office, and some as many as seven, eight and nine. More than half of the 17,599 United States employes in this city are furnished by these 4000 families, and yet there is a rule against the employment of two members of the same family. No one was more surprised at the figures in report than were the heads of the departments, and it can be stated to a certainty that they will not wait for legislation to reduce the number of one-family employes in their respective departments. To put it in popular language, these families have had a snap for a long time and will now be made to step down and out and give other people a chance.

The 99 majority by which the House passed the Tucker bill for the repeal of the federal election laws, promptly at the time designated for the vote when the bill was first taken up, was a great disappointment to the Republicans who had been presistent in circulating false stories about the existence of democratic dissatissaction with the bill and the difficulty there would be in getting a democratic quorum on the floor when the time came to vote. Every democratic member who was in Washington voted for the bill, and none were absent except from unavoidable causes. The democrats of the House believe in doing business and in doing it promptly, and their records up to this time have been unexcelled.

Representative McCreary's bill proposing an extension of six months in the time within which Chinese in this country may register, and other modifications in the Geary Chinese exclusion act, is now being considered by the House, where it has been given the right of way until disposed of. This bill, which Representative McCreary told the House was "in the interests of civilization and humanity," is a result of a request of the Chinese government made of Secretary Gresham by the new Chinese minister, who promised that all of the Chinamen now in the United States should register if the time was extended.

Senators and Representatives seem very much in earnest about providing for the erection of a new Government printing office, and fresh efforts are being made to determine upon the location of a site therefor. It is certainly to be hoped that the present efforts will succeed. A new building is a necessity.

There is not one word of truth in the sensational story sent out from here early this week saying that Secretary Gresham had asked Postmaster General Bissell to reinstate a dismissed republican postoffice official, stationed in Ohio, and had been refused.

Burn the grass and weeds along the fields, meadows, roads and fences, burn old straw piles and all kinds of litter. Do this work this fall, and why? To kill off the chinch bugs. F. E. Latham will bring an action for damages against the Great Northern for Chas. E. Merriweather, of Clarksville, Tenn. He is traveling salesman for a tobacco house of which he is a partner, and Friday last boarded the freight at Waverly for Howard Lake. He has only one arm and is otherwise crippled, so made his way back to the way car, which was quite a distance below the depot, early, and was unable to get a ticket as the agent was out attending to freight. He tendered his fare to the conductor, who demanded ten cents extra for cash fare. Mr. Merriweather refused to pay this and was put off the train about half way between here and Waverly. The suit will be brought in Wright county.—Howard Lake Herald.

A FEW WORDS FROM THE WIFE.

"Yes, I'll economize, my dear,
Of course you know I will;
I feel that money has been scarce,
And that it is so still.
My bonnets shall be very plain,
My dresses very few;
Still I must dress becomingly,
In compliment to you.
But you must help in this as well—
This notion's not mamma's—
You really should stop smoking, dear,
Those fifty-cent cigars,
And give up various 'little games'
That you have had in hand;
I don't propose to do it all,
I'll let you understand."

An Enemy to Business and Society.

The Knights of Pythias in Minnesota henceforth will not admit saloonkeepers as members. One after another respectable fraternities are shutting out the venders of intoxicants from their ranks. It is evident that the public opinion is slowly moving against the saloon. Employers in all lines of business are coming to exact total abstinance in employes. The very spirit of competition, so characteristic of this age, makes against the drinking custom, for a man cannot be intemperate these days and keep up the race. Let it be known that a business man is becoming intemperate and people watch to see him fall behind. Slowly, gradually, it is getting into public mind that the saloon is an enemy to business and society.—Methodist Herald.

A Caution.

Will some boy answer? Let us hear from an L. T. L. whether this enemy has a hold upon him and what he thinks about him. MRS. SOULE.

FIFTY-THIRD CONGRESS.

Extra Session.

WEDNESDAY, Oct. 11.—In the senate a bill to pension the widow of the late Gen. John M. Corse at the rate of $100 per month was reported and placed on the calendar. The silver purchase repeal bill was discussed and it was announced by Senator Voorhees that the senate would continue in session until the measure was disposed of. In the house a joint resolution providing for a recess of congress from October 14 to November 1 was referred to the committee on rules. The bill to amend the Geary Chinese exclusion bill was taken up and the author of the measure, Mr. McCreary (Ky.), spoke in its favor.

THURSDAY, Oct. 12.—After a continuous session of forty hours the senate adjourned at 1:45 this morning, and thus the bill for the unconditional repeal of the silver-purchase law was carried down to defeat. During the debate on the 12th an amendment to the bill was offered by Senator Harris (dem.) which provides for the coinage of all the silver bullion in the treasury into full legal-tender dollars at the rate of 3,000,000 per month, and it was thought this amendment would lead to a final compromise. In the house the McCreary bill to amend the Chinese registration and exclusion act was discussed and many petitions were presented asking for the repeal of the Geary law.

FRIDAY, Oct. 13.—In the senate several amendments to the silver-purchase repeal bill were reported. A resolution to change the rules in reference to compelling the attendance of absent senators went over. In answer to an inquiry as to moneys borrowed by the government since March, 1885, the secretary of the treasury sent word that no money had been borrowed. In the house the McCreary bill to amend and modify the Geary Chinese registration and exclusion act was further discussed. A bill was passed increasing from 75 to 100 the number of army officers who may be detailed for military instruction at educational institutions.

SATURDAY, Oct. 14.—In the senate various important amendments to the rules were offered. Senator Jones addressed the body in opposition to the silver purchase repeal bill, after which the senate adjourned. In the house the session was occupied in a discussion of the Geary Chinese law.

MONDAY, Oct. 16.—In the senate a bill was introduced to provide for the control of the Union Pacific and Central Pacific railroads until the debts due and to fall due to the government are fully paid up and secured. The silver purchase bill was further discussed. In the house the bill to amend the Chinese exclusion act was discussed and finally passed by a vote of 167 to 9.

MINNESOTA DAY.

The North Star State Celebrates at the Fair.

At Least Twenty Thousand of Her Citizens Were Present—A Fine Program Carried Out in Spite of the Weather.

Minnesota day was a success. Competent persons estimate that at least 20,000 citizens of the North Star commonwealth gathered within the walls of the White City on the shores of Lake Michigan Oct. 13 to celebrate what 34 years of marvelous growth under statehood had done for Minnesota.

The morning opened cold, with threats of rain. Notwithstanding inauspicious weather, people early thronged the state building and all Minnesotans were determined to make the day a decided success. Promptly at 11 o'clock the 1st regiment, under command of Col. Shandrew, marched in at the Fifty-seventh street entrance. The appearance of the state militia was superb. The uniform and accoutrements were bright and apparently as new as a dollar. The carriage of the marching men was such as to provoke comment that the regiment made the best appearance of any militia regiment which has appeared on the fair grounds. The militia, 300 strong, was followed by 50 carriages. In the front carriages were Gov. Nelson and ex-Govs. Ramsey and Marshall, and president Montfort. After the procession stopped for a short time in front of the state building, the auxiliary board and board of world's fair managers joined the throng in carriages and the procession moved south to Festival hall, where the exercises took place. Notwithstanding the disagreeable weather, the building, capable of seating 10,000 people was comfortably filled. On the stage were seated, besides Gov. Nelson and ex-Govs. Marshall, Ramsey and Austin, the national commissioners, national auxiliary board, state board, state auxiliary, speakers of the day, state officials and legislators, national board and ladies' auxiliary board, thus conferring an honor on the North Star state not given to any other state upon their day of celebration there.

The 3d regiment was seated in the center of the great hall with the state banner of Minnesota conspicuously displayed. It presented a brilliant appearance.

One conspicuous feature notable as the crowd sat down was the fine appearance of Gov. Nelson's staff in military uniforms, seated upon the stage.

The meeting was promptly opened by D. A. Montfort, who made the introductory speech. He touched upon the practical and poetical ideas of the early discoverers. He said that had DeSoto come to Minnesota he would have found a better land than ever the Spanish trod upon; the land occupied by 1,500,000 people from every nation distinguished for intelligence and patriotism. He closed by extending a hearty welcome to all the peoples of all nations who attended the celebration. He thanked the national board for their presence and also the press of Minnesota for their aid to the Minnesota state board.

Gov. Nelson's speech was largely statistical, well received and was delivered in a voice which could be heard in all parts of the hall. He was received with an ovation and frequently applauded, especially when he touched upon the character of Minnesota's resources and people.

The program was carried through, and, although long, maintained its interest to the end. The speeches of Northrop, Tousley, Stevens and Towne were received with great applause. After President Northrop had finished his speech, about 20 students of the University of Minnesota gave the college yell, waking up echoes of the great building from garret to dome. Then followed Tousley, who made the grandest speech yet made on the exposition grounds.

Right after the literary program at Festival hall another ceremony took place, namely, the presentation of the gold mounted sword, by his regiment, to Col. Shandrew. The sword is inscribed as follows: "Presented to Col. Shandrew, by 3d regiment infantry, Minnesota National Guard."

The state building presented a wealth of flowers and bright colors in celebration of all that the North Star state represents at the Columbian exposition. The decoration surpassed in richness of materials and in brightness and cheeriness of effect anything of a similar nature attempted by the states on their fete days. Flowers met the gaze everywhere and greeted the visitor from the most unexpected niches and corners. There were potted plants and cut flowers, most of them from Minnesota's native heath. The great floral centerpiece, which attracted the gaze of all, was the huge bank of cut flowers, 4x2½ feet, with the inscription, "1858. Minnesota. 1894," placed over the spot where Gov. Nelson received. This was flanked on either side by the colors of the state and nation. It reminded the visitors of the unequaled fertility and richness of Minnesota soil, which blossoms beneath the hand of the husbandman like the valley of the Nile in the days when it was the granary of the world.

The day Minnesota had her celebration was the adoption of her constitution, Oct. 13th, 1857.

Gold.

A large number of contests have been filed on timber and stone lands in the Duluth land district. All these contests are on lands in township 71, ranges 21 and 22, lying along the Canadian boundary on Rainy lake. Complaints in these contests disclose more facts in connection with the lately alleged gold discoveries in that section than have heretofore come to light.

The contestants state that all the lands they claim have been taken under the timber and stone act, and that in taking lands under this act the original settlers have perjured themselves, and they therefore ask the government to allow their entries of homesteads. In taking land under the timber and stone act the settler must swear that the land is more valuable for its stone and wood than for any other purpose, and that it is neither agricultural nor mining land. The homesteaders, who have jumped thirty or forty claims there, allege that these lands are valuable for gold only, and that they have been taken simply for that purpose. They say valuable deposits have been found of free milling gold, running several hundred dollars to the ton.

Mining Operations.

David Sick, of Grand Rapids, Mich., who recently took a large stripping contract from the Biwabik Ore company, is already on the ground and is making extensive preparations for an active winter's work. He will work all winter if the weather is not too severe for the workmen, and a knowledge of this fact has caused a better feeling. Allison Bros., prominent contractors of Baltimore, were there recently with P. L. Kimberley and W. L. Wallis, of the Biwabik Ore company. They are figuring on another large contract for stripping, and the outlook is that at least four contractors will work large forces of men all winter at the Biwabik.

A New State.

A wealthy Wisconsin man is working on the scheme of forming a state which will embrace the head of the lake region and include in its boundaries the cities of Superior and Duluth, and the vast pine and mineral lands which surround on every side. It will be named Superior and have the two cities, or under the new state one city, of Duluth and Superior for the capitol. The proposed state will include the country from the Brule to the St. Croix river, and extend to the northern boundary of Wisconsin, west of Brule, and will take in all the northern portion of Minnesota, so as to embrace the iron ranges in the state.

She Can Go to School.

Judge Searle, in court at St. Cloud, has rendered a decision holding that the writ of peremptory mandamus should issue requiring Joseph Carhart, president of the normal school, to admit Miss Mary Smallen as a student. She was excluded as coming under the normal board rule prohibiting students not passing the 10th grade of a city high school to attend normal. The rule in question was passed as a compromise between the normal board directors and the board of public education, three years ago, and is a blow to the public high school.

Can This Be True?

The short change racket was successfully worked on Charles Kleber, a St. Louis traveling man, on a short line train coming into Minneapolis from St. Paul. The swindler hurried up to his victim with the usual story of having to send off a sum of money in a letter at once, and he must have the bill changed to get the right amount. The traveling man was at first reluctant, but finally handed over $50, for which he received four $1 bills in return. Kleber reported his loss of $46 to the police.

Was Not a Man.

A young woman, 22 years of age, whose maiden name is Hedstrom, but who is better known as "Cowboy Pete," was arrested and arraigned in St. Paul, charged with masquerading in male attire. She formerly lived in Minneapolis, and has been arrested several times for the same offense. She prefers male costume, she says, as she can make more money as a man than as a woman. Her sex was discovered recently by the man for whom she was working. He is a dairyman, who has a place in North St. Paul.

Burned to Death.

Mrs. Mary Ann Olson, of Austin, was burned to death while her son was at the barn. The day before she upset a lamp and the oil ran over her clothing, which took fire. Her son, who was present, extinguished the flames before she was badly burned. How her clothing caught fire the last time is unknown, unless it was from the stove. Mrs. Olson was formerly an inmate of the Rochester insane asylum, but was discharged a few years ago.

A Big Shortage.

The experts who have been investigating the books of F. E. Krakenbuhl, the missing insurance swindler of Duluth, have rounded up an over issue of 2,000 shares of stock of the Lackawanna Iron company. All schemes known to the forger's trade are apparent in this over issue. The company has issued a call to all stockholders to turn in their stock for a reissue. Not until then can the full extent of the fraud be known.

Division Explained.

The plan to divide Polk county is not understood, judging from reports of Twin City papers. The three petitions filed were the result of a combination between the three sections to divide the county and make four out of Polk. The fact that the petition of proposed Columbia county was filed first has no significance. The lines of the proposed new counties do not conflict in the least. At the election which will decide the matter it is expected that the three districts in the proposed new counties will vote solidly for each other—a mutual agreement and understanding to that effect being in force.

PINE LAND FRAUDS.

The Committee Makes Public Some of the Testimony.

The Names of the Witnesses Are Withheld, but they Seem to Throw Considerable Light on the Subject.

The committee appointed by the last legislature to investigate pine land sales have completed their labors and report. The testimony is in several cases quite drastic, as the following excerpts will show.

A witness who has been in the business of surveying and estimating pine lands for 35 years, stated that he was familiar with section 36, township 42 and range 27. He had run lines through two sides of it, although he had not made an estimate. This section was sold to William Sauntry for $2 per 1,000 feet at a private sale. There is no record in the surveyor general's office that it was put up for sale at auction. The record shows that there were 5,991 logs cut, scaling 719,430 feet. Mr. Sauntry sold these logs to Henry Webster for $4 per 1,000. The witness believed that the logs should have been sold for $5, as there was little or no expense attached to hauling. In the fall of 1888, timber in this district sold for $5 per 1,000, and very little sold below $4. The witness then stated that a purchase of pine was made by Donahue Bros. and there was no record of it in the office of the surveyor general. The witness had never known pine of so good a quality and so well located to sell for such a small figure. He believed it to be the custom at public sales to bid high with the intention of making up the difference in fraudulent returns, and he cited an instance. A certain section 16 had been partially burned, and a permit was secured from Capt. Braden, then state auditor, to cut it. The witness was selected to scale the timber and he ran lines on two sides of the section. Witness was told that the logs were partly from the school section (116) adjacent and partly from somewhere else. He was skeptical, but scaled the logs and found that less than one-fourth bore evidence of having been burned. He returned his bill to Capt. Braden and the bill was for over three times the number of logs on the bank. He also testified that several similar cases had come under his observation, where purchasers of timber from state school lands had purchased small acreages adjoining and when the logs were cut claimed that portions were cut on their own land.

The attention of the witness was called to sections 16, 14 and 27, and he swore that he was familiar with them. They contained, to the best of his knowledge, about 1,000,000 feet of white pine. He had been informed that Smith & Co. had purchased the land. He told the committee that the pine should go for $4.50, or that he knew of one man who would pay $5 for it. He testified that D. H. Robbins had informed him that certain parties intended to buy sections 23 and 25 as state school lands. They did this and cut anywhere on government land. The witness stated that Mr. Mulvey bought land at $32.50 per acre, but he had not consulted the records. He thought that several others had bought school lands for a very low figure, and if the accounts were balanced the school fund would have several million dollars to its credit that it does not now have. He advised the committee to investigate the sale of all school lands cut within the last five years and he did not believe that one honest transaction could be found, with the exception of the purchase of Mulvey & Co. on section 10. When school lands had been put up for auction, except in the Second district, the buyers would not bid against each other. They got together and apportioned the lands and fixed the price.

The next witness stated that he had been engaged in exploring since '69. The reports submitted by him showed that everything that was merchantable had been sold and that timber had been cut on other sections because the quarter post could not be found. In the first instance cited by him, ash and other hard woods worth $3.50 per thousand had been sold for 30 cents.

Another witness, with an experience of 20 years as an explorer, stated that on section 36, town 56, range 26, there was reported to have been cut last winter 288,380 feet in saw log timber. He went there in September of this year and after running the lines carefully, he found that 2,860 trees, scaling 785,040 feet, had been cut, and he believed that nearly 900,000 feet had been cut besides 2,452 ties never reported. The value of these ties, as fixed by statute, was 5 cents apiece and the lumber $2 per thousand. It was sold to the H. C. Akeley company and the stumpage record in this particular section showed no cutting done. All the record against the section is 100,000 feet sold to the Akeley company for $2 per thousand and the balance of the record was "leased for minerals." The permit extended to '94, when all of the lumber will be cut.

State News in Brief.

WHAT IS THE OLD RELIABLE?

It is the oldest and most reliable railway in operation between the Twin Cities (St. Paul and Minneapolis) and Chicago—the CHICAGO, MILWAUKEE & ST. PAUL.

Its train service is more frequent than that of any other line and unequaled in point of excellence, comfort, speed and safety.

It runs FIVE complete and handsomely equipped passenger trains from the Twin Cities to Chicago each day—four of which pass through Winona, La Crosse, Portage, Watertown and Milwaukee, the other passing through Austin, Dubuque and Savanna.

It is the only road running trains lighted by electricity and has the exclusive use of the famous electric reading lamp in each berth. All trains thoroughly heated by steam, doing away with the old time car stove.

It runs the latest library buffet smoking cars, the latest private compartment cars, elegant drawing room sleeping cars, and free reclining chair cars on night trains, and parlor drawing room chair cars on day trains. Dining cars, (the finest in the west) are attached to each train, serving first class meals at convenient hours.

Everybody has heard of the renowned vestibuled, electric lighted, steam heated limited of "THE MILWAUKEE." This is the most thoroughly and luxuriously equipped train running between the Twin Cities and Chicago. No extra charge. Leaves Minneapolis 7:30 and St. Paul 8:10 every evening; arrives Chicago 9:30 following morning.

The enormous traffic constantly carried over this road between Chicago and the Northwest has necessitated and resulted in one of the most solid and substantial roadbeds in this country, which, together with its unrivalled passenger train equipment and service, insures to its patrons the highest degree of safety and ease.

Now is the time to visit the World's Fair—the grandest opportunity the American people ever have had of seeing the world in miniature. See that your tickets read via "THE MILWAUKEE," and thus secure the best possible service, and unsurpassed accommodations—the very best to be obtained for your money.

ONE DAY IN A MOTHER'S LIFE.

How She Should Cultivate the Hygienic Side of Living.

There is no class of women under the sun who so need to be coached in regard to hygienic principles of rest as mothers. Ah, how heavily the cares of life press! so heavily that even the longest day in the year refuses to furnish that one precious half-hour which, if devoted to rest, will save a woman's good looks and vitality from premature decay.

Why, hygiene, these days, is as much of a fad as the souvenir spoon. Wise ones are very wide awake to this fact, and as a result those delicate nerve centers, upon which we women depend for womanly comeliness and sweetness of disposition, are, as far as possible, carefully looked after.

The sister does not live who can be at her best when fagged to death. No matter how clever the patents used to run the domestic machinery, the wear and tear tells, and in a way to bring to the front unpleasant little gusts of temper that might be easily controlled were it not for an overtaxed system.

Rest, if only thirty minutes a day. Give the tired nerves a chance to relax. This is a duty which you owe, not only to yourself, but your family as well.

Rest by all means—rest, if you have to filch from the day's duties the thirty minutes for repose. Surely, somewhere in between the flying hours they may be sandwiched.

What the average woman needs is a nook all her own, in which will be found the softest of divans, the downiest of head-rests, and a light so tempered that it will aid in wooing the god of sleep.

You need not hesitate to accept this luxurious idea on account of the cost, for even a slender purse can surely afford a plain little cot. This gives you a comfortable beginning. When a thin hair mattress and a pretty cheesecloth cozy have been added, along with a trio of denim-colored pillows, you will, I feel certain, have secured a very strong incentive for following my advice.

The home which owns the fairest, the freshest-looking, and the best-natured wife and mother, is always supplied with cozy corners. Now comes the question Do you know how to rest? Not one woman in a hundred does.

How often one hears the remark: "I do most of my thinking and planning when lying down."

Could anything be more exhausting? The trouble is this: Every moment given to socalled rest seems to the busy soul just so much time wasted.

There are so many tasks waiting their turn. And how they march and counter-march before the half-closed lids! Thump, thump! beat, beat! There is a regular trip-hammer movement going on in the base of the brain. It is discouraging—so discouraging that you give up the struggle.

What is needed is a first-class method for "shutting down the thought valves of the mind," as some one puts it. Close down your mind like a watergate. If you can not do this, place near your couch something that will turn your thoughts into a more soothing channel. A big, branching palm or a few cool, feathery ferns are restful. Banish, with what will-power you possess, harrassing details. The first trial will no doubt be a failure, but after a time you will gain better control of your mind, and some fine day you will discover that this little way-station along life's road is doing more for you than all the balms and lotions in the universe.—Dorothy Maddox, in Golden Days.

ONE has helped the world some if he has only varied the monotony.—Dallas News.

A BIRTHDAY IDYL.

'Tis fancy, but methinks a new-born year
Is like the wonder-ball
The German mother, with fond love and care,
Winds for her girlie small.

To stimulate the fraulein's diligence,
She deftrously conceals
Wee coins and trinkets of small consequence
Within each knot she reels.

Obedient the child sits at her stint,
Preferring play, no doubt,
And slowly knits, with frowns of discontent,
When, lo! a gift falls out.

Now pleased, indeed, she takes her work again,
The laughter in her eyes,
And knits the faster, so she may attain
Another glad surprise.

And to completion of the pretty work
Her willing fingers bend:
How does she know but the best gift of all
Is at the very end?

So, dearest maiden, as the coming year
Unfolds its months and days,
A thousand blessings, stored with prescient care,
Will beautify your ways.

More than a mother's is the love that hides
In this your wonder ball
Full many unexpected rare delights
Into your lap to fall.

And as each day drops out some sweet surprise,
Like the pleased little one,
Your quickened zeal in duty hers outvies,
Your work will faster run.

And when your years in the dear Father's love
Shall all have glided past,
The best, the choicest gift His hand inwove
You'll find, too, at the last.

A NEW PLAN.

The One Alice and Jenny Tried on Jack.

"Jack, when you go after the cows this evening won't you drive up Ned and Dandy? Alice and I want to take a ride to-morrow morning before breakfast."

"No, I won't. If you want the horses you can chase around the pasture after 'em yourself. I'm not going to do it."

"I didn't suppose you would! You are the meanest boy I ever saw."

"I'm no meaner than you were yesterday when you wouldn't turn the grindstone for me," and Jack walked away in the direction of the barn, whistling gayly, but not half so cheerful as he appeared to be. It isn't conducive to one's happiness to say sharp things, even if only to one's sister.

Jenny was shelling lima beans on the back porch, and tears of vexation and disappointment rose so thickly to her eyes that she couldn't see anything but a great green blur before her.

"He is just the most hateful boy!" she muttered. "He knows very well that Ned and Dandy wouldn't let me come anywhere near them, and I promised Alice she should have that ride to-morrow."

"Why, Jenny! You're crying! What's the matter?" asked Alice Hunt, coming out from the kitchen with the dipper in one hand and a tin pail in the other.

"Jack's so mean!" sobbed Jenny. "He says he won't get the horses for us to-night, just because I wouldn't turn the grindstone for him yesterday."

"Well, why didn't you turn it?"

"Because I had just got in the hammock to rest for half an hour. It was just before supper, when you were lying down. I knew he could wait as well as not until old Pete was ready to turn it."

Alice looked thoughtful, but made no rejoinder. She went to the well with the pail and filled it slowly from the big wooden bucket that stood on the curb, and after the pail was full she still stood there, absorbed in thought.

"Jenny," she said, when she came back to the porch and set the pail down on the bench, "I believe Jack is just like my brother Tom—and most boys, too. He won't do all the favors; but if you are kind and obliging to him he will be ashamed not to be so to you. Of course I don't know Jack very well, but I judge him by what I know of Tom. Now, let's try a plan—just to see how it works. Didn't Jack say yesterday that he wished he could have blackberry pie sometimes? Let's make him one for dinner."

"What! After he refused to drive the horses up? Indeed I won't!"

"Please do, Jenny, just to see what he will say."

"Oh, he wouldn't say anything—just eat it up; and we'd have to go down in the meadow to pick the blackberries in all this heat."

"Oh, well, it wouldn't take long, and we could carry an umbrella. Come, Jenny, try it, just because I ask you to."

So persuaded Jenny reluctantly consented, and Alice hurried upstairs to fill the pitchers and close all the window shutters. She and Jenny were keeping house while Jenny's mother and father were gone away on a fortnight's visit, and Alice had undertaken the chamber work. She had never been on a farm until now, so she found everything new and delightful, and utterly different from the seashore and mountain resorts at which her summers had heretofore been spent.

Jenny finished shelling the beans, and was ready to start for the blackberry path when Alice came downstairs again. They closed the kitchen, and, leaving old Towser on guard, went off, swinging their tin pails in their hands.

It was August, and the sun beat down upon the meadows with great force; but the two girls had plenty to talk about, and their fingers were nimble, so in an hour they had the pails full, and hadn't minded the heat very much, after all.

Jenny made the pies, and she put an extra amount of shortening in the crust, knowing Jack's liking for flaky pastry. She also prepared a pitcher of iced lemonade and poured a gobletful for Jack when he came in at noon, tired and warm, from his work in the field. He looked a good deal surprised at this unusual attention. He expected to find Jenny sulky or cross.

"That was very cold and nice," he said, as he set the goblet on the table, after slowly drinking its contents. "You make first-class lemonade, Jenny."

His words sent a thrill of joy through Jenny's heart. She no longer felt cross and unhappy, and laughed and talked as she put the dinner on the table.

Jack's eyes lighted up when he saw the blackberry pie.

"If this is the way you and Alice are going to cook for me, Jenny, I'm going to write to mother that she can just as well stay away a whole month," he said, laughing. And Jenny laughed, too, and cut the pie with inward rejoicing that she had followed her friend's good advice.

"What are you going to do this afternoon, Jack?" she asked, as her brother rose from the table.

"I don't know whether I had better keep on helping Pete in the field, or whitewash the orchard trees," Jack answered, after a moment's earnest reflection. "Those trees ought to have been whitewashed months ago; but I never had time to do it, and then it's a job I hate. I think I'll go to the field. Pete can't get along alone very well."

When he had gone Jenny turned to Alice with an eager look.

"Alice, what do you say to doing that whitewashing?" she asked. "There are not many trees, and we can put on old, ragged dresses, and cover our heads up, you know."

"Yes, let's do it," cried Alice. "It will be great fun! I never whitewashed anything in my life, though, and you'll have to show me how to do it."

"Oh, it's easy enough," said Jenny. "And one needn't be particular about trees, you know. I can mix the whitewash, for I've seen father do it a dozen times. The lime is down cellar; father bought it just before he went away."

Alice washed the dinner dishes while Jenny got the whitewash ready, and in an hour's time they were out in the orchard, hard at work. It was fun at first, but their arms soon began to ache and it required a great deal of zeal and determination to go on to the end. It was done at last, however, and the trunk of every tree in the picturesque little orchard was clothed in white Then, tired out, the girls went to the house to bathe and rest a little before getting supper.

Jack had to come past the orchard on his way from the field, and his astonishment may be imagined when he saw what had been done to the trees.

"What have you girls been up to?" he asked, when he came in to get the milk pails.

"We wanted to give you a surprise," Jenny said, her face beaming.

"Well, you certainly succeeded in doing it," rejoined Jack. "I don't know what's come over you, Jenny. If you keep on like this mother won't know you when she comes back. Perhaps it's having Alice here, though."

"Perhaps so," said Jenny, smiling. "Don't you want me to help you milk?"

"No; I can do it. You've done enough as it is," answered Jack, as he went out.

And Jenny felt so happy as she stepped around preparing supper that she laughed all to herself. She had forgotten all about Jack's refusal to drive up the horses from the pasture.

The next morning at five o'clock the girls were sleeping soundly when Jack knocked on the door of their room.

"Get up, if you're going to take that ride," he said. "The horses are ready at the gate."

The girls jumped up at once, and soon had on their habits. When they came down to the kitchen they found Jack had prepared breakfast. He had made coffee, fried potatoes and boiled some eggs.

"I thought you'd like to ride as far as Emmett's Grove," he said, "and you wouldn't want to hurry back to get breakfast; so I concluded to turn cook for this once."

"Jack! You're the best boy that ever lived!" cried Jenny, and with tears in her eyes she threw her arms impulsively around her brother, and gave him a hug.

When the girls had ridden out into the high road and had waved good-by to Jack, who stood at the gate watching them off, Jenny turned to Alice with a happy smile.

"I believe Jack and I are going to be the best kind of friends after this, Alice," she said. "And it's all owing to you. I didn't know how to treat him till you showed me."

"Oh, Jenny! I'm so glad," responded Alice, the tears rising to her soft blue eyes. "You see, one gains more by being kind than by being cross;" and then they touched their horses with their whips and went cantering down the wide, shady road.—Florence B. Hallowell, in Demorest's Magazine.

A CHEERFUL COMPANION.

The True Grit of a New England Woman in the West.

During a recent trip through the Dakotas, writes a correspondent, I came upon a woman who seemed to exemplify what may be termed true grit. It was near noon of a hot July day that I rode up to a cabin door to inquire my way. "Poverty and yet thrift!" I said to myself as I glanced about. A woman with a child in her arms answered my knock.

Something in her voice prompted me to say: "You're from New England?"

"Yes, but we've come west to grow up with the country," was her cheerful answer.

"You like Dakota?"

"Yes, or I shall when we get started," she replied. "We've been here three years. The first season the frost killed the wheat. The next year 'twas the drought spoilt fifty acres of as fine wheat as I ever looked on. 'Twas hard, for we had to mortgage a part of the farm, to keep above board. We've got a good crop in this year, but what'll happen we can't tell," she concluded, with a smile.

"You keep up a brave heart," I remarked.

"Oh, that isn't all our ill luck!" said the woman. "Our team horses died this spring. John, my husband, gets a little blue sometimes. But I tell him we're well off; we've both got our health, and we've a roof over our heads. If we prosper, we'll be out of debt in a year or two."

"You've no doctor very near in case you were sick," was my remark.

"Not within twenty miles; but we never get sick, you see; we're not able to," she added, lightly.

"You must miss the social privileges of your early life," was my next remark.

"We're too busy, I guess, to be lonesome," she said; "and then there's John and the three children. I should be ashamed of myself to be lonesome with them."

"I suppose there may be a school and church near?" was my query.

"Twenty miles away; that's the nearest," she said. "But I teach the children, and we have services at the house every Sunday. John reads a sermon, and he and I sing and read from the Bible and pray. We like to do it; and then it's good for the children."

"Don't you sometimes wish to return to New England?" I asked.

"Oh, no," she laughed, "we've come here to stay, and we shall stick to Dakota. Our luck will turn if we hold on. You may hear of us yet among the noted citizens of the state,"

I rode away pondering. "With such a wife, what may not a man accomplish?" was the burden of my thought. —Youth's Companion.

YOUNG INDIA.

Characteristics of the Anglicized Natives of Calcutta.

The Hindoo of Calcutta does not represent an ancient tradition, for he is but a thing of yesterday, called into being by the foreigner, and he represents an altogether novel phase of thought, which is gradually making itself felt, and is the chief characteristic of what has been dubbed Young India. Young India is the more or less Europeanized Hindoo. The supple mind of the Bengalese could not long remain impervious to the influence of daily contact with the European cast of thought, and all Hindoos are more or less affected by that contact. A European education, the study of the classics and of contemporaneous literature, of ancient and modern history, and of the natural sciences, could not fail to have results on every stratum of society, and culture has filtered down from the university to every class, awaking aspirations and ambitions previously unknown. A new society has sprung up, of what may be termed Anglicized Indians, which society, alas! is not always recruited from the elite of the native population; the higher castes, who cling to their traditions and retain their pride of race, are generally faithful to the culture of the past. The masses who make up Young India are not attached to European civilization by any sense of its superiority or by intellectual curiosity, but in search of remunerative appointments. To get one of the inferior situations under government which are open to native baboos it is necessary to be able to speak and write English, and every one anxious to secure thirty rupees a month in some office rushes to the universities and public schools. Three hundred candidates for a place worth some two pounds ten a month! And what becomes of the two hundred and ninety-nine who fail and can no longer live the simple natural life of their forefathers? They must die of hunger or swell the ranks of the politicians, and they choose the latter alternative. Proud of the superficial knowledge they have acquired, and primed with European catchwords, the meaning of which has long since faded away, they form a huge unclassed mass uncommonly like the lower middle class of Europe—as noisy, as unreasonable, as narrow-minded, and, in some rare instances, as disinterested as those with which we are all familiar, with the difference that the formulas they are so proud of are borrowed from the traditions of an exotic civilization, and that for them there is a wider gulf than ever between the letter and the spirit. What they aim at is, in truth, neither national independence nor local autonomy under the English protectorate; it is simply access to the higher administrative functions and political domination over other castes, with the English army at their backs. —Harper's Weekly.

THE ROMAN CARNIVAL.

Its Different Stages from the Fifteenth Century to the Present Day.

It is curious to note how all writers insist upon the carnival as a specially popular festival, for though the people, of course, took their part as spectators and jostled and jested with each other in a struggling mass in the Corso, still it was eminently a feast provided for them by the aristocracy. The people had little more to do with the active part of it than the rank and file of the Achæans and Trojans had to do with the Homeric battles, for much money had to be spent upon it.

In 1499 Sebastiano Pinzoni writes: "The Roman aristocracy hold high festival, and it goes badly with such as have no money." In 1634 the jousts which Cardinal Antonio Barberini arranged, with dresses and one thing and another cost more than 50,000 scudi. Especially in the races for Barbary horses up the Corso there was always great emulation among the noblest houses in Rome, and the nobles would hang up the banners which were the prizes, in their private chapels. Thus, from the middle of the seventeenth to the middle of the eighteenth century, we find all the most aristocratic names in Rome on the list of winners.

Near the end of the last century their interest was on the wane, for Goethe says that in 1788 the horse races were no longer confined to the aristocracy, but the middle and lower classes also took part in them: "The great men are parsimonious; they hold aloof from the proceedings;" a great contrast with 1761, when, according to Casanova, "all that was noblest and most brilliant in Rome mixed freely with the common people." From which it would seem that in the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries the rich spent freely, and made the real carnival for the poor; but to-day the positions are reversed, and the poor spend all the money to make a carnival of quite a different kind for themselves, in which the element of speculation plays a prominent part, and the aristocracy, as a rule, ignore the whole proceeding, though visitors contribute largely toward its expenses by hiring balconies and otherwise taking part in what is to them a novelty.

As things go at present, it is not likely to improve; a good carnival costs too much money, and the aristocracy hold their carnival in their private houses and palaces. The carnival at Nice, with its battle of flowers, is made by the rich visitors, and the American carnival at New Orleans is by no means a festival made by the people.—Gentleman's Magazine.

New York's Old Battery.

When Hendrick Hudson came sailing into the mouth of the river that thenceforward was to be known by his name, on that September day in the year 1609, almost the whole of what is now called "the Battery," was under water at high tide. And it is a fact—notwithstanding the thundering of the guns which has gone on thereabouts, and the blustering name that the locality has worn for centuries—that not a single one of New York's enemies ever would have been a whit the worse had the tides continued until this very moment to cover the Battery twice a day! Actually the entire record of this theoretically offensive institution—whereof the essential and menacing purpose, of course, was that somebody or something should be battered by it—has been an aggregation of gentle civilities which would have done credit to a rather exceptionally mild-mannered lamb.—Harper's Weekly.

FIRESIDE FRAGMENTS.

—To keep ice in the sickroom over night set the pitcher in a newspaper, gather up the ends, twist them tight, and snap on a rubber band.

—Roast Sweetbreads.—Dip parboiled sweetbreads in egg, then in cracker dust, pour over them melted butter, and bake, basting with brown sauce.—Good Housekeeping.

—Orange Ice.—Take the juice of six oranges and grated rind of three, and the juice of two lemons with the same proportion of sugar and water. Prepare and freeze as lemon ice.—Farm, Field and Fireside.

—Minute Pudding.—Boil two cups of milk flavored with lemon or nutmeg for a moment, stir into it one-half cup of flour dissolved in milk and water and let boil two minutes, constantly stirring. Pour into cool dishes and serve with hard sauce or sugar and cream.—Home.

—Fish Chowder.—Fry chopped onions in a spoonful of lard, add sifted flour, stirring until brown. Add one quart or more of water, one can tomatoes, and alternate layers of chopped fish and potatoes; season each layer with salt, pepper and thyme and a little lemon. Let boil.—Detroit Free Press.

—Besides Clarifying.—Slices of raw potato added frequently to the fat in which cakes are being fried, will prevent scorching and destroy that disagreeable odor that seems to have a propensity to invade every room in the house. They will also allow one to keep the fat at that high temperature which is necessary to the perfection of raised cakes or doughnuts. Also half suet, with a little vinegar added, is just as good as lard to fry cakes in, and that means something at the present price of lard.—Rural New Yorker.

—Cabbage Pickle.—White cabbage mixed with spices makes a nice pickle. Slice the cabbage pretty fine; for three heads of cabbage scald two quarts of vinegar of medium strength, add two tablespoonfuls of sugar; put into a bag one tablespoonful each of cloves and cinnamon, and half a teaspoonful of black pepper; put the little bag of spices in the vinegar when you scald it, and let it remain in the pan when you pour the vinegar over the cabbage; press the cabbage down with a plate with a weight on it, so that the cabbage will be under the vinegar.—Prairie Farmer.

—Cream Sauce.—This is one of the things one rarely finds perfectly made. Those who have tried to make it good and failed, I beg to try the following method of making it: Take an ounce and a half of butter and a scant tablespoonful of flour; mix together to a paste; when smooth, add half a pint of warm milk, a small teaspoonful of salt, and a little white pepper, or a dash of cayenne. Set it on the fire, and let it boil till it is thick enough to mask the back of a spoon transparently; then add a squeeze of lemon juice and another ounce and a half of fresh butter; stir until quite blended. This sauce is the foundation for many others, and for some purposes the beaten yolk of an egg is added, when first on the boil. Capers, chopped mushrooms, chopped celery or oysters may be added, according to the use for which it is intended. The object of adding the second butter is because boiling takes away the flavor of the butter, and by stirring half of it in without boiling it, you retain the flavor.—Boston Budget.

DEFENDING THE ALAMO.

The Lofty Patriotism of Col. Travis and His Men.

The world furnishes no example surpassing the chivalric devotion to duty, to country, to freedom, displayed by the immortal defenders of the Alamo. On the 23d of February, 1836, Santa Anna appeared before the Alamo, unfurled the red flag, and demanded its surrender. The cannon of the Alamo defiantly answered. Santa Anna had a well equipped and disciplined army of about 8,000. Col. William B. Travis, commanding the Alamo, had, all told, 183 men. On the 25th Santa Anna opened his batteries, and from that day till the morning of the 6th of March his fire was incessant. Travis's little command kept their cannon and unerring rifles hot day and night, till on the morning of the 6th the final assault was made, and every Texan died at his post; not one left to tell the story. Sixteen hundred of Santa Anna's soldiers dead in range of the defenders' artillery and rifles bore silent testimony how well the Texans had done their duty. The bodies of the dead heroes were gathered by Santa Anna's orders into one common heap and burned. His own 1,600 dead were accorded decent interment. Shortly after Texas established her independence at San Jacinto, Juan N. Seguin and General Rusk had the bones of these immortal dead and the remains of the Texans butchered at Goliad carefully gathered and decently buried.

The motive which actuated Travis and his men to defend the Alamo, which he and they knew could but end in the sacrifice of his whole command, was the loftiest patriotism. Santa Anna, with his invading army, had rapidly moved into Texas breathing vengeance. He stopped before the Alamo to brush out of his way the handful of men garrisoning the fort. Every hour's delay was precious to Texas. There was no army in the field, only a few scattered detachments here and there, and time was absolutely essential to the defense of Texas, to the end that the men might arm themselves, assemble and prepare to repel the invaders. Travis, Crockett, Bonham, Bowie and their noble comrades therefore determined to hold Santa Anna in check at any cost as long as possible.—Ex-Senator Samuel Bell Maxey, in Harper's Magazine.

The First Slave Traders.

Sir John Hawkins was the first English slave trader. He formed a company composed of the leading men of London and fitted out three small ships, which sailed in 1562. Later, Queen Elizabeth lent Hawkins "Jesus," a large ship of her own of seven hundred tons, and took shares in the second African company. She not only equipped the ship, but put one hundred soldiers on board to provide for contingencies. On the second voyage Hawkins brought four hundred negroes, and had a narrow escape from losing them, owing to the lack of water when he was near the equator; but, as he piously recorded in his log: "The Almighty God would not suffer His elect to perish, and sent a breeze, which carried them safe to Dominica." This was the beginning of the slave trade, which lasted for more than two centuries before it was finally suppressed.—Chicago Herald

The Last Chance.

It is said that opportunity opens a door to fortune for every man, at least once in his lifetime. The pity of it is, that in many cases the poor mortal cannot see the chance, though it is his last. It is, therefore, all the more important that a chance should not be allowed to pass us unimproved, when it is the last opportunity we shall ever have. Now, next week is the last week of the World's Fair—and your last chance to see it. Do you think there will be another such exhibition in this country in your lifetime? Not probable; hardly possible. Do you think it will not pay you to go? A gentleman who is a "globe-trotter" said to the writer: "If you were to travel for three years around the world, and spend $25,000, you would not see what is to be seen at the World's Fair." Pack your grip at once, take mother and the children with you, go to the office of your home ticket agent, tell him that you are going to the World's Fair, and that you want tickets for yourself and family over the Burlington. DELANO DIARY

--Eagle Steam Laundry Minneapolis.

--Several severe cases of tonsillites are bothering some of our citizens.

—Leon Frazie is building an addition to his North Second street residence.

—Read the "Pine Land Frauds" and "Minnesota Day" on the second page of this paper.

—Read our advertisements and govern yourselves accordingly, when you wish to buy anything in the lines mentioned.

—A load of lumber was unceremoneously unloaded in the street on Tuesday near Coolen's office by a scared team.

—An old fashioned string of black birds flew over in a Southwesterly direction over our town far quite a long time on Tuesday evening.

—We have not yet seen the expert surveyor who is to be hired by our city council to establish a much needed grade on the streets of Delano.

—Hunters are returning from the west almost daily now. The season does not appear to be extra good from the amount of space for game most of them have.

—Rev. John W. Powell, the new M. E. minister here is 71 years old. Next year will be his 50th in the ministery. Come out at 7:30 p. m. next Sunday and hear him.

—The law says saloons shall be closed at eleven o'clock. Whether it is the fauit of the Village Council, President or Marshal we do not know, but last night at about 12 one was running full blast.

—The Board of Education did the proper thing when they voted not to allow the school house to be used for teachers' examinations on school days. They should have included "that the text books of the district shall not be loaned to the teachers meetings," as they often receive more injury in one day than they would in the hands of the pupils for a month.

—Diphtheria which has been so prevolent in different parts of the state for some time has made its appearance in our vicinity. On Sunday Joe Neison brought his four-year-old boy to town for medical advice. The doctor at once pronounced the case one of diphtheria. The boy was taken home. The Chairman of the Board of Supervisors was notified and promptly quarantined the premises. On Tuesday afternoon a younger boy began to show symptoms of the dreaded disease. It is hoped by careful quarantine to keep the disease confined to the one family. On Thursday morning the first case died.

—The stockholders in the new project for buying produce for cash met at Hansemen & Kohler's store on Saturday evening, and elected Geo. P. Schaffer, chairman and A. W. Wittman secretary of the evening. It was reported that the shares had been sold to amount to $5.15, and officers were elected as follows: Executive committee, Otto Marr, Geo. P. Schaffer, John E. Borsch and A. W. Wittman, also to be Treasurer, and John B. Plattner also to be Secretary. It was voted that the treasurer collect for the stock by Saturday, and that the committee rent a room, advertise and what ever is necessary. Charles Brunko was engaged for $50 per month to act as manager of the business, buying the four last days of the week and visiting the cities to sell Monday and Tuesday.

Meetings are to be held once a month and the business is to be carried on with a view of simply paying expenses as near the highest market prices as can be done. Properly managed this ought to furnish a home market that will be a credit to all concerned.

--G. F. Herman is building a house on the Helman farm.

—Ole Erwig has just had his Third street residence reshingled.

--Alvard Johnson is building a stone foundation to his Riverside residence.

—By the way lumber is handled by those in the business here, the conntry must be building up very rapidly.

—Patronize the Eagle Steam Laundry, 13, Fifth Street S. E., Minneapolis Write for agency. 3-1t

—The I. O. O. F. Lodge No. 80 of this place attended the funeral of their deceased brother, J. J. Snodgrass at Montrose yesterday.

--Yes, we have the celebrated Golden Cottonene, better and cheaper than lard, at the City Grocery.

C. H. GREEN & CO.

—Jonas Dahl is having stone hauled preparatory to moving his house back and placing a foundation under it similar to his neighbor, John C. Arups.

—That cargo of trunks seen on the depot platform on Wednesday did not belong to an Uncle Tom's Cabin Troup but Howard to Lake's popuar traveling man, Fred G. Nott.

—John Jacobs and John Williams of Independence have been favored by the pension bureau. Jacobs gets a first pension and Williams an increase of his Mexican pension.

-A meeting of the stock holders of the Delano Provision Company will be held Friday evening at Wittman's drug store. Come out and aid the project of establishing a home market for cash.

—Rev. J. S. Sherrill has been engaged by the Presbyterians to hold services here for the next six months when they hope to have Rev. S. S. Hilscher back. Services next Sunday at 10:30 a. m.

--A Polander living on the West side has a fine pair of cows which after milking he yokes to a light wagon and hauls his corn foder, hay and other products of his small farm to his barns. The cows are well broke to work and save several dollars expense for team hire or keeping.

—Business seems to be picking up considerably in this part of the country. More people are paying up their bills, and the bank reports much more money being placed on deposit than for quite awhile. People are beginning to learn that the United States are not going to pieces in a day, whether the John Sherman purchasing clause is repealed or not.

—Beware of the agents traveling through the couuty selling various machines, goods and wares for monthly payments of a dollar, two dollars or five dollars. As before you are aware if you patronize them, liberally, you will be pledged to pay more than your monthly income, a sad predicament to be in. It is a good time to keep as near out of debt as possible.

—The splendid Minnesota fall weather is now here and farmers and others are busily engaged in preparing for long winter months. Manure is being hauled onto the fields, fall plowing is about done, corn husking is progressing nicely and the barns and stables for horses, cattle and other stock are being put into comfortable condition.

—Our council seems to have been out-done by the Mankato aldermen, who, it is said, voted six hundred dollars to send six aldermen to the Chicago Fair for the purpose of examining some pumps. Our city fathers might try again, perhaps they could all go and take their own brass band. Nothing like keeping up to the times except keeping within the bounds of law.

County Cullings.

Andrew Peterson who lived near Cokato was kicked and killed by a horse on the 10th inst.

The County Commissioners have instructed the County Attorney to commence suit to recover $75 paid Wendell & Pidgeon for legal services, on order of Judge Smith.

C. C. Tallman, of Rockford, was employed to paper and varnish the offices on the lower floor of the court house.

The county was organized into a drainage district under the law.

The Treasurer was instructed to send postal cards to personal property owners notifying them of the amount of their tax soon after Jan. 1, 1894.

Village Marshal J. J. Snodgrass, met a sad fate on Monday, at Waverly, while trying to board a moving freight train he fell and his head was severed from the body. He was buried on Thursday at the Kriedler cemetary.

We were not a little amused while at Maple Lake a short time since to hear several Buffalo men, who were also there, commenting on the remarkably long freight train which passed having 36 cars.

In last week's Commoner we find an article signed "Observer," which from the general tone we take to be from the pen of our esteemed friend, A. G. Sexton, of Cokato. Al is quite a spicy writer and aims at the bull's eye every time.

The Waverly Tribune is to be commended for its strong stand taken against gambling games at the County Fair. Things that most people teach their boys are wrong and to be shunned are there brought prominently to the front, and serve as the chief attractions to many a young man who is too easily led astray. Also for the timely warning to our Board of County Commissioners not to pay qut public moneys from the County Treasury for the county fair's debts or any other thing for which taxes have not been levied, or money collected. That's right Tribune. You are on the safe track there.

SNODGRASS—at Waverly, Tuesday, Oct. 17, J. J. Snodgrass.

MCCREARY—At Little Falls, Sept. 7, 1893, Henry A. McCreary, aged 65 years, 4 months and 23 days. Deceased was an old settler in the state and formerly lived near Watertown at Lake Mary and at Howard Lake.

THE POET'S BABE.

One night as old St. Peter slept,
He left the door of heaven ajar,
When through a little angle crept,
And came down with a falling star.

One summer, as the blessed beams
Of morn approached, my blushing bride
Awakened from some pleasing dreams
And found that angel by her side.

God grant but this—I ask no more—
That when he leaves this world of pain
He'll wing his way to that bright shore,
And find the road to heaven again.

THE SONG OF THE "No. 9."

My dress is of fine polished oak,
As rich as the finest fur cloak,
And for handsome design
You just should see mine—
No. 9, No. 9.

I'm beloved by the poor and the rich,
For both I impartially stitch;
In the cabin I shine,
In the mansion I'm fine—
No. 9, No. 9.

I never get surly nor tired,
With zeal I always am fired;
To hard work I incline,
For rest I ne'er pine—
No. 9, No. 9.

I am easily purchased by all,
With instalments that monthly do fall;
And when I am thine,
Then life is benign—
No. 9, No. 9.

To the Paris Exposition I went,
Upon getting the Grand Prize intent:
I left all behind,
The Grand Prize was mine—
No. 9, No. 9.

At the Universal Exposition of 1889, at Paris, France, the best sewing machines of the world, including those of America, were in competition. They were passed upon by a jury composed of the best foreign mechanical experts, two of whom were the leading sewing machine manufacturers of France. This jury, after exhaustive examination and tests, adjudged that the Wheeler & Wilson machines were the best of all, and awarded that company the highest prize offered—the GRAND PRIZE—giving other companies only gold, silver and bronze medals.

The French government, as a further recognition of superiority, decorated Mr. Nathaniel Wheeler, president of the company, with the Cross of the Legion of Honor—the most prized honor of France.

The No. 9, for family use, and the No. 12, for manufacturing uses, are the best in the world to-day.

And now, when you want a sewing machine, if you do not get the best it will be your own fault. Ask your sewing machine dealer for the No. 9 Wheeler & Wilson machine. If he doesn't keep them, write to us for descriptive catalogue and terms. Agents wanted in all unoccupied territory. WHEELER & WILSON MFG. CO. Chicago, Ill

THE FARMER FEEDETH ALL.

My lord rides through his palace gate,
My lady sweeps along in state,
The sage thinks long on many a thing,
And the maiden muses on marrying:
The minstrel harpeth merrily,
The sailor ploughs the foaming sea,
The huntsman kills the good red deer,
And the soldier wars without a fear,
But fall to each what e'er befall,
The farmer he must feed them all.

Smith hammereth cheerily the sword,
Priest preacheth pure and holly word,
Dame Alice worketh brodery well,
Clark Richard tales of love can tell,
The tap-wife sells her foaming beer,
Dan Fisher fisheth in the mere,
And courtiers ruffle, strut and shine,
While pages bring the Gascon wine;
But fall to each whate'er be fall,
The farmer he must feed them all.

Man builds his castle fair and high,
Whatever river runneth by,
Great cities rise in every land,
Great churches show the builder's hand,
Fair places and pleasing bowers,
Great work is done be't here and there,
And well man worketh everywhere:
But work or rest, whate'er befall,
The farmer he must feed them all.
—Oneida Herald.

THE Minnesota Universiiy sent down a foot ball team to play Hamline University, on Monday and came near getting beaten.

NEW YORK'S Senator, D. B. Hill, who has, all along, claimed to be a Democrat, seems just at present, to be practicing what he preaches better than in the past.

ST. PAUL is bound to be the Capital of Minnesota even if the people do have to come down with a quarter of a million dollars to allow him the privilege. The new site is said to be a very nice one, however.

WITH the McKinley bill in full force and the fleece of the sheep cheaper than it has been for years, it don't look at this distance, as if it would be possible to again pull the wool over a majority of the Ohio voter's eyes so soon.

THE Senate must have had in mind one of President Madison's principles "That a well instructed people alone can be free" while it was furnishing wisdom in such chunks, for the country for six weeks. And if silver is not free the people must be, after this.

FROM the continual howling of the Wright County Times about Commissioner of Pensions Lochren some might be led to infer that the editor of that paper had a pension which had been put on his much advertised "Fraud" list. Don't be uncharitable, readers. Don't ever think anything like that for one moment. We don't think he has.

THE Louisville Courier-Journal intimates that at the first opportunity that presents itself Missouri will "pull down her Vest." And that the whereabouts of Mr. Morgan, of Alabama, after his term expires will be about as great a mystery, politically speaking, as what became of Morgan of New York, a few years ago, and all in spite of the minority.

WE are in receipt of a little pamphlet sent out by David Lubin, Sacramento, Cal., advocating the handling of all freight to all parts of the U. S. at a given rate, using a stamp the same as mail is now sent. For instance if a farmer in California desired to ship 40 bushels of wheat to Minneapolis he could buy a stamp for a dollar and ship the grain the same as he would mail a letter. If a Wright county farmer wished to send 40 bushels of grain to Minneapolis he would send it in the same way and pay the same price for his stamp. The same price could be paid for wheat all over the country and the same freight to the seaboard would be charged, in stamps, consequently wheat from Minneapolis or California would stand ar good a show in Boston as would that raised in Massachuetts for shipment to foreign lands. He also argues that "all land owned and worked by American citizens or those intending to become such, shall not be subject to any governmental tax of any kind. Rented lands, lands owned by aliens, or lands not under cultivation shall, however, be taxed as now." He winds up as most of these people disappointed with the present arrangement of things do by advocating that in case neither of the old parties will take up the ideas a new party, what would, be at once organighd. The scheme certainly possesses the quality of being a novel one.

WHEN the United States Senate undertake to amend their rules so that a majority can have a say as to what shall, and what shall not, be law, in this country, and not be obliged to sit idly by for six weeks, and listen to the dilatory tactics of those who think differently, it would be in order for some good Democrat to cite from the Father of Democracy's (Thomas Jefferson) principles. "Absolute acquiescence in the decisions of the majority, the vital principles of republics, from which is no appeal but to force, the vital principle and immediate parent of dispotism."

THE Evening Journal lately contained a caricature of Grover Cleveland sitting manfully astride a huge elephant labeled g. o. p. which with its trunk aided in carrying the repeal bill, a diminutive donkey nobly supporting the other half of the document, was labeled democratic donkey. Good for old Grover. When the Republican papers place him astride the elephant they admit the wisdom of his views and of those who aid him in trying to settle the financial difficulties that have overspread our country. May the Elephant and the Donkey continue to be guided by words of wisdom and our country still live.

HENRY WATERSON, in the Louisville Courier Journal under the head "Where Was the Majority Then." wants to know how it was that this wonderful power of the minority to effectually clog the wheels of the Senate was not found out by some of the most talented men of the Sunny South in reconstruction days. He says "Did all the great Southern Senators who have died since the war go to their graves without a single ray of this potential light illuminating their way?"

"Speaking of Kentuckey, does anyone believe that the robust Beck or the delicate and slight of frame Garret Davis would have ceased talking until death sealed his lips, if he had known that talking could have obstructed the flood of oppressive legislation?"

"In the days of the South's struggle for life, and only a while ago when the new blow was aimed at its freedom, where was the power of its minority?" "In the days of silver buying and silver coining whence comes this overwhelming power of the minority?"

It does look as if some one would have stumbled on to this wonderful power before now, if there was anything of the kind Also if there is any such power, as if it will soon be relegated to oblivion.

Typhoid Fever.

Typhoid fever is almost an epidemic, we are informed, in parts of our county. This is a disease which occasionally makes its rounds among us, and usually claims some victims for its own. Usually is a self-limited disease, running its course in from one, to five or six week. It generally comes on slowly, the prodromal stage may last for several days or even a week or two before the patient takes to his bed. Head-ache, back-ache, a general feeling of weekness, with an indisposition to move around, feverishness, chills, usually slight, nose bleed, loss of appetite and pain in the right illiac, or lower portion of the abdomen on the right side are symptoms to be noticed. In the second week the patient usually is worse, some cases become delerious, and need constant watching. A great deal depends on the care the patient receives as to whether or not he will recover. A proper nurse should be secured as soon as the case is diagnosed typhoid. Care should be taken concerning his food. Milk is among the best articles for most cases, some have even recommended that for food we should use milk; for drink, milk, and for medicine milk. This seems to be depending too much on one article. If fever is high, in some cases frequent sponge baths are an excellent thing. The best thing to do when the disease is suspected is to call the best medical aid you can get. We are among those who believe when taken in its earliest stages the disease is often aborted, broken up, and the patient recovers after the prodromal stage without be obliged to keep his bed for weeks. Occasionally patients are taken severely sick with pains in bowels, vomiting, and other symptoms of intestinal irritation and have a regular run of the fever. All cases are not alike and all do not need the same treatment. The line of treatment must be left to the physician, and must be honestly and thoroughly carried out to meet with the best results. Unless the nurse can be relied upon the medical adviser has a poor show, and is often blamed for what is beyond his control. A slight digression from the prescribed line of food often brings a relapse. Causes of typhoid are usually found in the water supply; the discharges from the patient should be speedily removed and buried, not thrown out within a few feet of the well.

Preacher in charge, J. W. Powell,

An Entertaining Parlor Game.

Amateur poets may find a good deal of encouragement in several parlor games. Crambo is an old friend of those who rhyme, and sometimes of those who cannot. There is a new game, or at least an adoption of an old one, in a rhyming game which the listener saw a quartet of young people playing about a literary table. They all began together, wrote a line apiece, and exchanged papers; each wrote a second line and exchanged again; the third line must rhyme with the first; the fourth with the second. When the first grist of stanzas was finished, four exchanges of papers having been effected in the course of their writing, the results were read. The absurdity of their stanzas was not intrinsic. It depended chiefly on the rhymes really being achieved, and with nonsense in them: their spice was in the moment of their production and in the merriment of their reading, but it was piquant and tickeled the palates of the four young people.

The four young people laughed a goodeal. When four hands each have a finger in the pie there is proof in the eating of it. Three of the accidental nonsense stanzas are given, as a pattern for other rhymesters in search of employment of this sort, not for their merit. Not one of the four who wrote these lines would mind acknowledging that they have only relative merit:

Miss Jenkins had a bonnet;
'Twas made of bright pink chip;
She had a cabbage on it,
And a beetle that could skip.

The goldbug and the pollywog
Went waltzing down the sky,
And fell ker-plunk in an Irish bog,
Then hung on the line to dry.

John and Thomas loved each other
With a wild, adorning love;
But they thrashed their dear old mother
With a double boxing-glove!

—Boston Transcript.

Father Connolley's Troubles.

DULUTH, Minn., Oct. 26.—The grand gury at Two Harbors yesterday afternoon returned two indictments for rape against Father Connolley, and one for kidnapping against Mrs. Mullaley, his sister. Bail was fixed at $5,000 in Connolley's case and $500 in Mrs. Mullaley's case, and the court adjourned. Both will be tried in Duluth, a change of venue having been granted from Lake county. They are still in jail, but expect to get bail.—Globe.

Among Our Exchanges.

Treasurer Dart has been notified that his hearing as the suspended treasurer of Meeker county will be held before the Governor next Tuesday. Litchfield Ledger.

MONTICELLO, Minn., Oct. Oct. 25.—A. F. Baker died this morning after a long illness. Mr. Baker settled here before the war and is widely known throughout the state.—Minneapolis Journal.

Several Elk River parties drove to Minneapolis with a big load of potatoes the first of the week, and it is claimed secured enough better price to pay them well for their time and labor. This is not as it should be.—Star-News.

FERGUS FALLS, Minn Oct. 25.—Judge Baxter went to St. Cloud today to sit with Judge Searle tomorrow when the famous pine land case of the State vs. C. A. Smith & Co. is to be argued. It will be several days before a decision is reached.—Minneapolis Journal.

Hutchinson has furnished at least 100 world's fair visitors, and the remainder of the county has sent at least 300 more. At an average of $30 each, which is a small estimate, the fair has taken $12,000 out of the county.—Hutchinson Democrat.

A business man prominent in the Twin Cities gave a Daily News representative yesterday his candid opinion that the world's fair at Chicago was entirely responsible for the hard times. His reasoning is that it has drained the whole country of ready money to such an extent as to paralize business.—St. Paul Daily News.

Robert M. Shearer, of Cincinnati, president of the Cincinnati Aluminum company, who has been at Duluth inspecting the Angermeier patent process of manufacturing the metal, is the guest of the Windsor. Mr. Sharer's company gets its supply of aluminum from Pittsburg, and he is seeking a cheaper source of supply. It is not impossible that he is looking about for a Western location for a branch factory; but of this matter he had nothing to say last evening.—Globe.

Dr. Jones' Good Luck.

Dr. Talbot Jones had a very close shave for his life yesterday. About three o'clock in the afternoon, while driving down Oakland avenue, a young man and his best girl, behind a spanking team, were closely following. Suddenly the swam lost control of the horses he was driving, and a few jumps of the excited animals ran the pole of the rig to which they were hitch through the body of Dr. Jones' buggy. The point of the pole just grazed the doctor's back. His buggy was overturned, and being caught underneath, Dr. Jones was dragged a considerable distance. Fortunately he was not seriously hurt, and the couple in the runaway rig escaped without serious injury. It is but a few days since the doctor miraculously escaped injury and possible death in a railway accident.—Globe.

INDEPENDENCE INCIDENTS.

The forest is being destroyed of its foliage by the forerunner of a hard cold winter, jack frost, and to us this is the saddest part of the year, for it reminds of old age and of death. Winter creeps upon us and finds us unprepared for its coming.

The juvenile portion of this community are now harvesting a good crop of corn huskings and evening parties.

The new school house in district 162 is furnished with modern improvements, and school began yesterday morning with Hugh McLane installed as teacher.

B. Drake and his son Ben are at Chicago attending the world's fair.

James Turnam returned from the fair last Friday, sick.

J. H. Richards and wife of Buffalo, spent Saturday and Sunday in Independence.

Michael Jacobs is building a large new barn.

Prof. Remmington is married to a Monticello lady. We have not heard the particulars.

J. S. McIntire still holds forth as a juryman at the district court in Minneapolis.

Farmers are all busy plowing and husking corn.

There is a goodeal of inquiring after farm land in Independence this fall.

There is no political campaign on in this state this fall. A mighty good thing for every body.

That political prognosticator of Buffalo, who comes out in the local press in such strong terms favoring the re-election of Governor McKinley of Ohio and denouncing the democratic party as an ignorant and cowardly set, in his own imagination knows more than a whole political campaign, but his diagnosis of the democratic party has about as much effect upon the average man as the bray of an ass does upon a salvation army meeting. Soup houses will be in order the coming winter whether McKinley or the other fellow is elected. His talk sounds a goodeal like vinegar running out of the spigot. Perhaps there would not have to be so many soup houses if the people were not compelled to pay such high protective tariff.

Latest News.

The Senate has concluded, after a few more brief speeches, to take a vote on the repeal of the purchasing clause of the John Sherman Silver bill.

It is claimed that Phil Schieg has been seen in Kentucky, but not yet captured.

While hunting near Carlton yesterday, Frank Anderson, mistaking his companion, J. C. Sandberg, for a deer, shot him through the heart.

Mayor Eustis, of Minneapolis, who was seriously injured in a runaway a few days ago is reported as improving.

Mrs. John Williams of Duluth, was run over and her neck was broken by a 19 year-old boy named G. L. Robbins, who was riding a bicycle.

And for handsome design
You just should see mine—
No. 9, No. 9.

I'm beloved by the poor and the rich,
For both I impartially stitch;
In the cabin I shine,
In the mansion I'm fine—
No. 9, No. 9.

I never get surly nor tired,
With zeal I always am fired;
To hard work I incline,
For rest I ne'er pine—
No. 9, No. 9.

I am easily purchased by all,
With instalments that monthly do fall;
And when I am thine,
Then life is benign—
No. 9, No. 9.

To the Paris Exposition I went,
Upon getting the Grand Prize intent:
I left all behind,
The Grand Prize was mine—
No. 9, No. 9.

At the Universal Exposition of 1889, at Paris, France, the best sewing machines of the world, including those of America, were in competition. They were passed upon by a jury composed of the best foreign mechanical experts, two of whom were the leading sewing machine manufacturers of France. This jury, after exhaustive examination and tests, adjudged that the Wheeler & Wilson machines were the best of all, and awarded that company the highest prize offered—the GRAND PRIZE—giving other companies only gold, silver and bronze medals.

The French government, as a further recognition of superiority, decorated Mr. Nathaniel Wheeler, president of the company, with the Cross of the Legion of Honor—the most prized honor of France.

The No. 9, for family use, and the No. 12, for manufacturing uses, are the best in the world to-day.

And now, when you want a sewing machine, if you do not get the best it will be your own fault. Ask your sewing machine dealer for the No. 9 Wheeler & Wilson machine. If he doesn't keep them, write to us for descriptive catalogue and terms. Agents wanted in all unoccupied territory. WHEELER & WILSON MFG. CO.

THE FARMER FEEDETH ALL.

My lord rides through his palace gate,
My lady sweeps along in state,
The sage thinks long on many a thing,
And the maiden muses on marrying:
The minstrel harpeth merrily,
The sailor ploughs the foaming sea,
The huntsman kills the good red deer.
And the soldier wars without a fear,
But fall to each what e'er befall,
The farmer he must feed them all.

Smith hammereth cheerily the sword,
Priest preacheth pure and holly word,
Dame Alice worketh brodery well,
Clark Richard tales of love can tell,
The tap-wife sells her foaming beer,
Dan Fisher fisheth in the mere,
And courtiers ruffle, strut and shine,
While pages bring the Gascon wine;
But fall to each whate'er be fall,
The farmer he must feed them all.

Man builds his castle fair and high,
Whatever river runneth by,
Great cities rise in every land,
Great churches show the builder's hand,
Fair places and pleasing bowers,
Great work is done be't here and there,
And well man worketh everywhere:
But work or rest, whate'er befall,
The farmer he must feed them all.

THE Minnesota Universiiy sent down a foot ball team to play Hamline University, on Monday and came near getting beaten.

NEW YORK'S Senator, D. B. Hill, who has, all along, claimed to be a Democrat, seems just at present, to be practicing what he preaches better than in the past.

ST. PAUL is bound to be the Capital of Minnesota even if the people do have to come down with a quarter of a million dollars to allow him the privilege. The new site is said to be a very nice one, however.

WITH the McKinley bill in full force and the fleece of the sheep cheaper than it has been for years, it don't look at this distance, as if it would be possible to again pull the wool over a majority of the Ohio voter's eyes so soon.

THE Senate must have had in mind one of President Madison's principles "That a well instructed people alone can be free" while it was furnishing wisdom in such chunks, for the country for six weeks. And if silver is not free the people must be, after this.

FROM the continual howling of the Wright County Times about Commissioner of Pensions Lochren some might be led to infer that the editor of that paper had a pension which had been put on his much advertised "Fraud" list. Don't be uncharitable, readers. Don't ever think anything like that for one moment. We don't think he has.

THE Louisville Courier-Journal intimates that at the first opportunity that presents itself Missouri will "pull down her Vest." And that the whereabouts of Mr. Morgan, of Alabama, after his term expires will be about as great a mystery, politically speaking, as what became of Morgan of New York, a few years ago, and all in spite of the minority.

WE are in receipt of a little pamphlet sent out by David Lubin, Sacramento, Cal., advocating the handling of all freight to all parts of the U. S. at a given rate, using a stamp the same as mail is now sent. For instance if a farmer in California desired to ship 40 bushels of wheat to Minneapolis he could buy a stamp for a dollar and ship the grain the same as he would mail a letter. If a Wright county farmer wished to send 40 bushels of grain to Minneapolis he would send it in the same way and pay the same price for his stamp. The same price could be paid for wheat all over the country and the same freight to the seaboard would be charged, in stamps, consequently wheat from Minneapolis or California would stand ar good a show in Boston as would that raised in Massachuetts for shipment to foreign lands. He also argues that "all land owned and worked by American citizens or those intending to become such, shall not be subject to any governmental tax of any kind. Rented lands, lands owned by aliens, or lands not under cultivation shall, however, be taxed as now." He winds up as most of these people disappointed with the present arrangement of things do by advocating that in case neither of the old parties will take up the ideas a new party, what would, be at once organizid. The scheme certainly possesses the quality of being a novel one.

WHEN the United States Senate undertake to amend their rules so that a majority can have a say as to what shall, and what shall not, be law, in this country, and not be obliged to sit idly by for six weeks, and listen to the diliatory tactics of those who think differently, it would be in order for some good Democrat to cite from the Father of Democracy's (Thomas Jefferson) principles. "Absolute acquiescence in the decisions of the majority, the vital principles of republics, from which is no appeal but to force, the vital principle and immediate parent of dispotism."

THE Evening Journal lately contained a caricature of Grover Cleveland sitting manfully astride a huge elephant labeled g. o. p. which with its trunk aided in carrying the repeal bill, a diminutive donkey nobly supporting the other half of the document, was labeled democratic donkey. Good for old Grover. When the Republican papers place him astride the elephant they admit the wisdom of his views and of those who aid him in trying to settle the financial difficulties that have overspread our country. May the Elephant and the Donkey continue to be guided by words of wisdom and our country still live.

HENRY WATERSON, in the Louisville Courier Journal under the head "Where Was the Majority Then," wants to know how it was that this wonderful power of the minority to effectually clog the wheels of the Senate was not found out by some of the most talented men of the Sunny South in reconstruction days. He says "Did all the great Southern Senators who have died since the war go to their graves without a single ray of this potential light illuminating their way?"

"Speaking of Kentuckey, does anyone believe that the robust Beck or the delicate and slight of frame Garret Davis would have ceased talking until death sealed his lips, if he had known that talking could have obstructed the flood of oppressive legislation?"

"In the days of the South's struggle for life, and only a while ago when the new blow was aimed at its freedom, where was the power of its minority?" "In the days of silver buying and silver coining whence comes this overwhelming power of the minority?"

It does look as if some one would have stumbled on to this wonderful power before now, if there was anything of the kind Also if there is any such power, as if it will soon be relegated to oblivion.

Typhoid Fever.

Typhoid fever is almost an epidemic, we are informed, in parts of our county. This is a disease which occasionally makes its rounds among us, and usually claims some victims for its own. Usually is a self-limited disease, running its course in from one, to five or six week. It generally comes on slowly, the prodromal stage may last for several days or even a week or two before the patient takes to his bed. Head-ache, back-ache, a general feeling of weekness, with an indisposition to move around, feverishness, chills, usually slight, nose bleed, loss of appetite and pain in the right illiac, or lower portion of the abdomen on the right side are symptoms to be noticed. In the second week the patient usually is worse, some cases become delerious, and need constant watching. A great deal depends on the care the patient receives as to whether or not he will recover. A proper nurse should be secured as soon as the case is diagnosed typhoid. Care should be taken concerning his food. Milk is among the best articles for most cases, some have even recommended that for food we should use milk; for drink, milk, and for medicine milk. This seems to be depending too much on one article. If fever is high, in some cases frequent sponge baths are an excellent thing. The best thing to do when the disease is suspected is to call the best medical aid you can get. We are among those who believe when taken in its earliest stages the disease is often aborted, broken up, and the patient recovers after the prodromal stage without beobliged to keep his bed for weeks. Occasionally patients are taken severely sick with pains in bowels, vomiting, and other symptoms of intestinal irritation and have a regular run of the feyer. All cases are not alike and all do not need the same treatment. The line of treatment must be left to the physician, and must be honestly and thoroughly carried out to meet with the best results. Unless the nurse can be relied upon the medical adviser has a poor show, and is often blamed for what is beyond his control. A slight digression from the prescribed line of food often brings a relapse. Causes of typhoid are usually found in the water supply; the discharges from the patient should be speedily removed and buried, not thrown out within a few feet of the well.

An Entertaining Parlor Game.

Amateur poets may find a good deal of encouragement in several parlor games. Crambo is an old friend of those who rhyme, and sometimes of those who cannot. There is a new game, or at least an adoption of an old one, in a rhyming game which the listener saw a quartet of young people playing about a literary table. They all began together, wrote a line apiece, and exchanged papers; each wrote a second line and exchanged again; the third line must rhyme with the first; the fourth with the second. When the first grist of stanzas was finished, four exchanges of papers having been effected in the course of their writing, the results were read. The absurdity of their stanzas was not intrinsic. It depended chiefly on the rhymes really being achieved, and with nonsense in them; their spice was in the moment of their production and in the merriment of their reading, but it was piquant and tickeled the palates of the four young people.

The four young people laughed a goodeal. When four hands each have a finger in the pie there is proof in the eating of it. Three of the accidental nonsense stanzas are given, as a pattern for other rhymesters in search of employment of this sort, not for their merit. Not one of the four who wrote these lines would mind acknowledging that they have only relative merit:

Miss Jenkins had a bonnet;
'Twas made of bright pink chip;
She had a cabbage on it,
And a beetle that could skip.

The goldbug and the pollywox
Went waltzing down the sky,
And fell ker-plunk in an Irish bog,
Then hung on the line to dry.

John and Thomas loved each other
With a wild, adorning love;
But they thrashed their dear old mother
With a double boxing-glove!

Father Connolley's Troubles.

DULUTH, Minn., Oct. 26.—The grand jury at Two Harbors yesterday afternoon returned two indictments for rape against Father Connolley, and one for kidnapping against Mrs. Mullaley, his sister. Bail was fixed at $5,000 in Connolley's case and $500 in Mrs. Mullaley's case, and the court adjourned. Both will be tried in Duluth, a change of venue having been granted from Lake county. They are still in jail, but expect to get bail.—Globe.

Among Our Exchanges.

Treasurer Dart has been notified that his hearing as the suspended treasurer of Meeker county will be held before the Governor next Tuesday. Litchfield Ledger.

MONTICELLO, Minn., Oct. Oct. 25.—A. F. Baker died this morning after a long illness. Mr. Baker settled here before the war and is widely known throughout the state.—Minneapolis Journal.

Several Elk River parties drove to Minneapolis with a big load of potatoes the first of the week, and it is claimed secured enough better price to pay them well for their time and labor. This is not as it should be.—Star-News.

FERGUS FALLS, Minn Oct. 25.—Judge Baxter went to St. Cloud today to sit with Judge Searle tomorrow when the famous pine land case of the State vs. C. A. Smith & Co. is to be argued. It will be several days before a decision is reached.—Minneapolis Journal.

Hutchinson has furnished at least 100 world's fair visitors, and the remainder of the county has sent at least 300 more. At an average of $30 each, which is a small estimate, the fair has taken $12,000 out of the county.—Hutchinson Democrat.

A business man prominent in the Twin Cities gave a Daily News representative yesterday his candid opinion that the world's fair at Chicago was entirely responsible for the hard times. His reasoning is that it has drained the whole country of ready money to such an extent as to paralize business.—St. Paul Daily News.

Robert M. Shearer, of Cincinnati, president of the Cincinnati Aluminum company, who has been at Duluth inspecting the Angermeier patent process of manufacturing the metal, is the guest of the Windsor. Mr. Sharer's company gets its supply of aluminum from Pittsburg, and he is seeking a cheaper source of supply. It It is not impossible that he is looking about for a Western location for a branch factory; but of this matter he had nothing to say last evening.—Globe.

Dr. Jones' Good Luck.

Dr. Talbot Jones had a very close shave for his life yesterday. About three o'clock in the afternoon, while driving down Oakland avenue, a young man and his best girl, behind a spanking team, were closely following. Suddenly the swain lost control of the horses he was driving, and a few jumps of the excited animals ran the pole of the rig to which they were hitch through the body of Dr. Jones' buggy. The point of the pole just grazed the doctor's back. His buggy was overturned, and being caught underneath, Dr. Jones was dragged a considerable distance. Fortunately he was not seriously hurt, and the couple in the runaway rig escaped without serious injury. It is but a few days since the doctor miraculously escaped injury and possible death in a railway accident.—Globe.

INDEPENDENCE INCIDENTS.

The forest is being destroyed of its foliage by the forerunner of a hard cold winter, jack frost, and to us this is the saddest part of the year, for it reminds of old age and of death. Winter creeps upon us and finds us unprepared for its coming.

The juvenile portion of this community are now harvesting a good crop of corn huskings and evening parties.

The new school house in district 102 is furnished with modern improvements, and school began yesterday morning with Hugh McLane installed as teacher.

B. Drake and his son Ben are at Chicago attending the world's fair.

James Turnam returned from the fair last Friday, sick.

J. H. Richards and wife of Buffalo, spent Saturday and Sunday in Independence.

Michael Jacobs is building a large new barn.

Prof. Remmington is married to a Monticello lady. We have not heard the particulars.

J. S. McIntire still holds forth as a juryman at the district court in Minneapolis.

Farmers are all busy plowing and husking corn.

There is a goodeal of inquiring after farm land in Independence this fall.

There is no political campaign on in this state this fall. A mighty good thing for every body.

That political prognosticator of Buffalo, who comes out in the local press in such strong terms favoring the re-election of Governor McKinley of Ohio and denouncing the democratic party as an ignorant and cowardly set, in his own imagination knows more than a whole political campaign, but his diagnosis of the democratic party has about as much effect upon the average man as the bray of an ass does upon a salvation army meeting. Soup houses will be in order the coming winter whether McKinley or the other fellow is elected. His talk sounds a goodeal like vinegar running out of the spigot. Perhaps there would not have to be so many soup houses if the people were not compelled to pay such high protective tariff.

Latest News.

The Senate has concluded, after a few more brief speeches, to take a vote on the repeal of the purchasing clause of the John Sherman Silver bill.

It is claimed that Phil Schieg has been seen in Kentucky, but not yet captured.

While hunting near Carlton yesterday, Frank Anderson, mistaking his companion, J. C. Sandberg, for a deer, shot him through the heart.

Mayor Eustis, of Minneapolis, who was seriously injured in a runaway a few days ago is reported as improving.

The Woman's Journal objects to so much homage being paid to Christopher Columbus at this time, when not a word is said about his wife. Sure enough, Mrs. Columbus has been overlooked. But, by the way, says the St. Paul Globe, who was Mrs. Chris, and what did she do that she should be remembered?

The government report for August foreign trade shows a balance of $12,000,000 in our favor, and September will doubtless show up better. The total exports of manufactured goods for the eight months ending August 31 were $113,618,131 worth, as compared with $99,125,838 same time in 1892. These are encouraging figures.

More than 58,000 Mohammedans made the pilgrimage to Mecca last year. The performance of this religious duty entitles everyone of the faithful accomplishing it to be dignified ever after by the title of "hadji," and this title makes its bearer a man of consequence in his neighborhood, even if, like Hadji Stavios, he becomes a bold bandit and degenerates generally.

During the past summer there has been a notable increase in the number of feminine bicyclists. Fair art students in the country discovered the great advantages in their profession of a vehicle which renders them independent of a horse and wagon. With sketching outfit strapped on behind the seat of their bicycles, they can seek their wayside studies far and near.

At the recent town elections in Connecticut, women voted for the first time on school questions, but they didn't turn out as if they loved the ballot. Not over 3,000 women in the whole state voted, or about 3 per cent. of the women entitled to vote. This is surprising considering the fuss some Connecticut women have made about the ballot. Do women really want to vote?

The eight women colonels of the German army, who draw swords only semi-occasionally and their salaries regularly, are the empress of Germany, the dowager empress, wife of the late Frederick III.; Princess Frederick Charles of Prussia, the queen regent Sophia and Queen Wilhelmina of the Netherlands, the duchess of Edinburgh, sister of the emperor of Russia, and Queen Victoria of England.

Who dare say that the Indian is incapable of attaining the highest plane of civilization? The ex-treasurer of the Cherokee nation has just absconded after robbing the treasury of more than half a million dollars in a manner that would make some of his white brethren turn green with envy. He was more considerate than some of them, however, for he left about $18,000 in the treasury when he took his departure for regions unknown

Since the last week of September wild geese have been seen flying over Connecticut southward in large flocks. This is a month earlier than usual, as their southward journey has generally been in the last week of October or the first of November. Weather prophets look upon this movement as a sign of early winter, though why geese—and wild and untutored geese at that—should know more about the seasons than the signal service bureau, with the best facilities for observation, is a puzzle that passes understanding.

Dr. Nash, of the New York quarantine staff, recently returned from Hamburg, whither he went to investigate cholera reports. He says he found Hamburg one of the healthiest cities in Europe, by reason of the reconstruction of the system of water supply, which gives the people pure, filtered, germ-free water. Hamburg to-day is a demonstration of the infinite value of a pure water supply for a city. It is one of the best advertisements that a city can possibly have. Hamburg has been transformed from a cholera-breeding town to a health resort.

Stories of absent-mindedness are invariably amusing, but one that is being told of Prof. Burdon-Sanderson, the president of the British association, requires a rather large grain of salt. On one occasion, it is said, while at Oxford he asked a few friends to a bachelor dinner, and to their intense surprise, on their arrival, proceeded to offer them their overcoats, shake hands with them and express a hope that they had enjoyed themselves. Then, seeing their astonishment, he remembered that they were arriving and not departing guests, and a hearty laugh put matters to rights.

Miss Virginia Fair, who is interesting to the public because of the fact that she will some time be one of the richest women in America, is a 19-year-old girl, short, plump, dark and vivacious. She is a pious Roman Catholic, and it is said that a few years ago she was anxious to join one of the sisterhoods of that church. By the death of her mother she became heiress to $1,500,000, to pass into her control when she is 25, and a monthly income of $2,500. Her father is one of the western multi-millionaires, and she will in all probability inherit very largely from him also.

INTERESTING NEWS COMPILATION.

FIFTY-THIRD CONGRESS.

Extra Session.

Wednesday, Oct. 18.—In the senate the discussion was renewed on the question that occupied the attention of the body the day previous—that of the amendment of the journal. No business of importance was transacted. In the house a bill was passed amending the statutes relating to the fees of United States marshals, clerks and commissioners. The New York bridge bill was then taken up and passed.

Thursday, Oct. 19.—In the senate no business of importance was transacted beyond a spirited discussion of the silver purchase repeal bill. In the house a resolution was adopted making the bankruptcy bill a special order for next week. The remainder of the session was devoted to services in memory of the late Representative Mutchler, of Pennsylvania.

Friday, Oct. 20.—The senate devoted four hours and a half to executive business, confirming the appointment of J. J. Van Alen as ambassador to Italy, and also the appointment of Mr. Kilbreth as collector of customs at New York. During the brief period that the doors were open a few unimportant events occurred. In the house the attorney general transmitted information relating to the Union Pacific railroad. A joint resolution was passed to remit half the duty on goods exhibited and sold at the world's fair.

Saturday, Oct. 21.—In the senate Senator Peffer (Kan.) occupied the time in a speech against the silver repeal bill. In the house bills were introduced to provide for an international maritime conference to formulate regulations better to protect and care for animals in transit on ocean vessels, and to increase the penalty for embezzlement by directors and officers of national banks.

Monday, Oct. 23.—In the senate speeches against the silver purchase repeal bill were made by three senators from silver states—Jones and Stewart, of Nevada, and Teller, of Colorado. In the house the public printing bill was passed and a bill was introduced amending the civil service law so as to provide for an equal division of offices among the states and their congressional districts. The Oates bill to establish a uniform system of bankruptcy throughout the United States was discussed.

FROM WASHINGTON.

There were 346 business failures in the United States in the seven days ended on the 20th. During the week previous the failures numbered 323, against 219 in the corresponding time in 1892.

Exchanges at the leading clearing houses in the United States during the week ended on the 20th aggregated $934,566,636, against $903,810,297 the previous week. The decrease, compared with the corresponding week in 1892, was 32.0.

In his annual report to the secretary of war Gen. Schofield recommended a reduction of the term of enlistment to three years.

For the fiscal year ended June 30 last the report of the sixth auditor of the treasury shows that the net revenues of the post office department for the year were $77,084,933, and that the expenditures were $81,084,104, making a deficit of $5,178,381.

THE EAST.

The death of Gen. Denis F. Burke, who commanded an Irish regiment in the rebellion, occurred at his home in New York city.

Mayor Boody, of Brooklyn, N. Y., has decided that the Mitchell-Corbett prize fight shall not take place at Coney Island.

At Trenton, N. J., a monument was unveiled in honor of the victory of Washington over the British in 1776. Six governors from as many states took part in the ceremonies.

Two laboring men were killed and several severely injured by the caving in of a trench they were digging at Homestead, Pa.

Three New York park police officers were asphyxiated while asleep by gas in a cottage adjoining Central park, and it was said that a fourth one could not recover.

IT MUST RULE.

So Says President Cleveland Regarding the Majority.

He Declares It the Most Important Question Before the Senate, Overshadowing Repeal and All Else—Opposed to Compromise.

HIS ATTITUDE.

Washington, Oct. 25.—At no time in the last sixty days of the silver struggle has the condition of affairs been more chaotic than it is to-day. President Cleveland has destroyed the last vestige of hope for a compromise by his authoritative statement that unconditional repeal is the only settlement of the question which will be satisfactory to him. This coming at the very moment when the compromisers had framed a bill and had given it to the country as a compromise acceptible to the administration, has demoralized all calculations.

Senator Gorman stands accused by a number of his associates in the senate of intentional deception. Only Saturday night Senator Gorman in the compromise plan induced other ardent friends of Mr. Cleveland to sign the agreement for a compromise on the statement that it had the indorsement of Secretary Carlisle and the administration. Within twenty-four hours Senator Gorman's claim of the indorsement of the compromise was repudiated, and throughout the day he has been accused on all sides by democratic repealers of tactics amounting to a grave public scandal.

On the other hand, the Gorman element have answered these charges with defiance and have met them with counter charges. They have openly asserted that Secretary Carlisle was the one who had deceived them and that he had given the compromisers to understand in the most positive way that the compromise would be accepted by him and Mr. Cleveland. Thus Mr. Carlisle had been accused of either intentional deceit or of such slight acquaintance with Mr. Cleveland's real desires as to fully misunderstand his position.

Senators Palmer, Vilas and Mills, who represent the most earnest friends that Mr. Cleveland has in the senate, went to the white house Monday afternoon to try and clear up the cloud of misinformation and misstatement which has arisen since the compromise made its appearance on Saturday. They were with Mr. Cleveland for three-quarters of an hour, during which time the situation was gone over very thoroughly. The president removed every possible doubt which existed as to his attitude. One of the senators repeated the substance of the president's views and then stated the following as the exact words of Mr. Cleveland:

"The financial question has ceased to be the great one before the United States senate. The paramount question now is, whether the majority of the senate shall be permitted to legislate or whether a minority will compel the majority to abdicate its functions. This is a vital issue involving a fundamental principle of our government, and it must be settled before unconditional repeal, tariff or any other subject to which the majority wishes to address itself can be considered."

The senators came away satisfied that no compromise giving the slightest concessions or modification from unconditional repeal would be considered for a moment by the president. He said that he looked upon the least modification of what the majority wanted as an admission that the majority no longer rules in the American congress, and such a principle was too dangerous to be permitted to find lodgment in our institutions.

The president also went over the circumstances which led up to the compromise of Saturday. He said that there had never been a thought of accepting such a compromise. It was explained to him by one of the senators present that the name of this senator had been secured to this agreement by the assurance that the plan was agreeable to Mr. Cleveland. The president and all those present thereupon agreed that the representations were such a fraud and deception that they vitiated the signature and in no way bound the senator who had given his name to the agreement to stand by them.

DISCREDIT STONE'S STORY.

Two of Those He Implicates in the Wrattan Murder Can Prove an Alibi.

Washington, Ind., Oct. 25.—Yarborough, one of the men whom Bud Stone implicated in the murder of the Wrattan family on the night of September 18, has admitted a number of points made by Stone. He admits that the men had previously planned to rob old Mrs. Wrattan. There is a prevailing opinion here that Stone's statement that the six men were present the night of the murder is not true. Two of them—White and Clark—can prove by good witnesses that they were elsewhere at the time of the butchery and it is thought Cosby will be able to explain his whereabouts in an acceptable way. Stone in all appearances was not aided by more than one or two others and possibly murdered the family alone. The blood on his clothes was not smeared on, as he insists, but it is in spots as though it had splashed on the garments. Stone's wife has been threatened with violence for having withheld the secret so long and has been brought here for safety. She claims she would have revealed all she knew but for fear of her husband's wrath.

FISHERMEN LOST.

Record of the Gloucester Season—Ten Vessels and Fifty-Seven Victims.

Gloucester, Mass., Oct. 25.—The closing of the fishing season tells a melancholy story of disaster as well as success and gain. During the year there have been lost at sea from this port fifty-seven men, leaving ten widows and thirty-two children. Ten vessels, valued at about $60,000, founded or stranded. From 1830, since a record has been kept, to 1893 586 vessels have been lost, of the value of $2,000,000. The number of lives lost is 3,231.

Snatched from Death's Jaws.

Emporia, Kan., Oct. 25.—Engineer Burt Monroe saved a little child from death by reversing his engine and snatching the child by the clothing just as the wheels were about to pass over its neck. He saw the child as the engine came around a curve. The child was unhurt.

Died at the Age of 103.

Philadelphia, Oct. 25.—Miss Sallie Wheeler died in this city Monday, aged 103 years. She was born in Birmingham, England, December 16, 1790. Up to the time of her death she was in possession of all her faculties.

INSANITY AND DEATH.

Affliction's Hand Laid Heavily Upon a Chicago Family.

Chicago, Oct. 25.—Henrietta Kimball, 18 years old, living at 9806 Sedan avenue, South Chicago, committed suicide by throwing herself into the lake at the foot of Ninety-eighth street, Sunday morning. Insane with grief over his daughter's rash act Andrew Kimball on Monday followed her example, and, choosing the same kindly waters in which his daughter ended her earthly sufferings, drowned himself. He had chosen the exact spot where his daughter's body was found. Mrs. Kimball's mind gave way under the double blow, and it is feared her reason may never be restored. Another daughter, who has been ill for some time, was seriously affected by this triple misfortune and she shows signs of wandering in her mind.

The family can imagine no reason for Hetty's self-destruction. She was of a cheerful disposition, and her physical health was good so far as was known. It is thought she may have overtaxed her nervous strength by her musical studies, in which she was indefatigable.

RECIPROCITY WITH CANADA.

Edward Farrar Is Sent to the Dominion by Secretary Carlisle.

Montreal, Can., Oct. 25.—The United States government is about to make overtures to Canada for a reciprocity treaty between the two countries. Edward Farrar, formerly editor of the Toronto Globe and the Toronto Mail, is in Montreal to test the feelings of Canadians on the question. He has been sent here by Secretary Carlisle, and is a paid employe of the American government. The scheme is only a continuation of the policy to extend the commercial relations of the United States over the entire American continent. Mr. Farrar states that there is an earnest desire on the part of the democrats to conclude a reciprocity treaty with Canada, which would include natural products, coal, the free entrance of which into Canada was opposed by Sir John Thompson, the premier, at the last general election, lumber, corn, barley and probably fish. Mr. Farrar, while in Canada, will see the cabinet ministers with the object of having the matter brought up at the next session of the Canadian parliament.

DIED BY WIRE.

Martin Foy Electrocuted at the Dannemora (N. Y.) Prison.

Dannemora, N. Y., Oct. 25.—Martin Foy, the young murderer of Henrietta Wilson, was shocked to death in the electric chair in the prison here at 11:50 a. m. The voltage was 1,640, and was in full force for four seconds. It was then gradually reduced and put on full force again The voltage was then decreased gradually and turned off after forty-six seconds. Foy's body scarcely moved and the physicians said death was the easiest of the kind they had ever witnessed. The body was taken to Saratoga for burial by Foy's father.

[Foy was an Englishman, 26 years old. Miss Wilson, who came from Philadelphia, first met him at Saratoga, where the couple fell violently in love with each other and agreed to live together. Foy was a dissipated man and he and the girl had frequent quarrels over men whom Foy declared were paying attention to her. On May 13, 1892, Foy bought a revolver and started out with the intention of shooting the woman. He met her on the street and, cursing her for her alleged faithlessness, shot her in the back, and when she fell shot her twice in the head. She died the next day.]

A NEW GOVERNMENT.

Lorena Proclaimed Provisional President of Brazil.

Montevideo, Uruguay, via Galveston, Tex., Oct. 25.—News from Rio Janeiro, Brazil, is that Fredrico Guilherme de Lorena has been proclaimed provisional president of Brazil by Admiral Mello, in command of the insurgent fleet. Lorena is the captain of one of the rebel warships, and the provisional government of which he is now declared president was established some days ago at Desterro, which is the capital city of the state of South Catharina and is situated on the island of that name, which lies just off the Atlantic coast of Brazil, about 450 miles south of Rio. When the island went into the hands of Mello and his followers they at once established their headquarters there and set up the provisional government which has now been dignified by the addition of a president.

NEW LABOR SCHEME.

Plan for the Amalgamation of All Organizations and Unions.

New York, Oct. 25.—A scheme of huge proportions and great possibilities is to be discussed at the general assembly of the Knights of Labor next month. It involves the amalgamation of every labor organization and labor union in the United States, whereby all shall recognize a single supreme authority, and provides that in politics the members of the labor trust shall be an organized unit in everything that seems to affect their interests. The scheme is championed by Mr. Powderly.

Death of Henry Mitchell.

Racine, Wis., Oct. 25.—Henry Mitchell, Sr., the pioneer wagon manufacturer of the west, died Monday after a brief illness of Bright's disease, in his 84th year. Deceased was a native of Fifeshire, Scotland, and settled in Chicago in 1834, there laying the foundation for his present large establishment. In 1838 he removed to Kenosha and founded what is now the Bain wagon works. In 1855 he came to Racine and founded what is now the Mitchell & Lewis company, and of which he was the president.

Theft at the Fair.

Chicago, Oct. 25.—Late Sunday night a thief in some mysterious manner broke open a show case in the Idaho exhibit in the Mines and Mining building and stole a silver brick valued at $1,000, and opals and rubies to the value of $700. There is no clew to the perpetrator of the robbery.

Thomas L. Crittenden Dead.

Louisville, Ky., Oct. 25.—A special from New York says Thomas L. Crittenden, a famous ex-Kentuckian, and who has been on the retired army list for ten or twelve years, died at his home on Staten Island.

MINNESOTA NEWS.

High School Examinations.

At the recent meeting of the state high school board at the capitol it was decided that law students may be admitted to regular high school board examinations in any school under the supervision of the board upon presentation of a certificate from the state board of examiners in law that the same is a candidate for admission to the bar of this state. It was voted that upon the request of the board of education of St. Paul, the Humboldt high school may be admitted to come under the supervision of the board on the same conditions that apply to the other high schools of the state. It was also voted that the applications of the high school at Howard and at Dawson be accepted and the schools placed in the third class under the supervision of the high school board.

Prison Night Schools.

The night school at Stillwater has again been started, and Warden Wolfer contemplates making the school as nearly like the public schools as possible. Principal Aylard, of the Stillwater high school, has been engaged as the superintendent, and convicts possessed of more than a common school education have been selected as teachers. The school was organized with an attendance of 146. All illiterate inmates will be compelled to attend school, and their diligence in studying will also be taken into consideration in the grade markings. The two large dining rooms have been pressed into service as school rooms, and each room will be lighted with additional electric lights. The studies at present comprise reading, writing, spelling and arithmetic, but in the course of a short time instruction will be given in higher studies.

The Syndicate Settles.

The contest filed by R. N Thayer on behalf of several homesteaders on gold properties on several islands in Rainy lake, and also along the shores of the lake, has been called off through the payment of $3,000 by the syndicate organized by the discoverers to prosecute development work. In order to avoid a repetition of the trouble they have just experienced, the syndicate people have placed scrip on the land.

Denied the Mails.

As a result of Postoffice Inspector Gould's visit to Duluth, the American Bond Loan company has been informed that it cannot do business through the medium of the mails, as its proposed business was in the nature of a lottery affair. The company was formed a short time ago by Sam Phillips, formerly a newspaper man. Emil Hartmann and R. D. Mallett were among its founders.

G. N. Extension.

Samuel Hill, president of the Eastern Minnesota railway, and assistant to President Hill, of the Great Northern, accompanied by Mr. Hill, Geo. A. Brackett and Mr. Dunwoody, started by team from Crookston to go over the proposed route of the Great Northern from Crookston to Duluth. Construction of the new line will commence early next spring.

A Bold Act.

WHAT IS THE OLD RELIABLE?

It is the oldest and most reliable railway in operation between the Twin Cities (St. Paul and Minneapolis) and Chicago—the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul.

Its train service is more frequent than that of any other line and unequaled in point of excellence, comfort, speed and safety.

It runs five complete and handsomely equipped passenger trains from the Twin Cities to Chicago each day—four of which pass through Winona, La Crosse, Portage, Watertown and Milwaukee, the other passing through Austin, Dubuque and Savanna.

It is the only road running trains lighted by electricity and has the exclusive use of the famous electric reading lamp in each berth. All trains thoroughly heated by steam, doing away with the old time car stove.

It runs the latest library buffet smoking cars, the latest private compartment cars, elegant drawing room sleeping cars, and free reclining chair cars on night trains, and parlor drawing room chair cars on day trains. Dining cars, (the finest in the west) are attached to each train, serving first class meals at convenient hours.

Everybody has heard of the renowned vestibuled, electric lighted, steam heated limited of "The Milwaukee." This is the most thoroughly and luxuriantly equipped train running between the Twin Cities and Chicago. No extra charge. Leaves Minneapolis 7:30 and St. Paul 8:10 every evening; arrives Chicago 9:30 following morning.

The enormous traffic constantly carried over this road between Chicago and the Northwest has necessitated and resulted in one of the most solid and substantial roadbeds in this country, which, together with its unrivalled passenger train equipment and service, insures to its patrons the highest degree of safety and ease.

Now is the time to visit the World's Fair—the grandest opportunity the American people ever have had of seeing the world in miniature. See that your tickets read via "The Milwaukee," and thus secure the best possible service, and unsurpassed accommodations—the very best to be obtained for your money.

"August Flower"

"I have been afflicted with biliousness and constipation for fifteen years and first one and then another preparation was suggested to me and tried, but to no purpose. A friend recommended August Flower and words cannot describe the admiration in which I hold it. It has given me a new lease of life, which before was a burden. Its good qualities and wonderful merits should be made known to everyone suffering with dyspepsia and biliousness." Jesse Barker, Printer, Humboldt, Kas.

In 1886, my son, suffered very much from cancer of the mouth. By advice of physicians, an operation was performed, extending from the jawbone, which they scraped but the cancer returned and grew rapidly. Finally, after trying many remedies in vain, I commenced to give him S. S. S.; after seven bottles had been taken the cancer disappeared entirely and though 7 years have elapsed, there has been no return, and I have every reason to believe that he is permanently cured. His cure is due exclusively to S. S. S.

MEDLEY FROM THE POETS.

The moon was shining silver bright.
An' bloodless lay the untrodden snow,
When freedom, from her mountain height,
Exclaimed: "Now, don't be foolish, Joe!"

An hour passed on—the Turk awoke;
A bumblebee went thundering by
To hover in the sulphur smoke
And spread its pall upon the sky.

His echoing ax the woodman swung;
He was a lad of high renown;
And deep the pearly caves among,
Giles Scroggins courted Mollie Brown.

Loud roars the wind in constant blast,
And cloudless sets the sun at even,
When twilight dews are falling fast,
And rolls the thunder drum of heaven.

O' ever thus from childhood's hour,
By torch and trumpet fast arrayed,
Beneath yon ivy-mantled tower
The old frog croaks his serenade.

My love is like the red, red rose:
He bought a ring with posey true;
Sir Barney Bodkin broke his nose,
And, Saxon, I am Roderick Dhu!

HIS SINGULAR CASE.

A Detective's Strange Experience with a Sleep-Walker.

"BROXTON, N. Y., May 14, 1873.—Send your best man to me immediately.

"WILLIAM HARDY."

Such was the telgram received by the chief of the bureau of which I am a member, and I was deputed to work upon the case; not because I was the "best man" connected with the bureau, but by reason of the fact that I was the only available man.

Four hours subsequent to the reception of the message I was conferring with Mr. Hardy—a man nearly sixty years of age, the proprietor of a small store connected with his residence—to whom I had made myself known, whose story was as follows:

"When, at the close of the rebellion, after a four years' service in behalf of my country, I returned to my home in this town, my health was so impaired that I could not follow my former vocation—that of a carpenter. So I converted one of the rooms in my house into a store and began to sell confectionery, cigars and other small articles. With the growth of the town my business has increased until it affords me an income sufficient to support my wife and myself—I have no children—in a comfortable manner; and I have been able to pay all the debts which I, owing to my impecuniousness, was obliged to contract during the earlier part of my career as a merchant," and he smiled as the last word fell from his lips.

"Early last evening," he continued, "I was called upon by a gentleman—a stranger to me—who said that years ago he borrowed nine hundred dollars of my father and had come to pay that amount and accrued interest to me—my father's sole heir. He did pay me nearly sixteen hundred dollars.

"As it was too late to deposit the money in the bank I placed it in my safe. I had scarcely done so when, glancing at one of the windows in the store, I saw the head and shoulders of a man, who looked like a tramp and who was watching me closely.

"The lower sash of the window was slightly raised and the idea suggested itself to me that this man might have been listening to the conversation which had been carried on in the room, learned about the money and was watching to see what I did with it. I stepped to the window, raised the sash still higher, put my head out of the window, looked up and down the street, but nowhere was the stranger to be seen.

"When I closed the store for the night I was inclined to take the money with me into the house proper. On second consideration I deemed it wise to let it remain where it was, as the safe is furnished with a combination lock, and I could leave the doors between the store and my sleeping-room open and thus be enabled to hear anyone who effected an entrance to the store and was tampering with the safe.

"This morning, to my intense amazement, I found that the money was missing from the safe, though nothing indicated that the store had been forcible entered or any tampering with the safe—whose combination is known only to me.

"I decided to employ a detective without delay and wired your bureau for assistance."

"May not the burglar have gained access to the store from some other part of the building?" I inquired.

"He could not without passing through my sleeping-room, as you will find by examining the premises, and I do not think he could have done this without waking me," was the reply.

"I am not so sure that you would have been wakened by his passing through your sleeping apartment, as a 'professional' manages to get about a building without making much noise. Have you looked through the house?"

"I have not."

"Let us do so," arising from my seat in the store as I spoke.

We started on our investigation of the premises and in the kithen found an unfastened window above a sink, below which, out of doors, were the tracks of a man's bare feet in the dirt that had been moistened by a slight rain about half past ten the previous evening.

A careful examination revealed similar tracks on the floor in the kitchen and on the carpet in his sleeping-room, convincing Mr. Hardy that I was correct in my supposition that the burglar had not directly entered the store.

"Though he passed through my sleeping-room without waking me I cannot comprehend how he could have reached the interior of my safe without injuring the receptacle," Mr. Hardy remarked.

"From long experience one's fingers become so sensitive as to enable him to open a safe when the combination is unknown to him," I rejoined; after a pause adding: "Can you give me any description of the man who watched you through the window?"

"I cannot, further than to say that he was evil-looking, had a heavy mustache and beard, was probably about six feet in height," was the reply.

"Were his mustache and beard light or dark?"

"I should say they were almost black."

"I will see if I can learn anything concerning the whereabouts of this man."

With these words I went from Mr. Hardy's presence, but two hours later returned to the store, to find him its sole occupant, greatly to my satisfaction.

"Well," at once dropped from his lips in an inquiring tone.

"I found your evil-looking suspect and in him a detective, who, so 'made up' that his parents would not recognize him, is working on the mysterious disappearance of a young man from a neighboring town, some four or five days ago," I said.

"The disappearance of Charles Walker?"

"Yes, that is the name of the missing man."

"It is a sad affair and wonderfully strange, too, as he was a person of spotless character and highly esteemed by all who knew him."

"I did not recognize my brother detective, but when he had made himself known to me acquainted him with my 'case' and your description of him. The latter caused him to laugh and say that he looked into your store by the merest accident.

"At the hotel where I took my supper, I asked the clerk if the establishment was provided with a burglar-proof safe. He gave me a negative reply and then, in the presence of the crowd that was in the office, I informed him that I had a large sum of money with me, and inquired who had such a safe in which I would be permitted to place the money over night. He mentioned several persons who had combination safes, adding:

"'Mr. William Hardy has one and his place of business is nearer than that of any other person whom I have named.'

"I learned, rather was informed, where you lived and then came here.

"During my previous interview with you you said that you were to be alone for a few days, or, more exactly, that your wife was passing a few days out of town with her invalid mother. I have a proposition to make to you—that you allow me to pass the night with you as your bed-companion. If the one who burglarized your safe last night was among those in the hotel who heard me speak of my money and attempts to secure the money which I am supposed to have placed in your safe, I assure you that I shall hear him if you do not."

"I heartily approve of your plan," Mr. Hardy rejoined.

"Then I will go and inform the clerk of the hotel that—"

Our conference was interrupted by the appearance of a customer and I went from the store, to which I returned a half-hour, more or less, later.

After we had retired for the night, I entertained—wearied, it may be—Mr. Hardy with some of the most exciting experiences that had been mine as a detective, which caused him to tremble from head to foot. Finally, however, he fell asleep.

The next morning, handing him a package, I asked:

"Is that what was taken from your safe night before last?"

"Yes," he fairly gasped, having examined the package. "Was my house again entered last night, without waking me?" he inquired.

"It was," I rejoined, "by way of the window over the sink."

"By a man or a woman?"

"A man."

"Where is he?"

"Within my easy reach."

"Was he among those in the office at the hotel when you spoke of your money?"

"No."

I waited a moment, and then began:

"Yesterday I casually learned that you are or have been inclined to somnambulism, and nothing else so tends to its development as excitement or anxiety.

"It at once suggested itself to my mind that the unexpected coming into possession of so much money would render you extremely nervous; that this nervousness would result in sleep walking; that, in a sleep-walking condition, you would give especial consideration to the money and be likely to remove it from the safe to some place where no one would look for it.

"These impressions were strengthened by what I had learned when here yesterday afternoon—that the mud tracks ended in your sleeping-room, proving that there was no mud on the feet of the one who removed your money from the safe when the deed was done; that your feet and the malefactor's were of the same size.

"What I told you with reference to asking the hotel clerk about a safe, and so forth, was one of the subterfuges—lies, in fact—to which, I am sorry to confess, we detectives sometimes are obliged to have recourse, for the purpose of gaining your permission to remain with you over night. And the 'experiences' which I narrated were designed to render you as nervous as possible, because, as I have said before, nervousness would probably cause you to walk while you were asleep.

"About two o'clock this morning you left your bed and went to your safe, which you opened. After feeling around in it you went from the house, closely followed by me, to a hollow tree in your back yard. Into the hole in the tree you placed your hand and the moonlight enabled me to see that a smile immediately stole over your countenance. From the hole I took the money."

"Well, I declare!" he exclaimed, after drawing a long breath.

For my services he compensated me liberally, complimenting me for my keenness and promising that if he ever again had business in my line it should be intrusted to me.—Fred W. Foster, in Chicago News.

Humorous Legal Complication.

About the queerest case at law this summer was that fuss in a small Maine village in this part of the state. Two neighbors owned dogs. One dog got afoul of the neighboring canine, and was chewing him to the queen's taste, when the owner of the under dog shied a club. The club broke the bellicose dog's forepaw. Straightway this dog's owner brought suit to recover damages. He lost his case, and was ordered to pay the costs of the action. But he didn't pay, and an execution was issued against his body, whereupon the deputy sheriff made a funny break. He got twisted over the verbiage of the document, and proceeded to arrest the man who had been sued. In the hubbub that resulted the real culprit took alarm, and, in order to save himself, went into insolvency before the sheriff got unsnarled and served the execution.—Lewiston Journal.

Her Part of the Worry.

One of Washington's bright women was present while her husband discussed the financial situation.

"I must confess," he said, "that the money market has worried me a great deal."

"It wasn't the money market that worried me," observed his wife.

"What was it?"

"It was the market money."—Washington Star.

Stupidly Obedient.

Harvard Lampoon has another story, new or old, of the traditional unimaginative servant.

Butler—There's a man below to see you, sir.

Mayberry—What did you tell him?

Butler—I told him you told me if it was a lady, to say you were in; and if it was a man, to say you were out.

Mayberry—What did he say then?

Butler—He said to tell you that he was a lady.

In the Dental Chair.

Gus De Smith—Your charge for pulling that tooth is fifty cents?

Dr. Molaryanker—Yes, that's the regular price.

"Here is a dollar bill."

"I can't make the change. What do you say to pulling another tooth for the change?"

"No, I thank you."

"Well, suppose I pull two teeth for the fifty. You can't kick about that."—Texas Siftings.

BIOGRAPHICAL NOTE ILLUSTRATED.

"Even as a child, Judson Warrington was conspicuous at school for his scholarship. He stood high among his classmates, and at their meetings was often called to the chair."—Harper's Bazar.

An Apparent Injustice.

Mollie had been to church for the first time, and on her return home her grandmother asked her what she thought of it.

"I liked it very much," she replied, "but there was one thing I didn't think was fair."

"What was that, dear?"

"Why, one man did all the work, and then another man came around and got all the money."—Harper's Bazar.

It Makes No Difference.

"I suppose you don't believe in courtship," said the paragraphist laughingly to the president of the gas company.

"Why not?" asked the president.

"Because lovers always turn the gas down, you know. Ha! ha! ha!"

"Oh that makes no difference," said the president. "The meter gets in its work all the same."—Texas Siftings.

Jones Knew His Weakness.

Somebody challenged Jones to fight a duel, thinking to scare him.

"Well, it's a go," replied that cheerful lunatic, "but only on one condition. You know how near-sighted I am? Well, to make things equal I insist that I shall be placed ten paces nearer my opponent than he is to me for the fellow's got an eye like a hawk."

Corrected.

"No smoking here, sir," said the guard.

"Excuse me," returned the stalwart stranger, "but you lie. I'm smoking here."—Judge.

HEROIC TREATMENT.

Dawson—I shall die if I'm not soon relieved of these hiccoughs. Do something to frighten me.

Mrs. Dawson—Booh! Scat! There's a snake under the chair! There's a mouse—

Dawson (in disgust)—Oh, pshaw! That sort of thing wouldn't frighten a baby.

Mrs. Dawson—Well, here's the bill from the dressmaker, for my new fall dresses!

Dawson (as he recovers from the shock)—Thanks, dear; they've gone!—Puck.

Must Have Shrunk Greatly.

"The most expensive bathing suit on the beach this summer," she said, with the air of one who knew what she was talking about, "was Miss Doolittle's."

"Really?" he said in some surprise.

"Yes, really," she replied. "It was made of the most expensive material, regardless of cost. Why, the cloth for it alone cost $12 a yard."

"Well, she didn't have to get very much," he said.

"She got three yards," she asserted. "I was with her when she bought it."

"Three yards!" he exclaimed. "Lord, how it must have shrunk before I saw her."

His Name.

A Detroit man took a friend of his out to see a flock of sheep he had, and the friend was particularly interested in a fine ram.

"What is he?" he asked.

"A Southdown."

"What's his name?"

"Oleomargarine."

"Oleomargine? What do you call him that for?"

"Because he is such a rank butter," and then they went in and took a horn apiece.—Detroit Free Press.

The Quickest Way.

"Giovanni," said the police inspector, sternly, "does that infernal hand organ of yours play 'After the Ball?'"

"Yees, sare," answered the terrified child of sunny Italy.

"Then bring it along here, quick!"

Within three minutes Giovanni was grinding out that tune with all his might in front of a saloon three blocks away and the riotous mob that had begun to loot the establishment was fleeing in all directions.—Chicago Tribune.

Eternal Fame.

Mrs. Rondo—Why don't you write something real good instead of writing so much? Many a man has made himself famous forever by a single poem.

Mr. Rondo—Who, for instance?

Mrs. Rondo—Why, the man who wrote: "Not a drum was heard; not a funeral note."

Mr. Rondo—And what was his name?

Mrs. Rondo—Oh, dear me. I've forgotten.—Life.

A Sympathetic Nature.

Hostetter McGinnis—What makes you think so?

Naval Etiquette.

An English admiral who was once visiting a French flagship laid down his quid on a convenient bulkhead before entering the officers' headquarters. When he came out again he was astonished to find the quid in the place where he had left it.

"Pooh!" said he, in the hearing of some of the sailors, "you Frenchmen will never be true sea-dogs. No English blue-jacket would ever have let an admiral's quid alone."

Whereupon one of the French sailors stepped up, touched his cap and said: "Beg pardon, admiral; I was chewing your quid while you were in there, but I put it back, you know, when I heard you coming out!"

A Comforting Reply.

His Fiancee—I do dread to meet your family. I'm afraid they will think I'm not dignified enough.

He—Oh no, the girls will take to you directly.

She—Which one shall I like best?

He—My youngest sister, Flossie, I think. She's an awfully silly little thing, and I'm sure you'll get on capitally together.—Truth.

An Inconsiderate Patient.

Physician (who has ordered his patient to take some sleeping powders)—Well, sir, do you sleep any better now?

Patient—Good Lord, doctor! I can sleep well enough, but just as I am about to close my eyes the nurse wakes me up and gives me a sleeping powder.—Fliegende Blaetter.

KEEPING DOWN HIS CONCEIT.

A Philosopher Who Finds it Necessary to Go Away From Home.

There is a man in Detroit whose financial position is such that he can live in comfort without doing other work than clipping his coupons. He is a reflective man, unknown outside the city of his residence, and every once in a while, without any apparent object, he leaves home and stays away for a month or two. The other day he returned from one of these trips, and to a reporter confided his reasons for going on these periodical journeys. Said he:

"I have to take these trips. I get so puffed up with my own conceit that it is necessary I go away once in a while to get the bubble punctured. Otherwise I would die from suffocation. When you are at home everybody knows you, and, having money, everybody bows to you. You feel you are attracting attention and are being talked about. It is one form of notoriety, or fame, some would call it, and to a vain man—show me the man who isn't vain—it is like cool water to a perspiring body. At home you exert an influence; people who realize the power of money look up to you.

"It is a growing city, and money is needed to help it along. As growth increases the value of everybody else's property, of course everybody has an axe to grind and is ready to bend the knee to the man who can set the grindstone in motion. He may be close as the bark on a tree, but he has the money, and we call him liberal, public-spirited, etc. We must pamper his vanity, you know.

"Now I am willing to acknowledge I absorb all of this flattery, and not being a good discriminator I put it all in the same class and allow it to raise me up inch by inch—in my own estimation—until I am, or think I am, on the top wave of popularity—a little god, so to speak. This is a dangerous pinnacle; a fellow is likely to forget himself and make a break that will cost him dear in spite of his money. But just get outside of the city limits and the only persons who find out you have money are the hotel servants and railroad porters, and they acknowledge it only in their attempts to extort fees from you. Nobody else pays the slightest attention to you—you are to them a mere atom in the panorama now passing before their eyes—a fleeting shadow that vanishes from the eye and memory in a moment. You travel on and on in this isolated condition until you finally fetch up in some big city, where you lose what little is left of your personality in the portals of a big hotel. With each day of your stay you drop one inch in your own estimation, and if you stay there long enough you will become you natural self again.—Detroit Free Press.

KENNEDY'S MEDICAL DISCOVERY.

DONALD KENNEDY, OF ROXBURY, MASS.,

Has discovered in one of our common pasture weeds a remedy that cures every kind of Humor, from the worst Scrofula down to a common Pimple.

He has tried it in over eleven hundred cases, and never failed except in two cases (both thunder humor). He has now in his possession over two hundred certificates of its value, all within twenty miles of Boston.

A benefit is always experienced from the first bottle, and a perfect cure is warranted when the right quantity is taken.

When the lungs are affected it causes shooting pains, like needles passing through them; the same with the Liver or Bowels. This is caused by the ducts being stopped, and always disappears in a week after taking it.

If the stomach is foul or bilious it will cause squeamish feelings at first.

No change of diet ever necessary. Eat the best you can get, and enough of it. Dose, one tablespoonful in water at bedtime. Read the Label. Send for Book.

DELANO DIARY

—Criterion Comedy Company at the Hall Tuesday evening, Nov. 14.

—The Delano cornet band has accepted an invitation to attend the opening of the city hall at Waverly next Monday.

—We are in receipt of a short communication from J. L. Parmeter, of Ferndale, Washington which came too late for this week.

—Our Board of Education actually had a meeting a short time since, while the "man on the board" was not present and did business too. Surely prospects are brightening, and our school is reported as flourishing.

—A. W. Wittman complains that on several occasions his Evening Journal has been taken from his store door where left by the news boy. He knows who got it one evening and threatens to make it warm for the next fellow who takes it.

—Gus. Anderson started out Monday morning to put a few shingles on his house, as rain was threatened. In some manner he lost his hold and fell to the ground receiving some severe bruises and a sprained ankle which is keeping him a prisoner in his room at present.

—Prof. Geo. B. Aiton, State High School inspector visited our schools on Monday. He was quite favorably impressed with the way they are being conducted; says we are on the right line and advises that we just keep right along. The pupils enjoyed his visit very much; some of them considered him an extra smart man.

—That is a very taking argument the Eagle advances for having the school-marms here twice a year, for examinination for certificates. She says, "and the thirty or so teachers from neighboring villages who help out the hotels and merchants during their stay will be forced to go elsewhere." The old bird always has an eye to business and might loose the sale of a few tablets and lead pencils from her supply house if the teachers don't come here. It is the $$ and cts that troubles her as usual.

—Rev. J. W. Powell, the new M. E. minister on this circuit, preached at Montrose Sunday morning and here in the evening. The fair sized audience at this place was well pleased. Rev. Powell, although a veteran in the service of his Master, does not appear so old as he is, and can preach equal to some of the very best younger men. The text for Sunday evening at this place was "These that have turned the world upside down are come hither also;" Acts xvii Ver. 6. The sermon was one calculated to set his hearers to thinking, and he presented some strong argument in favor of Christianity. The elder has decided to hold services twice a day at this point, preaching at 10:30 a. m. and 7:30 p. m., and at Montrose in the afternoon.

—Our city fathers are still deliberating on the question of surveying the river for the purpose of demonstrating that we have or that we have not a water power. What they want of a water power is a mystery to most of the citizens. What use is to be made of it if there proves to be one? It certainly looks like foolishness for the village authorities to pay out money from the village treasury for surveying the river with no definite object in view. If Niagara Falls were located within our village limits of what good would it be if we did not make use of them. If our village does not intend going into the manufacturing business what return do they expect for their trouble and expense? And if they do expect to run the village by power, in the future, would not steam or wind be better than experimenting on what has been demonstrated to be a failure as a power producer.

—Notice the change in time of the evening train east over the Great Northern, instead of leaving here at 4 p. m. it now goes at 5:21!

—Although neighboring towns have resurrected their last year literary societies, or established new ones, Delano has at yet made no move in this direction.

—The saloon keepers of Delano seem to think what the merchants deem good for the town, a home cash market for produce, would hurt their business and refuse to continue in the company partially organized. If they can organize an opposition company it will probably make trade good and prices high and make Delano the best market for produce west of the Sawdust city, if not the equal in all respects.

—The GAZETTE credits the Produce Purchasing Company with having a subscribed credit of $5.50.—Eagle.

Again we would advise the Eagle to read her own proof until it is possible for her to produce three consecutive lines without having two such obvious mistatements as is the case here before she bears down too hard on us for getting a period two figures too far to the left. In the item we intended to say $515, and not $5.15 as was printed. The Eagle is out of correct here at least 35 cents in citing our flures, this is to her of course, as is well known, quite a sum. The other blunder of the Bird is in using the word "Produce" the vote was to call it the "Delano Provision Company."

—The Delano Provision Company seem to be having a serious time organizing and getting down to business. At Friday night's meeting several were absent who had subscribed for 5 shares each lowering the amount of stock represented materially. It was stated that most of the saloon keepers had come to view the matter as being detrimented to their interests and likely would not assist in the project. Wittman and Catlin were appointed to see about Constitution and By-laws and as to the advisability of incorporating the company, and an adjournment taken. On Monday evening a meeting was called at Hanseman & Kohler's store from which the committee appointed at Friday's meeting was unavoidably absent. Those present report that nothing further was done, save to appoint I. Gutzwiller, Jr. as a committee of one to wait upon the saloon keepers and use his persuasive eloquence in an endeavor to induce them to come out to a meeting and show their public spirit in the welfare of the village. To their credit we will say two of them have attended meetings that we know of when the committee man appointed to solicit their presence was conspicuous for his absence, already.

LATER—It has finally been considered that the best way to get a good market for produce here is to advance a sum of money sufficient to meet emergences and go ahead. Consequently several enterprising individuals mostly the merchants of the place have advanced small sums each making a good start altogether, to Mr. Brunko, who will go ahead with the business in the Reichel building on Bridge street.

—We had entertained a better opinion of the local editor of our village contemporary than that displayed in the use of some of his big words, this week, aimed at our comments on the action of our school board, and at the action of the board itself in discharging their duty as they saw it. They probably knew what they were doing when they voted not to donate the use of our district school house to the Superintendent, as the Eagle says, two days in the spring and two days in the fall; turning out the higher department for this purpose. Every teacher knows that when the regular rotine of work for the week is interrupted by a couple of days of teachers' examinations the whole week is more or less lost to the school. If we are to have a High school we must attend strictly to our own business, and let the superintendent of Public Instruction look out for his own school room for examinations, if he must have them during school days. This plan of providing for everybody and everything that comes along out of district funds, instead of "keeping school" to the best advantage is exactly what ails our school that it has not long since been placed in the High school rank. As for the school house being the only available place in town we have a fine city hall, which, with a little trouble, could be supplied with temporary tables; and chairs are already there, in abundance; so that the teachers could be pleasantly and profitably entertained, by bringing their own books. We don't think any of them are dependent on the Delano district, or any other district for their text books, and the pupils ought not to lose time, nor the district money, on account of what can so easily be averted. The board will doubtless stand by its decision. And as we said last week it would be their duty to protect the school books from damage by handling by thoughtless people who frequently attend such examinations. We do not wish to be understood that the teachers as a rule are not well behaved and that they do not take good care of books, but all such know of those they would not care to trust books with.

—The editor's intention was to say $515 had been sold by the Delano Provision Company instead of the lesser amount that appeared in type. Since then the sum total has been increased to $565 worth.

—A letter addressed to Mr. A. Landhofner, 836, Palace street, Minn.," is held for more accurate address, in the Delano post office. Anyone knowing what Minnesota town has a Palace street might assist in having the letter reach its destination.

—When a dozen or so of men come together and endeavor to organize a business association without first organizing the meeting called for that purpose they at once show the necessity of a greater familiarity with Parliamentary rules and usages, and the great crying need of a Literary Society in our midst. Let us have a Literary Society.

When Conzet's poetical machine
Has been oiled, with vinegar, and kerosene,
Won't the Old Eagle have to scream?
Or, will she take another dream?

Personals.

Moses Williams is again in town for a season.

S. S. Ball and family Sundayed at Montrose with relatives.

D. D. Ames, of Rockford, was a Delano visitor on Wednesday.

John Mayer is home from Washington for a short time with his family.

Uncle Ben Parmeter, of North Rockford, was a GAZETTE caller on Tuesday.

The Misses Bauman are back at their business after seeing the sights at Chicago.

Street Commissioner, I. C. Steward, and Elmer Astrope are home from the West.

Joseph Lanway visited relatives and friends in this neighborhood, the past few days.

Ex-Village Marshal B. Riley, now of Rockford, smiled on his Delano friends on Monday.

Misses Lucy and Julia Hazeltine, of Minneapolis, visited their aunt, Mrs. Hawker, this week.

C. G. Roosen and family expect to start on a journey to the "Fatherland" via Montreal, in January.

Elmer Cruikshank returned this week from a protracted visit with his father's family at Marshall.

Henny Grafft left Monday morning for a trip of about four weeks in the interests of the Eagle.

Mrs. Cross, of Minneapolis, visited several days this week with her sister, Mrs. Bolton, of this place.

W. J. Smith, a merchant of Browns Valley, is visiting his old school-mate, George Bolton, of Delano.

Miss Julia Cunningham and Mrs. Peter Church left last evening for a trip to the World's Fair.

John Peterson, of the Soo Road takes quite frequent short lay offs, now-a-days. He was over this week.

Cramer Swortout, one of Wright county's old settlers, from near Montrose, visited Delano on business last Saturday.

Mrs. Catherine O'Leary, of Minneapolis, and her daughter Maggie, of Grafton, N. Da., visited Delano friends this week.

Fred Brandes is making arrangements to move to a farm near St. Michaels, where he will engage in getting out wood this winter.

Mr. Dahl, a civil engineer, from Minneapolis, came up Tuesday to look the village over with a view of establishing grades for the streets.

I. Gutzwiller was called by telegraph on Wednesday morning to St. Michaels on account of the illness of his mother. She died yesterday morning.

Miss Josie Campbell, of Litchfield, stopped over in Delano Wednesday night on her way to Watertown where she will teach a term of school in the Kelly district.

County Cullings.

Editor and Mrs. H. S. Saylor, of the Howard Lake Herald and Editor and Mrs. R. D. Topping, of the Waverly Tribune visited Chicago and the Fair last week.

Why don't somebody offer a handsome prize for the production or a genuine mugwump who does not want office? It would never be called for.—Buffalo Journal.

The Great Northern express company, last week, shipped here as a sample and for sale, a box of salmon from Seattle, Wash. Agent Corkins quickly disposed of them, and more wanted.—Cokato Dept., Herald.

The Board of Education at its meeting on Saturday afternoon reconsidered the action previously taken in regard to the night schools and will open evening sessions in the Blaine, Jackson and Winthrop buildings.—Minneapolis Tribune.

The Senator speaks as one having authority to say whether or not it would be called for. How came he so familiar with the mugwump business? Surely he has not concluded to switch off the track and to induce some one to offer a "handsome prize" before he does so, with the idea of raking in the "handsome prize." We don't believe this is the "handsome prize" he seeks.

From present indications we would infer that it is the intention of some of Wright county's would-be-leading politicians to arrange some kind of a mugwump ticket for next election with Hon. Alcynus Young Eaton on for Congress. We have no objections to A. Y. running for office on his own ticket, but do object to him or any other man so pronouncedly opposed to democratic principles, being thrust upon the democratic party of this district by any such means. Democrats have always had principles and still have principles which they choose to defend by their votes on election days, and they do not relish these mixed dishes served in such bungling style as they have been upon some occasions heretofore.

BORN.

LOHMILLER—On Monday, October 23, at Delano to Mr. and Mrs. John Lohmiller, a son.

DIED.

GUTZWILLER.—At her home, in St. Michaels, Thursday, Oct. 26, Mrs. Anna Gutzwiller, aged 83 years, 9 mos, and 15 days.

A FABLE.

In a gay and sunny barn-yard
Grew a timid rooster once,
So retiring, all the chickens
Shunned him as a tedious dunce:
Till their scorn at length arroused him,
And he swore an oath: "I'll show
What a fund of wit is in me,
I shall learn a comic crow!"
And he practiced and he practiced
Till he learned his comic crow.

Then, behold! he found his music
Won him straightway great renown,
"After all," observed the chickens,
"Merrier birds are few in town."
And they daily flocked to hear him,
Followed wheresoe'er he'd go.
Made a very lion of him—
Curious lion with a crow—
Cried, enraptured: "Was there ever
Such a truly comic crow?"

But before he'd crowed a year out
Fashion in the barn-yard changed,
And the chickens said: "This rooster
Manifestly is deranged.
He can do one thing, and does it
Till we're bored to death, you know."
So they cut him, and the outcast
Wheezed alone his comic crow,
Spirits, lungs and feathers failing
Died at last with one faint crow.

Yes, and that's the way to do it,
Human wag or chanticleer;
If perchance you have a future
Which you don't at all hold dear,
Or would lose your friends and perish
After everything's gone wrong,
Profit by a rooster's story,
Learn a single comic song.

HOW A PUZZLE WAS SOLVED.

When you want a certain article, you want the best make of that article, don't you?

But how to determine which make is best is what puzzles you, isn't it?

And when the puzzle is solved for you, by authority which cannot be questioned, you are pleased, aren't you?

And you would like to hear of one puzzle that has been solved for the people of the whole world, wouldn't you?

Well, we will tell you about that very puzzle, and its solution.

At the Universal Exposition of 1889 at Paris, France, the best sewing machines of the world, including those of America, were in competition. They were passed upon by a jury composed of the best foreign mechanical experts, two of whom were the leading sewing machine manufacturers of France.

This jury, after exhaustive examination and tests, adjudged that the Wheeler & Wilson machines were the best of all, and awarded that company the highest prize offered, the GRAND PRIZE, giving other companies only gold, silver and bronze medals.

The French Government, as a further recognition of superiority, decorated Mr. Nathaniel Wheeler, president of the company, with the Cross of the Legion of Honor, the most prized honor of France.

That is how the puzzle of the best sewing machine in the world was fully solved by the most competent authority in the world in favor of the No. 9 and No. 12 Wheeler & Wilson machines.

The No. 9, for family use, and the No. 12, for manufacturing uses, are the best in the world to-day.

And now, when you want a sewing machine, if you do not get the best, it will be your own fault.

Ask your sewing machine dealer for the No. 9 Wheeler & Wilson machine, and if he do ss not keep them, write to us for descriptive catalogue, prices and terms.

Agents wanted in all unoccupied territory.

OUR OWN.

If I had known in the morning,
How wearily all the day
The words ukkind would trouble my mind,
I said when you went away,
I had been more careful darling,
Nor given you needless pain:
But we vex our own with look and tone
We might never take bake again.

For though in the quiet evening
You may give me the kiss of peace,
Yet it might be that never for me
The pain of the heart should cease.
How many go forth in the morning
That never come home at night,
And hearts have broken for harsh words spoken
That sorrow can ne'er set right.

We have careful thoughts for the stranger,
And smiles for the sometime guests,
But oft for our own the bitter tone,
Though we love our own the best.
Ah! lips with the curve impatient,
Ah! brew with a look of scorn,
'Tiere a cruel fate, were the night too late,
To undo the work of morn.

—Mrs. M. E. Sangster, in Scrap Book.

TEN of the M. E. Bishops and several other noted men have been in St. Paul, this week, holding meetings concerning Church Extension, Freed Man's Aid and other benevolences. Next week the missionary meetings will be held in Minneapolis.

IN not lynching Prendergast, the assassinator of Mayor Harrison, the people of Chicago showed their respect for the efficiency of the police force, so recently under the control of the now dead Mayor. Lynch law is wrong. But provision for the safe keeping of such individuals as Prendergast should be made by law.

THE ordinary mortal would not like for a Secretary a man who listened with so little interest to the extremely violent threatenings of his employer, as the Secretary of the late Carter Harrison is reported to have done. If the truth is told he certainly should have brought the man before proper authorities to inquire into his sanity.

IF the published stories concerning the incompilency by drunkenness, lack of experience in the business, etc., of the recently appointed Chippewa Pine Lands inspectors, contain the truth, or anywhere near it, something must at once be done to rectify the blunders. Six dollars a day for incompetent men to spend their time in drunkenness now, won't do. This thing needs investigating anyway. Clear it up. Make it right, if every one of the appointees have to be "resigned," to give place to a competent one who will try to earn his wages.

MAYOR EUSTIS, of Minneapolis, was just getting a good boom started for the candincy for Governor, on the Republican ticket, next fall, when he goes to work and vetoes a bill that was claimed to be to the best interests of Christian people, but which would deprive the city of a large part of her revenue, which now is paid in the shape of fines, but serves the purpose of license. And now the preachers are scoring the Mayor in great shape, for not signing the bill, instead of vetoing it. They are also discussing the evil desired suppressed, and the probabilities are that the Mayor will soon have another opportunity to show his hand.

THAT over-zelous news gatherer, of Minneapolis, who hastened to give the world such an acurate description of Michael Cady, the Union Depot newsboy, of that city, has succeeded in making himself even more notorious than he has Michael, whom he described as the murderer of Carter Harrison. If Michael is as dangerous as the paper made him out, it would be pretty safe for that news-gatherer to "look a little out." However we presume Michael is familiar enough with the news paper business to hold no grudge against the man who sought to have a Minneapolis man in every occurrence of importance in the country.

Wherein the Senate Repeal Bill Differs From That Passed By the House.

The Senate repeal bill which has been substituted for the House one, with only nine dissenting Populist and Democratic votes, leaves out the following words which are in the latter:

But this repeal shall not impair or in any manner effect the legal tender quality of the standard silver dollars heretofore coined, and the faith and credit of the United State are hereby pledged to maintain the parity of the standard gold and silver coins of the United States at the present legal ration as may be established by law.

The Senate bill substitutes for them:

And it is hereby declared to be the policy of the United States to continue the use of both gold and silver as standard money, and to coin both gold and silver into money of equal intrinsic and exchangeable value, such equality to be secured through international agreement, or by such safeguards of legislation as will insure the maintenance of parity in value of coins of the two metals, and the equal power of every dollar at all times in the markets and in the payment of debts. And it is hereby further declared that the efforts of the government should be steadily directed to the establishment of such a safe system of bimetallism as will maintain at all times the equal power of every dollar coined or issued by the United States in the markets and in the payment of debts.—Globe.

All Wool Underwear.

When you go out in the sun, wear all wool garments; if you go in the rain, do likewise, and when you stay in the house there is no need to change the material. All wool clothing is quite good enough for the sons and daughters of men at any time of the day or year. It is cool in summer, warm in winter, comfortable and adaptable for demiseason wear, and healthful, sanitary and generally comforting at all times and for all occasions. The fibric may be heavy or light; thick or thin, according to fancy, but let it be wool first, last and all of the time.

This advise, given by an experienced physician, agrees perfectly with the observations of many persons who have in their own cases tried the effect of wearing garments of all sorts of materials. Many of them have found silk too cold, linen too absorbent and cotton too close woven to be agreeable to a sensitive surface. It seems to be an accepted fact that cotton is the least desirable of all materials and wool the very best. But it must be fine wool and free from admixture of vegetable fiber. Silk is the best material to mix with wool if mixtures are required, but the consensus of the medical profession is directly in favor of wool.—New York Ledger.

EDITOR GAZETTE:

Some of the readers of your paper might be glad to hear through its columns that we, (wife, baby and myself) are well and still living "out west."

The weather for the past two weeks has been very fine, no rain for a wonder and the roads are quite dry and passable.

We moved from Crescent Harbor, "Widby Island" to Ferndale, on the main land this fall. This charge is a circuit, has three preaching places and covers lots of ground. The country is thickly settled around here, three thousand people living within a radius of three miles. Fruit is the main product, such as apples, pears, prunes, plums, cherries, and a variety of other small fruits. There are not many Indians here and what there are will soon be gone. The Red Man on on Puget Sound is fast becoming extinct from consumption, and especially the half-breeds. They all die young.

We are near the River Nook Sack from which plenty of fish may be caught. We buy fine silver salmon, two for 25 cents, eight pounders.

We have a fine little church here at Ferndale and Pastorage times are very hard here now, "no money" is the most prevalent saying.

My little son grows nicely, has four teeth and more coming. Wife is quite well and our work goes on fairly.

Yours as ever.

"AN AMERICAN BEAUTY."

By special arrangement with the publishers, we are enabled to make every one of our readers a present of an exquisit oil panel-picture, 20 inches high, entitled, an "American Beauty," which has been admired by all who have seen it. This superb picture is from the brush of the same artist who painted the "Yard of Pansies" and "Yard of Roses." The reproduction is equal insevery respect to the original, from which it cannot be distinguished, and accompanying it are full directions for framing at home at a cost of a few cents, thus forming a beautiful ornament for the high narrow wall-spaces for which it is so difficult to obtain pictures of the proper shape. It is a suberb Thanksgiving gift. Send your name and address to the publisher, W. Jennings Demorest, 15 East 14th Street, New York, with three cents (either stamps or pennies) to pay for the packing, mailing, etc., and mention that you are a reader of the BUFFALO GAZETTE and you will receive by return mail one of these valuable works of art.

The Journal is this week in receipt of a note from Dr. G. F. Girback, formerly of this county, late of Minneapolis, in which he says that he is now in Duluth, "not as a fugitive from justice but engaged in the practice of his profession and doing a big business." Says he is finely located front parlor window with bay window, steam heat and everything o. k. The doctor is a great rustler and keeps track of his old Wright county friends by being a constant subscriber to the Journal.—Buffalo Journal.

The tramp has heard many comments upon the flippant way in which the recent sad case, to which he needs not to allude by its name, just concluded at the court house. was handled by counsel concerned, and he is glad for the credit of humanity, that all such comments were unfavorable. 'Twas a trajedy that was being enacted—not a comedy—a thing to shudder at, and not a subject for mirth; and the Tramp is of opinion that any man who could make a jest of the moral ruin of a young girl, and the birth of an infant branded with shame, could never have tasted his mother's milk, but was raised upon a bottle, and asses milk at that.—The Town Tramp in the Aitkin Age.

The Aitkin Age closes an article on "The Presidential Bee" with the following paragraph:

"As an illustration of the good work of the bee aforesaid the Age points to the attitude of the Hon. David Bennett Hill at present. The bee is singing his siren song in Mr. Hill's ears, and per consequence the whole country is ringing with plaudits of Mr. Hill's actions. Mr. Hill has much to atone for and the Age trusts the little busy insects will never intermit his work about that gentleman's bonnet till his "works meet for atonement" are completed. As for the result thereof being a Democratic nomination for the presidency—well, as Private Mulvaney said, 'That's another story.' But all the same more power to the bee."

The state historical society yesterday received a valuable addition to its many curious treasures in the form of the fourth patent ever issued in this country. It was granted to Francis Bailey of Philadelphia, for "certain methods not before known or used for forming punches by which to impress on the matrices of printing types, whether such types be for letters or devices." It is dated Jan. 29, 1791, and bears the signature of President George Washington and Secretary of State Thomas Jefferson, and is the first patent of which the original is known to be in existence. It was sent to Mr. W. H. Grant of this city to be placed with the historical society by Mrs. Mary Baxter, of the patent office, and formerly of St. Paul.—St. Paul Daily News.

Mark Twain's Latest—Romance of an Esquimau Maiden.

A magazine is usually satisfied with one strong feature for the month. The Cosmopolitan, however, presents for November no less than five very useful ones. William Dean Howells gives the first of the letters of the traveller, who has been visiting this country from Altruria. We have read Mr. Howell's impressions of the Altrurian; but in this first letter we have the Altrurian's impressions of New York, with some comments upon our government and society, calculated to awaken the most conservative minds. The second feature of the Cosmopolitan is the portion of the magazine given up to color work, no less than ten superb color illustrations being presented for the first time in magazine history, accompanying an article by Mrs. Roger A. Pryor on "Changes in Woman's Costumes." The third feature is "American Notes," by Walter Besant, who was recently in America and is doing the United States for The Cosmopolitan a la Dickens. The fourth feature is an article by General Badeau on "The Forms of Invitations Used by the English Nobility." The article is illustrated by the facsimile of cards to the Queen's drawing room, to dinner at the Princess of Wales, and to many leading houses of England. Finally, we have a new and very curious story by Mark Twain, called "The Esquimau Maiden's Romance. It is in his happiest vein it is illustrated by Dan Beard. The November number presents the work of mony artists, among whom are: C. S. Reinhart, Otto Guillonnet, J. H. Harper, G. Hudson, Franz von Leubach, George Wharton Edwards, F. Schuyler Mathews, Dan Beard, W. L. Sontag, Jr., F. G. Atwood, C. Hirshberg, J. Habert-Dys, August Franzen, Louis J. Read, J. N. Hutchins and Hamilton Gibson.

MORAL suasion failing, opponents of the use of tobacco are this season furnished out of hand with a powerful argument for abjuration of pipe and quid. PERIPATETIC hynotizers are the latest European sensation and terror. They go around making defenseless men tell their family secrets in public barrooms and sending to sleep with their fascinating eyes the beautiful young Parisian women they meet in omnibuses. The most alarming part of it is that there is no law under which these examples of the Evil eye can be punished. And even if there were what good would it do so long as they could fix their glittering optics on the judge and put the jury to sleep with a wink?

DESPITE frequent denials, it is still asserted by those who are in a position to have inside facts that the proposed race between the locomotives Queen Empress and 999, representing respectively British and American locomotive building, will certainly come off, as the date has been set, and terms and preliminaries arranged. The race is to be from Buffalo to Albany over the New York Central, a distance of 297 miles, and the wager is $10,000, to be devoted to charity. The race will be a novel and thrilling one, if it ever occurs, but it is to be hoped that it will not be started. The risk of life is too great.

THE life insurance companies in the United States, taking no account of assessment corporations and societies, hold assets to the value of about $850,000,000. These companies receive from policy holders about $175,000,000 a year, which means fully $10 for every head of a family. Their total income is nearly $220,000,000 annually. Out of this enormous revenue about $100,000,000 a year go to the insured. The total expenditures are about $150,000,000 a year. More than 5,500,000 policies are in force, covering liabilities to the amount of $4,500,000,000, in round figures, or $70 for every man, woman and child.

THE receipt books of the United States treasurer show that there are ten custom houses in the United States which collected less than $100 each last year. At Kennebunk, Me., the total receipts were fifteen cents. St. Mark's, Fla., returned $7.20. The port of Alexandria, Va., collected $73.45, but the collector was paid $214.82 and his deputy $1,200. At Castine, Me., which returned $145.56, the collector received $150 salary, besides fees and commissions. This looks like waste, but these collectors and deputies serve as a police force against smugglers, and probably save the government hundreds of thousands each year.

INTERESTING NEWS COMPILATION.

FIFTY-THIRD CONGRESS.

Extra Session.

WEDNESDAY, Oct. 25.—In the senate the silver repeal bill was further discussed. In the house bills were introduced providing for the retirement of national bank notes and for the issue in their place of United States notes, and providing that no pension claim heretofore or hereafter allowed shall be annulled, suspended or set aside unless it is shown that the pension was obtained by fraud or perjury. The bankruptcy bill was further considered.

THURSDAY, Oct. 26.—Discussion of the silver repeal bill occupied the time of the senate. In the house the death of the chaplain, Rev. S. W. Haddaway, of Maryland, was announced, and a committee of seven was appointed to attend the funeral. The senate resolution extending the acknowledgments of the United States to foreign governments for their participation in the world's fair were concurred in. The bankruptcy bill was further considered.

FRIDAY, Oct. 27.—In the senate Senator Pfeffer's amendment to the repeal bill providing for silver coinage at a ratio of 16 to 1 was defeated by a vote of 39 to 28, which was taken as meaning that the Voorhees bill would become a law. The measure was further discussed. In the house a resolution calling for information as to state banks was the cause of animated discussion, and an attempt to pass it disclosed the presence of less than a quorum, whereupon an adjournment was taken until the 30th.

SATURDAY, Oct. 28.—In the senate the urgency deficiency bill was passed. Various amendments to the silver bill were defeated, and Senator Sherman closed the debate, saying, during his remarks, that the further purchase of silver and making it the standard of value would, it was believed, work irreparable injury to the business of the whole country, to the wages and property of every citizen of the land. In the house the bankruptcy bill was further discussed.

MONDAY, Oct. 30.—In the senate the three months' campaign for unconditional silver repeal practically ended. A few minutes after 7 o'clock in the evening the Voorhees bill was passed by a vote of 43 to 32. The bill now goes to the house. In the house Mr. Oates (dem. Ala.) called up his bill to amend the naturalization laws and said the object of the proposed law was to restrict the looseness existing in the naturalization of aliens. The bankruptcy bill was further discussed.

A FOUL DEED.

Carter H. Harrison, Mayor of Chicago, Assassinated.

Called to His Door by a Crazy Office-Seeker and Shot to Death—The Murderer Gives Himself Up—Story of the Crime.

MAYOR HARRISON KILLED.

CHICAGO, Oct. 31.—Carter Henry Harrison, mayor of the city of Chicago, was assassinated at his residence, corner of Ashland and Jackson boulevards, Saturday evening. Three of the four shots fired by the assassin took effect in the body of the mayor. One bullet entered the abdomen, another pierced his body to the right of the right nipple, plowing its way through the axillary region, and a third lodged in the palm of the left hand.

After the assassin had completed his work he turned back to the door, the coachman of the Harrison household at his heels, fled across the lawn and out of the gateway leading to Ashland boulevard, north on that thoroughfare to Adams street, and east on Adams street out of sight.

Gave Himself Up.

Forty-five minutes later Patrick Eugene Prendergast, excited, out of breath, and panting from his long run, bounded up the steps of the Desplaines street station, and handing a revolver across the desk to Sergeant Barber, admitted the crime and was locked up for it.

CARTER H. HARRISON.

Undoubtedly Insane.

The story of the murder seems to indicate that it was committed by an insane or partially demented man. The act was cold-blooded and deliberate. The man had come to the Harrison mansion bent on murder, and whether actuated by motives the birth of an unbalanced mind or not, he did his fiendish work well.

Slain in the House.

Mayor Harrison had been at the fair nearly all day Saturday. He returned to his home about 5 o'clock "dead tired," as he said. Dinner was at 6 o'clock, and after it Mr. Harrison went into the back room and lay down upon a couch, saying he would take some rest. Shortly after 8 o'clock a ring came at the front door bell. Mary Hansen, the maid who answered it, found waiting there a small-sized man with a wizened, smooth-shaven face. In answer to his question he was told the mayor was at home. He then gave his name as Prendergast and said he had particular business with Mr. Harrison.

Assassin Admitted to the House.

Fancying that she recognized the man the maid admitted the visitor to the hall and went to wake Mr. Harrison. Apparently the stranger was familiar with the house, for, instead of waiting in the hall where the maid had left him, he walked back to the door of the room in which the mayor was. He had barely reached it when the door was opened and he was confronted by Carter Harrison.

The Murder.

Drawing a revolver the murderer placed the weapon so close to his victim's body that the clothes were burned and fired three shots, The first bullet struck the mayor in the abdomen. As he reeled backward a second bullet struck him just above the heart, and a third shot, fired as Mr. Harrison fell prostrate, wounded the now dying man in the left hand.

Shot at His Pursuer.

The assassin then left the house and on reaching the street broke into a run. Mayor Harrison's coachman, on hearing the shots, realized what was transpiring, and securing a revolver, started in pursuit. Prendergast, seeing that he was being followed, paused long enough to fire a shot at his pursuer, who returned the fire. Neither shot took effect, and jumping on a street car at a near corner, the murderer rode down town and surrendered himself at the Desplaines street station.

Death of the Mayor.

In the meantime a sad scene was being witnessed at the home of Mr. Harrison. Attracted by the shots Preston Harrison hastened from his room on the upper floor of the mansion to ascertain their cause. He found his father lying on the floor his life blood pouring from the gaping wounds. Almost at the same instant neighbors arrived and an attempt was made to raise the prostrate man. He was still conscious and moaning in his agony. He asked his son not to move him, saying that he knew he was dying. His friends tried to reassure him, but he was firm in the belief that the end was near. In a few minutes he lapsed into a state of semi-unconsciousness, not, however, before requesting that Miss Annie Howard be sent for. This request was repeated twice—in fact, his dying words were a desire to see her. Miss Howard was Mayor Harrison's affianced, and they were to have been married at Biloxi, Miss., November 16. She came to the house on being informed of the tragedy, but before reaching the side of her betrothed he had passed away. Her grief on realizing her loss was deep and the scene when she was shown his dead body was pathetic in the extreme, as was that on the appearance of his daughters, Miss Sophie Harrison and Mrs. Heaton Owsley, and his daughter-in-law, Mrs. Carter Harrison, Jr. The sons, Carter, Jr., and Preston, bore up bravely for a time, but finally succumbed as the sense of their terrible loss dawned fully upon them.

All the doctors who saw Mayor Harrison expressed the opinion that death resulted from the wound in the abdomen and not from the one in the chest. There were three wounds—one in the pit of the stomach, one in the right side between the fourth and fifth ribs and one in the left hand. The wound in the stomach, causing internal hemorrhage, produced death.

The Assassin.

After giving himself up to the desk sergeant at the Desplaines street station Prendergast refused to talk. He was disarmed and placed in a cell. He was dressed in a shabby-genteel manner, is about 23 years of age and weighs about 125 pounds. His aspect is forbidding. Insanity was written both in his features and in the restlessness of his manner. Inspector Shea soon arriving, the prisoner was placed in a patrol wagon, and heavily guarded, was transferred to the central station, located in the city hall. Around this place an immense crowd of angry citizens had gathered. There were loud threats of lynching passing from mouth to mouth as the patrol wagon with Prendergast arrived. The officers, however, had little trouble in forcing the crowd aside and entering the building.

Why He Did It.

The prisoner was ushered into the presence of Chief of Police Brennan and a corps of shrewd detectives, where he was submitted to a cross-fire of questions which were calculated to secure from him the story of his crime, and detect whether or not his insanity was real or feigned. He was a most abject-looking person as he faced the officers, and his every look, word and action gave evidence of a disordered brain. At the conclusion of their examination of Prendergast the universal conclusion of officers, reporters and others who were present was that Mayor Harrison's assassin was undoubtedly an insane man.

From the mass of intelligible and unintelligible answers given by Prendergast it was developed that he was a newspaper carrier. He declared that he had worked hard to secure the election of Mayor Harrison last spring, and that no recognition of his services had ever been made by his victim. He said that the subject of elevation of railroad tracks throughout the city—which has been discussed in the newspapers, and which Mayor Harrison has been urging since his election—had occupied his attention for many weeks. He had formed a plan for track elevation which he was sure would be a success, in fact, he knew he was the only man in the city who could elevate the tracks. He had told Mayor Harrison of his plan, and had asked that he be given the position of corporation counsel in order that he might have power to put them in operation, and thus put a stop to the daily loss of life at the grade crossings in the city. Mayor Harrison had promised him the place, but had not kept his promise. Feeling that the mayor had betrayed his confidence, he made up his mind to kill him, and in pursuance of his determination had, on Saturday, purchased a revolver for four dollars, and proceeding to the mayor's residence, had shot him. He felt that he was justified in killing him, and fully expected to be acquitted. He gave but the most meager details of the dreadful occurrence—not as much as are narrated above. He could not remember, he said, whether there had been any conversation between them prior to the shooting. As has been stated, the officers feel certain that Prendergast is insane. His relatives, however, say they never noticed any signs of insanity in the unfortunate youth, and that insanity was unknown in his family for generations back.

Intense Excitement.

As the news of the assassination spread throughout the city crowds flocked to the city hall, the newspaper offices, club rooms and hotels eager to hear the horrible details. The utmost excitement prevailed among the angry people, and expressions of indignation and horror and dire threats against the assassin were heard on all sides. A big force of policemen guarded the entrances to the city hall and kept back the excited crowds which pressed forward, loud in their denunciation of the mayor's murderer. No scenes of violence occurred, however.

At the House of Death.

A great but quiet and orderly crowd assembled about the dead mayor's Ashland boulevard mansion, and until far past midnight the streets in the vicinity were packed with sorrowing citizens. A force of policemen guarded the residence all night. None were admitted to the house except city officials, aldermen and immediate friends of the family.

The regret was universal throughout the city at the awful occurrence. Clubs and political meetings, both of republicans and democrats, adjourned immediately upon an announcement of the sad news. Deep sympathy was expressed on all sides for Miss Howard, who was to have been married to Mr. Harrison, and for his sorrowing sons and daughters.

Sad Close of the Fair.

Especially sad is the taking-off of the mayor in this awful manner coming as it has on the eve of the closing of the Columbian exposition. Since its inception Mayor Harrison has been a prominent character in connection with its history. Especially fitted to receive the honored guests of all lands, Mr. Harrison's great ambition was to be mayor of Chicago during the world's fair period. He has been a most prominent figure at all the notable gatherings at Jackson park during the fair season. On the day of his death he led a procession of the mayors and other officials of fifty or more American cities who had gathered in response to Chicago's invitation to celebrate Cities' day. But a few hours before he was stricken down by the assassin's bullet he had addressed this gathering at Music hall, his burning eloquence as he referred to the glories of the fair, and the conscious pride shown in his utterances with reference to the city which he loved, attracting marked attention and winning for him uproarious applause. During his remarks he gave utterance to a belief that he would yet live to see Chicago the metropolis of America and the third city in the world in point of population. The shock experienced by the visiting officials on learning of the death of him who but a few hours before stood before them, vigorous and eloquent, can better be imagined than described.

An inquest was held on the remains of the dead mayor at his late residence Sunday morning. Prendergast was brought to the scene of his awful deed and was identified by the servant girl who admitted him on his fatal mission. The prisoner refused to make a statement, but admitted that he was at the mayor's residence Saturday evening. The physicians who had made a post mortem examination of the body declared that death resulted from the bullet wounds found, and the jury returned a verdict holding Prendergast to the grand jury on a charge of murder.

The funeral of the dead mayor will take place on Wednesday, and the remains will be interred at Graceland cemetery. The body will lie in state at the city hall from Tuesday morning until the hour of the services, in order that citizens may take a last view of their assassinated ruler.

The festivities planned for closing day at the world's fair were not held, the great exposition dying without the elaborate ceremonies for which all preparations had been made. Instead memorial services were held in Music hall, and the flags at Jackson park were placed at half-mast.

A Washington dispatch says that since the opening of the silver debate in the senate Senator Dubois has been daily in receipt of postal cards written by Prendergast, the burden of which was the silver question, disclosing the fact that he was a devotee of silver, even to the point of an unbalanced mind.

Messages of Condolence.

Innumerable telegrams bearing words of sympathy with the family of Mayor Harrison, and of regret and horror at the occurrence, have been received by the dead man's relatives. Among them are messages from ex-President Benjamin Harrison, Secretary Gresham, Senator David B. Hill, Don M. Dickinson, Maj. Gen. Miles, Henry Irving, ex-Chief of Police McLaughry and the world's fair commissioners from several foreign countries. Resolutions of regret were adopted on Sunday by many clubs and other organizations at meetings called especially for that purpose. In nearly all the churches Sunday feeling references were made to the dead man by the pastors.

Newspapers of Chicago and almost every other American city contain editorial articles deploring the death of Mayor Harrison, and expressive of indignation at the assassin's deed.

His Career.

Carter Henry Harrison was born near Lexington, Ky., on February 15, 1825, and may be said to have inherited his taste for political life. His great-great-grandfather was the ancestor of President William Henry Harrison, his grandfather a cousin of Thomas Jefferson and he himself a cousin of John C. Breckinridge.

His father died when he was 8 months old, and he was left to the care of his mother—a daughter of Col. William Russell, of the United States army, one of the pioneers of the northwest, of which Illinois is now a part. From his mother Mr. Harrison inherited those principles which in 1850 placed him in the front rank of the emancipationists of Kentucky. Most of his education, preparatory to entering the sophomore class of Yale college, he received from Dr. Marshall, brother of the chief justice, the father of Tom Marshal, the great orator. Graduating in 1845 he commenced the study of law, but did not enter into practice at once, as his mother needed his company and comfort.

In Chicago Since 1855.

In 1851 he went abroad, traveling for two years in Europe, Asia and Egypt. In 1855 he commenced a prospecting tour through the northwest, but reaching Chicago became so impressed with the young city that he invested all his means in real estate, expecting also to enter into the regular practice of the law, but his acute business foresight induced him to confine his efforts entirely to real estate transactions, thus laying the firm basis of an ample fortune.

He Enters Politics.

Mr. Harrison did not actively engage in politics until 1870, being elected during the succeeding year a member of the first board of county commissioners. He held office until December, 1874, when he took his seat as a member of congress from the Second district of Illinois. His term in congress was marked by an earnestness and ability which made him one of the most prominent members in that body. A resolution, introduced by him, to fix the presidential term at six years with ineligibility for reelection and making the retiring president a senator for life, drew the attention of the country to him as a man of broad and radical views. His efforts in behalf of the centennial appropriation bill exhibited him not only as an energetic worker and ready debater but as a brilliant orator.

A Candidate for Governor.

Mr. Harrison spent the summers of 1874 and 1875 in Europe with his family. He was elected mayor of Chicago in 1879, 1881, 1883 and 1885. Against his own desire he was nominated for governor of Illinois in 1884, and during the fall of that year conducted a most energetic and brilliant canvass which resulted in cutting down the republican majority of 37,033, enjoyed by Gov. Cullum, to 13,000.

Married Twice.

Mr. Harrison was married on April 12, 1855, to Miss Sophy Preston, who came from a distinguished southern family. His wife dying in Europe in 1876, he married in 1882 Miss Marguerite E. Stearns, daughter of one of Chicago's oldest and most respected and wealthiest citizens. The second Mrs. Harrison died in 1886.

Mr. Harrison had received and accepted the nomination for mayor in 1887, but before the campaign had fairly opened his second wife died and, bowed with grief, he withdrew and started on his tour of the globe, leaving Chicago in the hands of Mayor Roche. His travels began July 24, 1887, and ended November 8, 1888. Everything of importance in connection with them was recorded by Mr. Harrison in his newspaper letters and his book, "A Race with the Sun." Returning, he was received with a popular ovation unique in its way, and retired to private life, devoting himself to literature and business interests.

Defeated.

Reentering active politics in 1891, Mr. Harrison was nominated for the mayoralty by his personal friends, although Dewitt C. Cregier had been renominated by a democratic convention, and began a canvass against Hempstead Washburne, Elmer Washburn and Mr. Cregier. He was defeated, and Hempstead Washburne was declared mayor of Chicago.

His Last Election.

The election of Mr. Harrison as mayor last spring, in spite of the most fierce opposition he had ever encountered, is fresh in the minds of all, since his campaign was closely watched all over the country. His life ended in the midst of what Mr. Harrison considered the crowning honor of his career—the dignity of the chief magistracy of Chicago during the World's Columbian exposition.

Was Soon to Have Married.

The announcement of the wedding of Miss Annie Howard and Carter H. Harrison at Biloxi, Miss., November 16, was publicly made a few days ago, and one of the most distressing features of the tragic death of Mayor Harrison is the terrible grief of the fiancee.

Of ten children born to Mr. Harrison by his first wife four survive, the others having died in infancy or in early youth: Mrs. Lina Owsley, the wife of Heaton Owsley; Carter H. Harrison, Jr., William Preston Harrison and Miss Sophie Harrison, all residents of Chicago.

Has Probably Perished.

BENZONIA, Mich., Oct. 31.—Henry Johnson, an eccentric resident of this place, embarked from Frankfort Tuesday, intending to cross Lake Michigan alone in a sail-boat. His intention was to go via Chicago and the Mississippi river to New Orleans, all the way by water. His boat has been found wrecked on the beach south of Frankfort and the life-saving crew are searching for his body.

TELLING THE CHILD A STORY.

At tea-time in the ruddy light—
Chrisanthemums were in their glory—
My baby came to say good-night,
And beg for just "one little story."

I told her how a girl like her
Came long ago, somewhere or other,
And brought her doll and made a stir,
And begged a story from her mother,

Who, tired and listless, also crossed
The little story-begging beauty
With news of how another glossed
Her irksome story-telling duty.

Still backward was the tale referred
To weary her, but when I ended,
As if I had not said a word,
With looks half-pleading, half-offended,

She clasped my neck—her childish trust
Had made the hardest heart compliant—
"A little one," she said, "please—just About a fairy and a giant."

I kissed her close, and off I went:
"Once on a time," low, slow and steady,
She heaved a sigh of sweet content;
My darling was asleep already.

—Good Words.

A STRANGE WILL.

It Brought Fortune and Happiness to Two Lovers.

Yes, she was dead at last—Margaret Demorest, of Stony Lodge—and the shock of her demise had shaken Bellevue from center to circumference. For years her numerous relatives, each with an eye to the estate, had watched her movements from a respectful distance, which she herself had interposed between them, and their hearts had grown sick with hope deferred.

Heart disease, the doctors said, when she was found one morning with a smile of peace frozen on her stern and withered features. The relatives accepted the verdict with due resignation, following the remains of the "dear departed" to their final resting place amid an ostentatious display of crape. But when the will was read the excitement of the heirs-at-law rapidly ascended to fever heat. Always eccentric in life, Miss Demorest had retained that eccentricity to the end and woven it into her last will and testament.

With the exception of a few bequests to her servants, the whole of her property, landed and personal, to wit: Stony Lodge, her present residence, with its beautiful park, which was a very Eden of loveliness; Rose Villa, her winter resort on Lake Helen, Fla., together with a splendid house in town and money to the amount of five hundred thousand dollars, was to pass into the sole possession of that one among her kinsfolk who should discover the hiding place of the twelve Demorest rubies.

Should the gems remain undiscovered after the lapse of one year from the date of death the estate was to be sold and a home for old maids founded with the proceeds.

"The old cat!" muttered fashionable Mrs. Meredith, viciously. "She hid those rubies herself, the spiteful thing!"

"It is too provoking!" pouted her pretty daughter Maude.

"I shall contest the will," said thin-lipped Reuben Gray. "It cannot stand."

Mrs. Meredith was Miss Demorest's niece and Reuben Gray her nephew. The two were brother and sister and the nearest akin to the dead woman.

Next came Margie Vane, child of a favorite nephew, who was to have been the heir had he not displeased his aunt by marrying against her will a girl of obscure parentage—"a pauper," Miss Demorest called her.

Harold Vane had died some years back, closely followed by his wife, and the one daughter, Margaret, was left alone in the world and utterly penniless.

Mrs. Meredith had taken her—for the old aunt had remained obdurate—and she was now serving in the capacity of maid to her beautiful cousin Maude.

Margie Vane was not present at the reading of the will. Mrs. Meredith considered it unnecessary, and Margie herself had not the faintest hope of being remembered kindly by her father's stern old relative. When, therefore, they returned in anger and disappointment and gave an account of the wording of the will Margie's hazel eyes opened wide with wonder.

That afternoon and many ensuing afternoons Mrs. Meredith, Maude and Margie walked over to Stony Lodge and wandered fruitlessly about amid the treasures of bric-a-brac, statuary, books and rare old china.

On one of these occasions Margie met Will Demorest, a cousin several times removed of her father. He was a frank, handsome young fellow, with dark blue eyes and close, curling, fair hair. His was the genuine Demorest face, the index of a strong, noble character.

By occupation he was an artist in glass-blowing, having learned the art in Venice. He had done considerable work for Miss Demorest, with whom he was a prime favorite.

"So you thought you would have a look for the rubies with the rest of us," said Mrs. Meredith, with a sneer, as she found the young glassblower examining the books in the library one morning. "Yet I thought you abhorred mercenary considerations."

"I am not in quest of the gems," Will replied, as his eyes rested in unmistakable admiration on Margie's fair, sweet face.

"Humph! I hope you don't take me for a lunatic or a fool, Will Demorest," was the scathing rejoinder.

"For neither, I assure you," said Will, with a bow. "Only at present I am more interested in pearls than rubies. Cousin Margie, may I show you the house? I believe I know it more thoroughly than most people."

Margie shyly acquiesced, and the two went off together, leaving Mrs. Meredith and Maude to continue their search.

"Are you anxious to find the rubies also?" asked Will, as they paused in the china closet to admire the cut glass.

"I have not even looked for them," answered Margie, with a bright smile.

"They are magnificent gems," said Will, "and were never set. I saw them just once, and they nearly took my breath away."

"I should like to see them," Margie said, musingly; "but oh, Will, were they more beautiful than these exquisite cups? Surely that is impossible."

The cups in question were, indeed, exquisite. Blown of the costliest Venetian glass, lily-shaped, with curled leaves for saucers, and glowing with rainbow tints, they resembled nothing so much as a bed of gorgeous tropical flowers.

Margie's eyes sparkled as she looked at them.

"How lovely! How dainty! How fairy-like!" she exclaimed, breathlessly. "See, Will; this one is exactly like an opal with a touch of fire, and here is an amethyst and here a glowing emerald. Oh, Will, do look! See how that strange glow, as of hidden fire, flashes from each! This one is jacinth, this beryl, and—Will Demorest, here is a ruby! Oh, the beauty! The real gems cannot be more superb!"

As she spoke she took the ruby cup into her hand. Will half started forward as if to prevent her, but drew back again with a pale, startled face.

Before he could frame a reply Mrs. Meredith and Maude appeared upon the scene.

"Margie," cried the former, "put down that cup and come along. I should think you would have more pride than to dawdle here all day talking with Will Demorest."

Margie's soft, hazel eyes filled with tears as Lawyer Fay entered the room, and from under his bushy brows glanced sharply at each of the group.

"Hunting for rubies, eh?" he said, sarcastically. "But Miss Margie seemed to be the only successful one of the party. This is a rare bit of glass, Miss Margie, and was blown by our friend here," with a motion of his hand toward Will.

Margie's hand tightened on the cup in her surprise; her rosy forefinger pressed a raised stamen in the calyx of the lily bell, when, presto! change! it sank beneath her touch, and her startled eyes gazed straight into a small cavity where glowed a ruby of inestimable value, like a drop of rosy fire.

"Solved!" shouted Lawyer Fay, as his eyes also beheld the gems.

Will, very white, shrank back against the wall, while Mrs. Meredith and her daughter pressed closer to Margie and the lawyer.

"The rubies!" gasped the avaricious woman, making a dive for the other cup.

But her lawyer placed himself in her way.

"I beg your pardon," he said. "The discovery is Miss Margie's, and, in accordance with the terms of the will of my deceased client, she is sole heiress to the Demorest estate."

Mrs. Meredith grew pale with chagrin. Maude burst into tears, and Reuben Gray, who had heard all from the door, announced his intention of breaking such an unjust will.

"You may try it," was all Lawyer Fay said to the threat.

Will came slowly forward and congratulated Margie on her good fortune.

"And my congratulations are none the less sincere that with them I resign the sweetest hope of my life," he said.

"Resign a fiddlestick!" muttered the old lawyer. "Margie, that boy refused to be made Miss Demorest's heir—insisted that it would be an injustice to those nearer of kin. Then she made him blow these cups of tinted glass, with the central cavity and spring. She inserted a ruby in each cup, which, combined with the different tints, gave them their rich coloring. He watched her hide the rubies and he has kept the secret. Does he not merit some reward?"

Margie flushed and glanced timidly at Will. Then she looked around for her aunt and cousin. Both had disappeared.

"Take her, Will," said the old lawyer, with twinkling eyes, "and bless ye, my children."

With a melodramatic gesture he, too, vanished, and I think the young people were not long in coming to an understanding, for cards are now out for the wedding.—Leeds Mercury.

A QUESTION OF PRIVILEGE.

It Resulted in Disaster and Loss on Both Sides.

It was on a highway running into a city in the north; one man was driving out with a load of bricks and the other driving in with a load of hay. Both attempted to get the best side of a mudhole, and as a consequence their teams came head to head and stopped.

"You there!" shouted the brick man.

"You there yourself!" replied the other. "Going to turn out?"

"No."

"Neither will I."

"I'll stay here a whole year first."

"And I'll stay ten of them!"

Both proceeded to make themselves as comfortable as possible, and to appear careless and indifferent as to results. Other travelers took the other side of the hole and passed them by, so it became a question of endurance. At the end of an hour the hay man said:

"If there's any one man I hate above another it's the human pig."

"Then it's a wonder you haven't hated yourself to death!" was the retort, and silence reigned supreme again.

Another hour passed, and the brick man observed:

"I'm going to sleep, and I hope you won't disturb me."

"Just what I was going to ask of you," replied the hay man.

Both pretended to sleep, but at the end of the third hour the hay man suddenly called out:

"Say! You are a mean man!"

"The same to you!"

"Where are you going with those bricks?"

"Four miles out, to John Dayton's. Where are you going with your hay?

"To Stiner's brick yard. Say, man, I'm John Dayton myself, and I've traded this hay for bricks!"

"Well, I'm young Stiner and I was driving the first load out!"

"What fools we are! Here, take all the road."

"No, no—let me turn out."

"I'll turn."

"No—let me."

And in their haste to do the polite thing the load of hay was upset and a wheel was taken off the brick wagon. —Yankee Blade.

How He Gauged It.

A Devonshire farmer went to London to see the sights. While walking down the Strand he saw a card in a tavern window bearing the inscription: "Devonshire cider sold here." The old man's heart warming towards his native beverage, he entered the public house and called for "a pint o' zider." The liquor being drawn, he placed it to his lips and half-emptied the measure, putting it on the counter with the remark that it was "very poor stuff."

A cockney standing by, thinking he could raise a joke at the farmer's expense, said: "I say, mister, do you know how that cider was made?"

"No," said the farmer.

"Well, I'll tell you. They stuck up a barrel of water at one end of a shed, and stood back at the other end and threw apples at it."

"Did they?" said the farmer, slowly sipping the cider. "Then they didn't hit that barrel mor'n once."—Tit-Bits

ITALY'S POOR PEASANTRY.

The Oppression of the Money-Lender Felt Heavily Since 1880.

Sir Dominic Colnaghi, in his latest report on labor in Italy, gives some interesting facts concerning the condition of the peasantry of Padua, Venice and Vicenza. He says that after the union of Venetia with the kingdom of Italy, and down to 1880, the times were prosperous and the prices and rent of land increased. Then came the agricultural crisis. Many among the small farmers were compeled to sell their cattle to pay their rent, the rate of which was too high to enable them to realize a profit, and the rents have not yet fallen to the level of the agricultural products.

The peasantry are fed from the produce of their farms, but all extras are provided by accessory industries, such as the raising of stock, which still forms one of their principal resources, pig and poultry breeding, etc. These undertakings require a certain amount of capital. The funds are supplied by money-lenders, who sometimes belong to the middle classes, but are often peasants who have made a little money. The interest on the money lent amounts frequently to one hundred per cent. and is occasionally higher, as, for instance, on the advances of Indian corn, of which generally enough is not grown on the farms to last throughout the year. The quantity advanced has to be repaid in kind, and has often to be bought at high rates, so that, at times, the interest amounts to two hundred per cent.

Goose-breeding is a long-established industry. The peasant receives from the money-lender an advance of ten dollars for the purchase of fifty goslings. When, in the course of five or six months, the geese are fattened, the peasant farmer, in addition to the repayment of the loan in cash, gives the money lender one fat goose out of every ten. If any geese die during the fattening the loss is borne by the peasant. In the contract of soccida, under which a third party supplies cattle to the farmer, receiving half the profits derived from the raising of stock and some other special dues, the gain to the lender is reckoned at about forty per cent. The contract may be fair or not, according to circumstances, but in many cases it presses very heavily on the farmer, who has to bear all the losses, while dividing the profits.—Chicago Journal.

PUNISHING CHILDREN.

Effect of the Free Use of the Whip in Correction and Training.

An item recently appeared in a metropolitan newspaper in which a father boasts of having whipped his nineteen-year-old daughter. He asserts that an occasional whipping is a benefit to such youngsters, and that he considers it his right and duty to correct them in this way.

It depends altogether upon the sentiment that the average parent desires to inspire in the minds of his children whether he shall take this course or not. That must be a curious sort of disposition that will, like a common cur, turn back and fawn upon the hand that beats it.

If parents desire to be feared by their children, to have all pleasure and gayety suspended at their approach, to be looked upon as tyrants, to make the home a place to get away from at the earliest opportunity, to fill the mind of childhood with memories of arbitrary dealing, unjust accusations and a general atmosphere of petty tyranny, then the whip is an excellent constituent in the make-up of the household equipment. Dogs and children and some men's wives are the few remaining creatures on which wrong-headed, bad-dispositioned men vent their wrath through the medium of the lash. Even the average horseman long ago learned that a whipped colt was a spoiled colt, and that very much more can be secured by gentleness and kindness than by beating and banging.—N. Y. Ledger.

A Bad Fall.

"You are very late this morning, Mr. Baldwin," said a dry-goods merchant recently to one of his clerks. "Do not let it happen again."

"Very sorry," said the clerk, "I met with a serious fall."

"Indeed," replied the merchant relently. "Are you hurt much?"

"Principally, sir, in your estimation," answered the clerk respectfully.

"Oh, never mind that," said the merchant kindly. "I am very sorry, and had no intention to be severe. We are all liable to accidents. How did you get the fall?"

"Well, you see, sir," said the clerk confidingly, "I was called quite early this morning—earlier, in fact than usual."

"Ah!"

"Yes, sir; but somehow or other I fell asleep again."

"Go to your desk, sir, and don't try that on again," exclaimed the merchant, with an air of severity which was belied by the twinkle in his eye, which denoted that he enjoyed the joke.—N. Y. Herald.

A Russian Village Fire Department.

In a Russian village there is not even such an organization as we possess in this country in the small volunteer companies. In their stead is a log stable with thatched roof, containing an old-fashioned hand-pump and three casks mounted on wheels. These are kept filled with water, and each is drawn by a single horse. The horses are the property of the commune, and they are kept tethered outside the cabin, ready for duty at a moment's notice. A place is also set apart in the hut for the muzhik, who serves as watchman, an office that is held, turn by turn, by the inhabitants of the township. The location selected for this cabin is as near as possible to the residence of the pristav, or the district captain of police, and upon an alarm of fire he drives to the scene in his telega at the head of the procession of carts and peasants. — Harper's Weekly.

HOME HINTS AND HELPS.

—Measure Cake Spiced: One cup butter, two sugar, three and one-half flour, four eggs, one cup milk, one teaspoon baking powder, a teaspoon each of cloves, spice, cinnamon and nutmeg. Bake in layers and put icing between.

—Egg Gruel: This will generally cure a cold if taken as soon as the slightest symptoms appear, says the Companion. Beat the yolk of an egg with a teaspoonful of sugar and a small pinch of salt; stir into this gradually a cupful of hot milk, then the white of the egg beaten to a stiff froth. Drink at once.—Rural New Yorker.

—Potato Cakes: Stir into cold mashed potatoes an egg or two, and a very hot milk if they are very stiff; add a dash of finely-powdered spices, salt and pepper, and minced parsley; mix well and roll into flat round cakes. Roll the cakes in fine bread crumbs, fry to a nice golden color, and serve hot. Garnish with fried parsley. — Housekeeper.

—Forcemeat Balls: Shred a pound of veal and the same weight of beef suet, and a bit of bacon, all together, beat it in a mortar very fine, then season it with sweet herbs, pepper, salt, cloves, mace and nutmeg, and when you roll it up to fry add the yolks of two eggs to bind it. You may add oysters or marrow at an entertainment.—Good Housekeeping.

—Floating Island: Beat thoroughly the whites of six eggs, add half a box of guava jelly and half a tumbler of currant jelly. Beat together until well incorporated. Set on the ice. Make a rich cream custard, and when cold and ready to serve, pour it into a pretty glass dish, and drop the island by tablespoonfuls on the custard. Serve it with cake or crackers that have been buttered and browned in the oven.—Boston Budget.

—Lemon Ice: The favorite, is made by taking the juice of six lemons and the grated peel of three and the juice and rind of one large sweet orange. Steep all together one hour and then strain and add one pint of water and one pint of sugar; stir well until the sugar is all dissolved, and then freeze. If you open your freezer three times during the operation, and stir up the contents well, it will improve the result.—Housekeeper.

—Gumbo Soup: This is made from the green pods of the okra which is grown mostly in the south but is coming into use here. Select the pods while the seeds within are green and can be easily sliced. As they are very mucilaginous when cooked they make a ropy soup which needs no thickening. Take two quarts each of the sliced okra pods and ripe tomatoes and a small onion sliced. Boil until the vegetables are very soft and can be all strained through a seive, then return to the kettle, add two quarts of stock of either beef or chicken, preferably the latter, season to taste with salt and pepper and if not as rich as liked add a tablespoonful of butter. The okra can be used alone or without the tomato as it has a flavor of its own much relished by many.—Orange Judd Farmer.

IN THE SICK ROOM.

Practical Hints to Be Applied by the Home Nurse.

Sickness is a calamity from which no flesh is exempt. There are balms for the wounds of the rich, but the poor must bear their own infirmities. With love, exquisite neatness, patience, encouragement, quiet, and a little hospital learning wondrous cures can be wrought.

A piece of new muslin dipped in a glass of cool water will remove sordes from the teeth and cool the lips of a patient. Sore lips should be anointed with a little diluted water.

If a child has sore eyes wring a sponge out of warm water containing a pinch of salt and trickle a stream on the inflamed lids, letting the water run toward the nose. As there is the danger of contagion the drying towel should not be used by others.

Chewing will stop the ordinary nose bleeding, and the shock of dropping a cold key or a handful of pennies down the back will often give relief. In case of a severe attack, syringe the nasal cavity with cold salt water. If this does not stop the flow of blood, throw the head back, raise the arms up as far as possible, and apply cold sponges to the bridge of the nose and the back of the neck.

The quickest way to treat a burn or scald is to cover it with carron oil and flour and bandage with linen. In case of prostration from either accident, administer a mild stimulant.

When a delicate person is fatigued and has no appetite sponging the body with bathing whisky, diluted alcohol or milk, will nourish the system and produce rest or refreshing sleep.

A bug in the ear may be drowned out with a little warm water. Apply with a sponge or syringe, and after each injection incline the head with a jerk so as to dislodge the contents of the cavity.

Distressing vomiting may be relieved by applying to the stomach a hot shingle or woolen pad brought from the oven.

In cases of sleeplessness as well as sickness frequent changes of pillows will have a soothing influence. The case should fit the pillow and be kept smooth. A change of nightgowns is restful, and the refreshing sense of cool water or some spicy toilet water, like lavender or orange flowers, applied to the forehead, throat, hands and feet can not be overestimated.

A patient should never be raised suddenly to receive food, drink or medicine. Aside from distressing the sufferer there is danger of heart trouble. Place the arm under the pillow and gently force the invalid into a position between lying and sitting. Medicine cups and porcelain spoons are now in general use, and save considerable unnecessary torture

To induce a little baby or a growing child to put out his tongue drop a little sweet oil on the upper lip.

Only bright, happy, healthy subjects should be discussed in the hearing of a sick or ailing person.—Chicago Times.

Don't Drink at Meals.

So many people say they can't eat this and they dare not touch that. The doctor forbids them coffee or tea, and so on, when really it is not half so much what as how they eat. Not one person out of ten masticates his food properly. Nearly everybody drinks liquids of some sort while eating, which is very bad, and how many take a glass of iced water just before their soup? The wonder is not that so many are sick, but that so few are.—Chicago Mail.

PAID UP LIKE A MAN.

One Man From Lexington, Ill., Who Keeps His Word in Chicago.

He was short, had stubby red chin whiskers, wore one of these little turn-down collars which the Beau Brummells of back counties affect, and was evidently a tiller of the soil. He was in such a hurry that he forgot to knock when he entered the Tribune office at the World's fair grounds, and all he blurted out when he got well inside the door was:

"Say!"

It took him two minutes to get his breath, and then he continued:

"Say, I've got five dollars in the office down-town. It's in an envelope and my name's on it. When I got in town this morning I seed a couple of fellows a follering me and one of 'em tried to put his hand in my pocket, so I walked right up to your office and left the five dollars there, for I wanted something to get back to Lexington, Ill., on."

"Well? What do you want?"

"What do I want? I want a dime to get out of this place. When I put that five up in the office I kept a dollar and sixty-five cents, and I have done gone and spent it all, every cent of it. I thought I had a dime in my pocket and I kept a feelin' and a feelin' of it and holding on it, but jest now, when I started to go back to town, I pulled it out and it was nothing but a dogoned measly cent, and here it is."

And from the innermost recesses of his trousers pocket the wanderer from Lexington, Ill., produced a little copper coin.

"And say," he went on, let me have that dime. I'll see that you get it from that Five I've got down town."

Before extending the financial assistance requested the man in the office said:

"What did you do with your one dollar and sixty-five cents. How did you spend it?"

A smile of joy broke over the countenance of the agriculturist, and he began:

"Had four beers, 'en I seed a woman playin' an organ and I gave her a dime and bought her a beer. And I went down the 'Pleasawnce' and—" here his voice fell to a whisper, "and went into Keiro, and to tell you the truth, mister, I went in there twict."

Then the old man stopped a minute, looked out of the window at the stately white home of electricity, and in a changed tone of voice, continued:

"I'll tell you, mister, my little, measly mind can't comprehend this thing. It's too great. It's too darned big for me to understand. Just about a year ago I come up to Chicago with some hogs, and I come down here and looked over the grounds, and there didn't seem to be nothin', and now I come down here to-day and—and—well, dog on it, it's too big, it's too big for me.

"Down hum I've got forty dollars saved up—forty dollars. An' I've got a woman and a gal who's just grown up, and when I get back there I'm goin' to say to 'em: 'Take just as much of that forty dollars as you want, take it all, if you calkerlate you'll need it, and go an' see that fair.'

"But say," and here he came back to the question before the house. "Say, mister, you will let me have that dime to get back to town, won't you? I'll leave it for you out of that 'five.'"

He left the office with a silver ten-cent piece firmly grasped between the thumb and forefinger of his right hand and, to the honor of the horny-handed tiller of the soil from Lexington, Ill., be it said, that he "left that dime" for the man who had relieved his financial distress with the business office employe who was acting as his safety deposit vault.—Chicago Tribune.

"Sweet Charity."

In the Artists' Exhibition of 1893 at the New York Academy of Design, there was exhibited an oil-painting by J. L. G. Ferris, entitled "Sweet Charity." Its richness of coloring commanded instant attention, while the lesson it taught was so impressive that one naturally returned to it for a second view.

Its subject is a young lady of colonial times who is on an errand of charity to one of the poorer families of the town. She has a sensible, charming face, which expresses with remarkable fidelity the sentiment of her errand. There is not a home that this charming picture will not ornament. It must be seen to be appreciated.

"Sweet Charity" was purchased by the Publishers of The Youth's Companion and has been reproduced in colors in large size, 14½x21.

KNOWLEDGE

Brings comfort and improvement and tends to personal enjoyment when rightly used. The many, who live better than others and enjoy life more, with less expenditure, by more promptly adapting the world's best products to the needs of physical being, will attest the value to health of the pure liquid laxative principles embraced in the remedy, Syrup of Figs.

Its excellence is due to its presenting in the form most acceptable and pleasant to the taste, the refreshing and truly beneficial properties of a perfect laxative; effectually cleansing the system, dispelling colds, headaches and fevers and permanently curing constipation. It has given satisfaction to millions and met with the approval of the medical profession, because it acts on the Kidneys, Liver and Bowels without weakening them and it is perfectly free from every objectionable substance.

Syrup of Figs is for sale by all druggists in 50c and $1 bottles, but it is manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co. only, whose name is printed on every package, also the name, Syrup of Figs, and being well informed, you will not accept any substitute if offered.

—The Eagle pitches into Dr. Catlin after the style she has for several years and tries to belittle him in the eyes of the pu[illegible] It is no use Eagle, you have long since done your worst. Your reputation is such throughout the county that what you say about any man is not apt to hurt him much. The facts concerning the return of the $5 loaned Mr. Brunko are these. After the Delano Provision Company failed to establish an organization, Mr. Brunko acting on suggestions that had been made in the meetings, went around to those who had shown a disposition to help or had signed the paper, and offered to accept as a loan the amounts, and go ahead with the business. Dr. Catlin gave his share, but before Mr. B. got away he dropped some remarks about a paper being drawn up and deposited in the bank when Mr. Gutzwiller got home. Dr. Catlin then told him that all he asked for a paper was that he leave the one he had with him, on which the amounts were simply marked paid, with George Schaffer or some one that had a safe; that if he could not turn around without Gutzwiller telling him, and if Gutzwiller was going to run the concern, he would have nothing to do with it. Mr. B. undertook to defend the "enterprising financier," where upon he was informed by the doctor that he had heard that the way he became owner of the newspaper plant, now the Eagle, was through a stock company, and he would probably own this soon if allowed to. That his actions in connection with Chas. Hitz and the Building and Loan Association did not commend him very highly, etc., etc. Mr. B. then offered to return the money, but was told that if he was going to run the business himself to go ahead with it, and took it along. A few days after he stepped in and handed the Dr. the $5 saying, "I guess you had better have your money back as Gutzwiller will probably have too much to do with it to suit you." The money was readily accepted with this explanation. Mr. B. did not deliver the message the Eagle says he was instructed to deliver. We have now, as we have had from the first nothing but favorable comments toward having a home cash market for farm produce, and would advise all our readers to give Mr. Brunko a trial before selling elsewhere. From what we have heard he is paying good prices. In fact one buyer complained that Mr. B. had paid two cents per pound for a hide that he had offered but one cent per pound for and that Mr. B. was bound to loose on it. Of course that's Mr. B's. look out and not the farmers who gets double what he would have received had not Mr. B. opened up shop.

County Cullings.

Just which way for Sunday the editor of the Buffalo Journal will look the next time he ambles past that "silly looking and ungainly fellow," but innocent newsboy at the Union depot in Minneapolis, that he accuses of killing Carter Harrison, is a question. Better be on your guard, A. Y.

On Monday last Waverly celebrated the opening of their new City Hall, a nice one, after their customary manner of doing things. Many visitors were present. S. M. Owens made the address of the occasion. The Delano band assisted the Waverly band in furnishing music. The Albion Orchestra was present for the evening programme. All enjoyed the exercises of the day.

It is rumored even unto Delano, that Senator Eaton has already picked from Monticello, and laid away to season, a very fine new "shelaliah" to be used in suppressing Frenches yips, when they threaten to attract attention along about next election. The club is said to be one that may be used to entirely spike the guns, suppress the batteries and cause the forces to take to the woods in case it is wielded for business in the skillful hands of the angered Senator, at the County Seat. It seems to us just a little early to pick such weapons Senator. It may become overseasoned and fail you in your hour of greatest need.

COMMUNICATED.

It is very amusing, if not edifying, to see our neighbor of the Tribune inventing imaginary interviews with Major Baldwin, erecting as it were, straw men, and then with all the fury at his command proceeding to knock the stuffing out of them! Then how heartless and unfeeling he is. After building these straw men and tearing them to tatters, he draws a long breath, surveys the ruin he has wrought, and with fiendish glee "pauses for a reply!" Now we have great respect for our neighbor up the liue, and knowing the danger to the nervous system caused by undue excitement, we beg of him to "pause" try to keep in a normal condition; if the Major should be found with the party on tariff reduction, if he should prove to be all right, of course it would be like oil to the torn up and lacerated feelings of our neighbor and would probably, act as soothing syrup upon the nerves of a fretful child, but only think of the agony endured, the waste of grey matter; in fighting something that, at the present only exists in the imagination, and may never and will not exist otherwise. "Pause," neighbor, "pause;" take a good long pause and fight real battles. Take our word for it you will feel a great deal better.

Tariff is a tax, no question about that, and we have always said so, and yet we believe in protection to a certain extent, and protection to certain products of American labor too. For example, when a man by his own energy and hard labor succeeds in accumulating and splitting up a good nice pile of stove wood for the winter months, that pile of wood should be protected. We will go that far even with the knowledge before us that Brother French may accuse us of weakening on the Tariff. We are with the protectionists on that point. Will Brother French take us thus far into the fold? To use the language of our distinguished and respected neighbor up the line "we pause for reply."

Some of our local politicians are waiting quite anxiously for the election news from Ohio. The election there means much to McKinley and McKinleyism. If McKinley does not carry the state by the old time Republican majority the doughty Major may not lead the Republican party in '96. McKinley's friends were evidently very much frightened a short time ago, and the Democrats confident, but since the Hon. "Soup-House" Billy came to the rescue things have changed. That is the only thing that can pull McKinley through. Soup is a great thing, and if McKinley should ever get to the White House and leave Billy in the soup it would be base ingratitude, We hate to admit it but we are afraid that Soup-House Billy has gone and done it. If he has we will not be slow to acknowledge it. But its too bad, Democrats deluged in soup and the Republicans swimming to the State House of Ohio, in the same stuff.

THE SHEEP, THE GOAT AND THE PIG.

The sheep, a goat and eke a Porker fat,
Filling one cart, were wending to the fair,
Not for diversion—dear me, no! not that!
They were to be, my story says, sold there.
The driver them not thitherward did whirl
To see the "giant" or the "spotted girl."
The pig upon the way not more had holla'd,
Had scores of butchers on his traces follow'd.
He people's ears with such a clamour rent,
That his companions, beasts of milder bent,
Did greatly wonder what on earth he meant.
The driver cried to him, "Why all this row?
Why not keep quiet? Say, what meanest thou?
Far more polite than thou, thy comrades twain
Might teach him to behave—thy noise restrain.
Look at that sheep—he's dumb—no words to pass
Across his lips—he's wise!" "He's an ass!"
Replied the pig. "If but his case he knew,
Like me he'd bellow till his face was blue.
So would that other personage polite,
Were she but conscious of her sorry plight
One thinks her milk, the other thinks his wool
Is all that's wanted, and that keeps them cool.
It may be so; but still with fear I'm shaken,
For well I know that all I yield is—Bacon!"
Our pig did reason like a subtle wight,
Complaint nor fear can shake great Heaven's will;
The least forseeing, then, are wisest still.
—From the French of the La Fountaine.

To All Our Customers.

As we have so many customers owing us and have carried many long enough to long eat up all the profits just to give you a show but cannot wait any longer as we have over $1000 out among you good people, but you all say you think yours is but a small bill and we can get along without it. When there are so many of the same idea who could pay but will hold back, but now we have come to an end and cannot wait any longer, as we must have money by November 15th, and shall look for you to come and settle up now on old account. We must do this or stop business as we must have money. If you have no money bring in your wheat and get your cash for it, what it will bring, and pay your small bills. Now don't wait and think it will be just as well a week or so later for we must have it by the 15th of November. Now come and settle up and oblige,

THE SONG OF THE "No. 9."

My dress is of fine polished oak,
As rich as the finest fur cloak,
And for handsome design
You just should see mine—
No. 9, No. 9.

I'm beloved by the poor and the rich,
For both I impartially stitch;
In the cabin I shine,
In the mansion I'm fine—
No. 9, No. 9.

I never get surly nor tired,
With zeal I always am fired;
To hard work I incline,
For rest I ne'er pine—
No. 9, No. 9.

I am easily purchased by all,
With instalments that monthly do fall;
And when I am thine,
Then life is benign—
No. 9, No. 9.

To the Paris Exposition I went,
Upon getting the Grand Prize intent:
I left all behind,
The Grand Prize was mine—
No. 9, No. 9.

At the Universal Exposition of 1889, at Paris, France, the best sewing machines of the world, including those of America, were in competition. They were passed upon by a jury composed of the best foreign mechanical experts, two of whom were the leading sewing machine manufacturers of France. This jury, after exhaustive examination and tests, adjudged that the Wheeler & Wilson machines were the best of all, and awarded that company the highest prize offered—the GRAND PRIZE—giving other companies only gold, silver and bronze medals.

The French government, as a further recognition of superiority, decorated Mr. Nathaniel Wheeler, president of the company, with the Cross of the Legion of Honor—the most prized honor of France.

The No. 9, for family use, and the No. 12, for manufacturing uses, are the best in the world to-day.

And now, when you want a sewing machine, if you do not get the best it will be your own fault. Ask your sewing machine dealer for the No. 9 Wheeler & Wilson machine. If he doesn't keep them, write to us for descriptive catalogue and terms. Agents wanted in all unoccupied territory. WHEELER & WILSON MFG. CO.

WHEN THE WHISTLE BLOWS.

You don't find no man fonder much
Of music sweet than me.
The hummin' of the butterfly,
An' of the bumble-bee;
The laughter of young children,
The shout of schoo' boy gay,
Is music sweet; each 'nought to chase
The blankest care away.
But there's no kind of music
Quicker kin my ear unlock
Than the music of the whistle
When it blows at six o'clock.

I love to hear the music of
The organ in the church:
And the robbin singin' sweetly
On his swayin' hazel perch;
An' the babble of the brooklet
As it rippies 'mong the trees;
'Tis sweet, angelic whispers
Of the scented evening breezes:
But, b'gosh, there aint no music
Gives my ear a sweeter shock
Than the music of the whistle
When it blows at six o'clock.

Oh, I tell you, when a man is
Nigh to three score years an' ten,
And he's kept his shovel movin'
All day 'gainst younger men;
When his poor old back 's breakin',
And his head a-wh'zzin' goes;
An' he feels his heart a-goin'
Downward, downward to his toes,
There's no sweeter kind of music
In all Mother Nature's stock
Than the music of the whistle
When it blows at six o'clock.
—James Rowe, in Yankee Blade.

POPULISTS don't apear to be thriving this "off year." Perhaps Donnelley's "big potatoes" have all come to the top of the barrel and rolled out into the two old parties again. The old partis seem to have enough of this sort yet to do business much after the old style, in places.

THE Catholc Benevolent Association recently held a meeting at St. Cloud and was reported to have passed a resolution to admit no one as a member who belonged to any other secret society. This looks like retaliation upon the A. P. A's. Our local representatives to the meeting deny that any such resolution was passed.

MONDAY morning's Globe had an expose of the new order of A. P. A's., also minutes of several of their meetings in the St. Paul branch of the order. The House of Representatives have a contested election case in which it is claimed the order took too prominent a part, and an investigation is called for. The order appears to be similar to the Know-nothing society of forty years ago, only the A. P. A's. are pledged to what only the most rabid members of the old society believed in. The object of the present organization is to employ and to vote, only for protestants when it is possible to do so, and is an Anti-Catholic association.

TO PRESIDENT CLEVELAND more than to any one individual belongs the thanks of the people, for the unqualified repeal of the purchasing clause of the John Sherman Silver bill. Had President Cleveland been as timid as some of our state politicians, he would have embraced the first opportunity, or even gone out in search of a chance, to trade with the opponents of the bill, and to have patched up a compromise. But thanks to one man in a nation who has a vertebral column of his own. He would not agree to sign any compromise consequently the compromisers had not the backbone to pass the compromise bill.

MCKINLEY pulled through all right with them Ohio fellers, after all, and now if Tom Reed ain't too much for him, he will probably run for President in '96 when he will discover that Ohio is one of the biggest wool producing states in the union, and that he can not find enough of that article to go all over the country and fill people's eyes that he can not make people believe, outside of Ohio, that with wool at ten cents per pound, the lowest ever known about here, and the McKinley protective bill, the highest tariff on wool ever known is a good thing, especially when flannels are the same old prices they were when wool was two or three times as high as now.

LAST Thursday's elections in thirteen states went almost as largely Republican as at any time since the war. For years Republicans have been carrying the Presidential elections and the Democrats have been electing there men on off years, or in the state elections. Things seem to have changed around. And now with a Democratic National Government, the off year goes republican. In Ohio McKinley with his tariff for protection is elected by 80,000 plurality over Neal, who, is said to have been a single tax man. In New York Judge Maynard of election returns fame, seems to have been at a discount, and Tammany and their candidate were snowed under quite badly. The new Russel in Massachusetts could not pull the votes for Governor that his illustrious relative did. Iowa gave Jackson, Republican, the Governorship over Boies, who was sick, and unable to make much of a canvass. Kentucky and Virginia went Democratic, as did Stillwater, Minn., in her city election. The land-slide against the controling powers at Washington seem as great as they ever have been. Most of the states voting on last Tuesday have been Republican before.

McGary Again.

Today is being fought the political battles in Ohio for Chief of State.

Congress has passed the repeal bill. The World's Fair has adjourned sine die and the people are supposed to be happy. This extra session of Congress reminds me of Shakespare's play, "Much odo about nothing.

The World's Fair a year hence will be to many as only a vision in the night but for the money they spent in going there. This country has now got same as the Single Gold Standard, Who will deliver us from this ineiquitious class legislatian. Our National Congress and State Legislatures have become nothing but houses of merchandise. But it seems the masses of the people are contented to let things go on in a loose way and will continue to do so until we are bound hand and foot.

Is it possible a country having the resources that America has, and containing so much treasure blood from the Revolution down to the present time to keep it a free Republic must be mortgaged and bonded to death, and the poor become the inmates of a Lazerous house. An invalid might as well go to a pest house for his health as look to some of our political leaders for justice.

And yet many reason with themselves as did the Antideluvians of old, no cause for alarm or reason for complaint. Some good Philanthropist comes out in one of the leading papers of the day and says the farmar must take off his coat and go to work. Holy horrors! He has been there ever since Adam left the Garden of Eden, and in the next breath the same fellow will cry "over production." What this country is most in need of is honesty and a good healthy brain.

Here I cannot do better than to give you the words of Abraham Lincoln:

"Yes we can all congratulate ourselves that this cruel war is nearing to a close. It has cost a vast amount of treasure and blood. The best blood of the flower of American youth has been freely offered upon our country's altar that the nation might live.

As a result of the war corporations have been enthroned and an era of corruption in high places will follow, and the money power of the country will endeavor to prolong its reign by working up the prejudices of the people until all wealth is aggregated in a few hands and the Republic is destroyed. I feel at this moment more anxiety for the safety of my country than ever before, even in the midst of the war. God grant that my suspicions may prove groundless."

These are the words of the noble Lincoln and what intellegent man can deny the fulfilling of this prophesy to the very letter.

This country with the single gold standard—that is gold will be the only legal tender money force the government to issue $200,000,000 or $300,000,000 more bonds, then the moneyed class of this country will have the poor in their clutches. This Theme or monetary question has no bounds. Before the war slavery was about the only issue this country had. Now it is capitol and labor, with subsidary issues to accompany it.

Give us gold and silver on a parity. Paper currency issued direct from the government; do away with the government bonds, then we will have a monetary system that will be equal for rich and poor and one that no other nation can counterfit.

This thing of paying out millions of money for the sake of having Governments bonds is all a farce.

JOHN H. MCGARY.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

(From our Regular Correspondent.)

WASHINGTON, D. C., Nov. 3, 1893.

President Cleveland and Secretary Carlisle are both firm in the belief that the repeal of the purchasing clause of the Sherman silver law, now an accomplished fact, will soon bring about a state of affairs that will make the much-talked-about issue of bonds unnecessary, and neither of them wishes to issue bonds until circumstances shall make such an issue absolutely necessary. The democrats in Congress, or at least a majority of them, would like to escape authorizing an issue of bonds, if it can possibly be done. It will be much easier for President Cleveland to speak positively and definitely on the bond question a month hence than it is now, and it is probable that his message to the regular session of Congress will take a decided stand one way or the other on the subject, and I venture the prediction that the state of business, public and private, for the next month will decide which. If the expected increase in business shall result in largely increasing the revenue of the Government, as Secretary Carlisle believes it will, the administration can get through without bonds.

The movement for a change in the rules of the Senate is growing quite rapidly, and it is among the probabilities that a change will be made early in the regular session. Formal amendments to the rules have this week been prepared by Senator Hill and Blackburn, and other Senators speak of offering others. All of these will be referred to the committee on Rules, which will, it is believed, accomplish the end aimed at—give the majority of the Senate the authority to order a vote when ever it may think that the debate has been sufficiently prolonged, an authority posessed by the House and by nearly every legislative body in the world. Unless the republicans shall oppose the change, it is expected that it will be easily accomplished.

Representative Bailey, of Texas, thinks Uncle Sam pays out lots of money without receiving anything approaching an equivalent in return therefor. He has introduced two bills, each of which he thinks will stop a big leak of that kind. One of them provides for the repeal of the laws providing for the payment of retired army navy officers and that the pay of such officers heretofore retired shall cease when the bill becomes a law. The other repeals the law providing for the payment of retired judges from the U. S. courts and stops the pay of all those now on the retired list. Whether there is any probability of either of these bills becoming a law it is too early to say; but Mr. Bailey is thoroughly in earnest and will do his best to push them through.

Mr. J. S. Harrison, Kansas City, ex-President Harrison's democratic brother, is in Washington seeking an office. He wants to be surveyor of Kansas City.

While all of the Senators and Representatives are doubtless glad of the the opportunity to go home for a few days before the beginning of the regular session, there are quite a number of prominent democrats who expressed the opinion that it would have been better to have let the extra session run right along until the time for beginning the regular session. The majority, however, thought that no time would be saved by remaining in session, and the majority rules, usually, in the democratic party.

One real reform was adopted by Congress this week when it decided that bills which pass either House or Senate shall be printed instead of being enrolled by hand. It is believed that this change will prevent many and costly errors which have occured during the closing hours of every session of Congress, in the enrollment of bills.

In reply to a question as to what action the President had taken on the report that emissaries of several European nations were secretly aiding the Brazilian insurgents that their purpose was to overthrow the republic and re-establish the monarchy, a prominent official, not a member of the cabinet, said: "I am not at liberty to enter into details, but you can rest assured that this administration will assert the Monroe doctrine and protect the commercial interests of American citizens in Brazil and elsewhere at all hazards, and it will do it without the bluster and jingoism which characterized President Harrison's dealings with Chili." All of the facts concerning the Brazilian revolution in the possession of the state department were laid before the cabinet this week and a unanimous agreement was reached, the nature of which was not, for obvious reasons, made public.

WOMAN'S COLUMN.

EDITED BY MRS. C. A. STACY.

A very serious difficulty in the way of reform is found in the fact that well meaning men persistently refuse to be enlightened.

How startling are statistics! The Lima Clipper says: "Three millions of children are born annually of drunken parents, half of them are born idots, and three hundred thousand are born deaf, dumb and blind."

The purpose of any convention is more important than its personal, and worthy as are its delegates, the aim of the W. C. T. U. Convention is worthier of public support. "So long as intemperence prevails," said one of the distinguished delegates, "Battles for reform of all kinds will be fruitless." This is not too strong a statement Leaving out of consideration the abused children, the tortured wives, the murdered men, whose ill fate is caused by drunkenness. There is hardly a form of social or political evil that has not its origin in the drinking habit.

Lady Henry Somerset preached the annual sermon at the recent W. C. T. U. convention in Chicago. As there is not space to re-print it all, we know our readers will enjoy an extract which is so good and full of truth:

"Christianity, as I believe, means to face the questions of the day as Christ did. Descend the marble steps of your great churches and go down into the market place: Stand there for once face to face with human beings. Come out from the world of fashionable Christianity, see the wan and pale faces of the factory girls pinched in the poorly paid service of some pillar of the church. See the back bending under the burden of unrequitted toil. Come down and see the life that is, and in all its changing phases assume the attitude that Christ would have done in the same circumstances. That alone is Christianity. How do you suppose Christ would view the prevailing social distinctions? I can think of him watching here in Chicago the long lines of carriages with their occupants. frittering away the hours of all the long day to obtain the flimsy greeting of some favorite of fashion. How would Christ look at the big banquets supplied by unpaid labor? How standing in the isles of fashionable churches and seeing those there who believe they have done the civil thing to heaven in exhibiting for a brief hour their dressmaker's triumphs there? How if from there he might wander into one street in Whitechapel district, where there are forty saloons in the space of one quarter of a mile, and where all day on their dirty windows are the moving shadows of thinly clad women with babes on their arms? Yet such things exist and are ignored by the Christian people of to-day. If it were not so where would be the women walking the stony streets of shame? If Christianity were what it should be, necessary evil would be a term unknown. To hearts ripened in the sunshine of God there is a reaching out for everything that can better the condition of all. In living they make the world better to live in, even for those who do come after."

When Lucy Stone died, there passed from earth one of the noblest women of the century. The story of her life work in the cause of humanity, so familiar to all who have labored in that cause, would fill a volumn. With a sweet face, a musical voice and captivating manners, she charmed all who knew her and won frients everywhere by earnestness and goodness of heart. Her death will be mourned by all who are familiar with the events of her long and notable career as a public woman.

Lucy Ston's life and death stand for conviction. It is not merely her one chief conviction for which her times are indebted to her. It is the unswerving loyalty to a deep-rooted principle which is the mighty contribution of this one gentle woman to our national life. She worked for it with unfaltering faith. And her tremendous conviction is a living power. She was not given to vain prophecies or imaginings or enthusiastic hopes. In this sense it may be said that she had little imagination. It mattered nothing what she had or had not. All the qualities which made her honored and beloved may be summed up in this: She was herself conviction embodied before the eyes and the hearts and mind of her generation.

Our Thanks Giving Gift to Ever One of Our Readers.

"AN AMERICAN BEAUTY."

By special arrangement with the publishers, we are enabled to make every one of our readers a present of an exquisit oil panel-picture, 20 inches high, entitled, an "American Beauty," which has been admired by all who have seen it. This superb picture is from the brush of the same artist who painted the "Yard of Pansies" and "Yard of Roses." The reproduction is equal insevery respect to the original, from which it cannot be distinguished, and accompanying it are full directions for framing at home at a cost of a few cents, thus forming a beautiful ornament for the high narrow wall-spaces for which it is so difficult to obtain pictures of the proper shape. It is a suberb Thanksgiving gift. Send your name and address to the publisher, W. Jennings Demorest, 15 East 14th Street, New York, with three cents (either stamps or pennies) to pay for the packing, mailing, etc., and mention that you are a reader of the BUFFALO GAZETTE and you will receive by return mail one of these valuable works of art.

We sell the BEST RANGE in the World and took more premiums at the World's Fair than any other firm there when every stove firm in the land was represented. All we ask of you is to go and examine the dealers Range and then examine ours, and if you don't say we have the cheapest and best Range made, why don't deal with us. We expect the dealers to kick and the more they kick the better we like it. They do the kicking and we sell the Ranges. We have sold over one thousand Ranges in this State this year and you can write and ask anyone using our goods about their merits, and we refer you to any Bank in St. Louis as to our standing.

YOURS TRULY,
WROUGHT IRON RANGE CO.

THE assets of the life insurance companies of the United States aggregate $850,000,000, while the gross income is $220,000,000. This is a big business in a big country, and yet there are only 5,500,000 people insured out of 65,000,000.

JOSHUA BARSTOW, the only living printer who ever worked at case with Horace Greeley, is 85, but still picks up type at night in a Norwich (Conn.) office. Though he doesn't look 60, he talks like it, and is one of the jolliest fellows in town.

To be sure football isn't very dignified, but the theologues are better off in a rough and tumble football game than suffering the hideous pangs of confirmed dyspepsia.

TEN THOUSAND susceptible French ladies wrote Admiral Avelan asking for a lock of his hair. As the admiral does his thinking under a billiard ball thatch as innocent of a hair as a pumpkin, the czar played a grim joke on his favorite water fighter by sending him a hair mattress by express, the charges not prepaid. Great jokers these big fellows.

THE season has arrived when summer resort hotels vanish in smoke. They have been abandoned by the summer girl and her lovers, and the landlord no longer presents his bills at the close of every week. The insurance companies, however, do not like the change, for they are compelled to purchase the blackened ruins. Several such transfers have been made during the past week, and more are anticipated daily.

THE superintendent of the railway mail service pitches into the use of oil lamps on railway trains as the cause of many a wholesale consumption of passengers. He is right. The use of oil lamps on railways is an anachronism. They and the stoves should be straightway abolished. The first-class railway companies are substituting electricity or stored gas for the lamps and steam-heating from the engine for stoves. That is well. Away with the death-dealing lamps and stoves from all roads.

THE world's fair has brought forth one of the most unique suits at law in the whole history of litigation. It is a suit for the might-have-been—for the "substance of things hoped for"—and it will be based upon the "evidence of things not seen." It is an action by the syndicates that built and operated several of the big hotels against railways centering in Chicago for damages by reason of the refusal of those roads to reduce passenger rates early in the season. In this way the hotels were deprived of business they otherwise would have received and their profits were sadly curtailed.

WITH the last week of the world's fair came to a close the most remarkable series of congresses ever held. Other gatherings have been more momentous in scope, but none have led the public into such broad fields of knowledge and research, or drawn the thinkers of the world into such close fellowship with each other and with the public. These congresses were addressed by 6,000 men and women representing every science, every worthy reform, every religion in every corner of the civilized world. The people who have listened to these teachers have numbered in the aggregate 600,000 persons.

SISTER MARIE AUGUSTINE, one of the best-known French philanthropists and founder of the Little Sisters of the Poor, died recently. In 1820 she was born at Saint Servan, and from early life was noted for her care for the poor. In 1840 she founded this order first in her native town and afterward in the City of Rennes. There are now 266 of these homes all over the world, and more than 40,000 old men and women are sheltered by them. It is said that there have died in the care of the Little Sisters 120,000 aged and indigent people, who without this care would have been without shelter in their declining years.

FIFTY-THIRD CONGRESS.

Extra Session.

MONDAY, Oct. 30. — In the senate the three months' campaign for unconditional silver repeal practically ended. A few minutes after 7 o'clock in the evening the Voorhees bill was passed by a vote of 43 to 32. The bill now goes to the house. In the house Mr. Oates (dem. Ala.) called up his bill to amend the naturalization laws and said the object of the proposed law was to restrict the looseness existing in the naturalization of aliens. The bankruptcy bill was further discussed.

TUESDAY, Oct. 31. —In the senate Senator Palmer (Ill.) reported from the pensions committee a bill stipulating that after July 1, 1893, no pension shall be paid to a non-resident unless he be a citizen of this country, except he has been actually disabled while serving the United States. In the house the passage of the silver purchase repeal bill by the senate was reported and it was placed in its regular order on the calendar. Rev. Edward Bagley, pastor of the Christian church in Washington, was selected chaplain to succeed Rev. S. W. Haddaway, deceased.

WEDNESDAY, Nov. 1.—In the senate resolutions were offered by Senator Hill to amend the rules and prevent endless filibustering, and providing for an amendment to the rules, to authorize the presiding officer to count a quorum present but not voting. In the house the senate silver repeal bill was passed by a vote of 193 to 94, and was soon after signed by the president. The analysis of the vote shows that 124 democrats, 68 republicans and 1 populist (Cannon, Cal.), voted for concurrence, and 70 democrats, 15 republicans and 9 populists against the motion.

THURSDAY, Nov. 2.—In the senate a bill was introduced by Senator Stewart (Nev.) for the free coinage of silver. The house bill to amend the act of May 5, 1892, prohibiting the coming of Chinese persons into the United States, was passed. In the house a resolution providing that congress adjourn at 3 p. m. on the 3d was passed, as was also a resolution allowing the ways and means committee to sit during the adjournment. A favorable report was made on the bill to admit Utah as a state in the union. A bill was introduced by Mr. Cooper (Ind.) authorizing states to tax national bank notes and greenbacks, and all other notes circulating as money.

FRIDAY, Nov. 3.— The senate after routine business adjurned sine die. In the house a final adjournment was also taken.

FROM WASHINGTON.

THE president has nominated Gen. W. B. Anderson, of Mount Vernon, Ill., as pension agent with headquarters at Chicago.

AT the several mints of the United States the coinage executed for the month of October aggregated 7,782,140 pieces of the value of $10,003,960.

THE statement of the public debt issued on the 1st showed that the debt increased $5,141,053 during the month of October. The cash balance in the treasury was $102,294,291. The total debt, less the cash balance in the treasury, amounts to $1,594,555,352.

THE sellers who offered the 84,000 ounces of silver to the treasury, all of which was declined, did not respond to the counter tender of the treasury. So the October purchases of silver wound up all silver purchases under the Sherman law.

EXCHANGES at the leading clearing houses in the United States during the week ended on the 3d aggregated $1,050,712,065, against $928,141,581 the previous week. The decrease, compared with the corresponding week in 1892, was 24.8.

IN the United States there were 358 business failures in the seven days ended on the 3d, against 346 the week previous and 238 in the corresponding time in 1892.

THE president has named Thursday, November 30, as a day of thanksgiving.

AT the extraordinary session of congress sixteen joint resolutions and seventeen bills became laws.

THE council of Chicago the 6th elected Alderman George B. Swift mayor pro tem.

IT was telegraphed the 6th that Honduras had fired on the American flag by the alleged orders of President Vasques, and by the express command of the commissioner of the port of Amahla several shots were fired after the Pacific Mail ship Costa Rica, flying the stars and stripes, because she refused to surrender one of her passengers. United States Minister Baker was on the Costa Rica at the time.

SWIFT IS MAYOR.

A Republican Chosen to Succeed Carter Harrison.

CHICAGO, Nov. 8.—George B. Swift was elected mayor pro tem. at the regular meeting of the city council Monday night. The wrangle between the republican and democratic aldermen was settled during the day by an agreement that Ald. McGillen be permitted to preside at the regular meeting, that his rulings of Saturday should not be challenged and that the mayor-elect should not qualify until Thursday. In return for these concessions several democrats agreed to vote for Swift. The agreement was fully carried out.

At precisely 11 o'clock a. m. Monday Chairman McGillen called to order the adjourned session of the council. More than one-half the seats were vacant. The decision of the republicans to remain away from the morning meeting was apparent. Not one of them appeared, and after a call of the roll showed no quorum present, an adjournment was taken until 5 o'clock p. m., McGillen ordering the sergeant-at-arms to arrest the absent aldermen and force their attendance.

Hearing this the republicans, who were holding a caucus, locked themselves in a room at republican headquarters, and no one was allowed to enter or retire until all danger had passed.

When the adjourned session was called to order at 5 p. m. the chairs of the republican aldermen were still vacant. Chairman McGillen called on the sergeant-at-arms to explain why the order to bring the absentees to the council chamber had not been obeyed, and that official said that he had been unable to find a single member. Hearing that they were at republican headquarters in caucus, he had attempted to secure admission to their presence, but it was denied him. No quorum being present, the chairman adjourned the council until the hour for the regular session, 7:30 p. m.

At 7 p. m. the republican aldermen who had been in caucus since morning, left the headquarters in the Title and Trust building and marched to the city hall and took their seats in the council chamber. There were thirty-seven of them, Alderman Epstean, of the First ward, having held aloof from the caucus throughout the day. It is he who is credited with having cast the blank ballot for mayor pro tem. on Saturday, which has been the cause of all the trouble. He took his seat a few minutes after the arrival of the republican aldermen at the council chamber.

The clerk at 7:35 called the roll and each of the sixty-eight aldermen answered to their names. Before this the time had been taken up by leaders of both parties in conferences with each other, and the democrats, apparently realizing that there was no further chance of defeating the election of Alerman Swift for mayor pro tem., gave evidence of their intention to yield gracefully. After the roll-call Alderman McGillen (dem.) was elected chairman, on motion of Alderman Kent (rep.). The chair announced that the unfinished business before the council was the election of a mayor pro tem., the ballot of last Saturday not being conclusive since Mr. Swift had one less vote than a majority. Tellers were appointed and the council proceeded to ballot.

The candidates were Alderman McGillen and Alderman Swift. The result of the ballot showed that sixty-nine votes—one more than the legal number—had been cast. One alderman had voted two ballots folded together, one for McGillen and one for Swift. The vote stood: Swift, 50; McGillen, 19. Chairman McGillen denounced such methods and ruled that another ballot should be taken. This resulted: Swift, 62; McGillen, 5; blank, 1. Chairman McGillen thereupon announced the election of Alderman Swift as mayor to serve until the successor to be elected at the special election called for December 18 should have qualified. Mayor-Elect Swift was escorted to the chair, and in a brief address expressed his thanks for the honor conferred upon him and the peaceful outcome of what seemed might be a serious matter.

The council then passed a switch-track and sidewalk ordinance, postponed the meeting in memory of the late mayor to a week from Thursday, and adjourned to meet at 7:30 o'clock Thursday evening, when Mayor-elect Swift's bond will be approved.

MUST LIVE CHEAPER.

Pennsylvania Workingmen Discuss Methods of Economy.

NEWCASTLE, Pa., Nov. 8.—Delegates from twenty labor organizations in this city met Monday to discuss some method by which the workingmen could live cheaper. The wages of the men have been cut down from 20 to 40 per cent., and it was the sense of the meeting that landlords, grocers, butchers and other merchants should make some cut in prices. A cooperative scheme was strongly urged at first, but it was decided to appoint one member from each organization represented, the whole to constitute a committee whose duty it will be to visit the merchants and make a canvass to see which firm will make the greatest discount to the workmen represented by the labor organizations. It was decided to select one grocer, one butcher, one clothing man, etc., and throw all the trade to them, provided, of course, that they will make a reasonable discount. In case this is not done the men will start cooperative stores.

CRUSHED TO DEATH.

Front of a Building Falls at Rankin, Pa.—One Child Killed and Another Fatally Hurt.

PITTSBURGH, Pa., Nov. 8.—Sunday evening at Rankin, near Braddock, John H. Richards, aged 14 years, and his sister Alice, aged 5 years, children of James Richards, were walking past a new brick tenement house in process of construction on Braddock avenue. Without warning the entire front of the structure fell out into the street. John was instantly killed and Alice fatally injured. The children were returning home from Sunday school.

Will Build a Mammoth Bridge.

WEST SUPERIOR, Wis., Nov. 8. — At the meeting of the joint committees of the Superior and Duluth councils and chambers of commerce and the Lake Carriers' association it was decided to build between Superior and Duluth a large combination railroad, foot passenger, wagon and street car bridge at a cost of $350,000.

King of Ashantee Stoned to Death.

LONDON, Nov. 8. — Letters from Accra, on the west African gold coast, say the king of Ashantee was stoned to death recently by insurgents in the streets of Coomassie, his capital.

OUR FLAG FIRED ON.

The Honduras Government Insults the Stars and Stripes.

LA LIBERTAE, Honduras, Nov. 8.—Honduras fired upon the American flag Monday morning. By the alleged orders of President Vasquez and the express command of the commissioner of the port of Amapala seven cannon shots were fired after the Pacific mail steamship Costa Rica, flying the stars and stripes, as she steamed away because she refused to surrender one of her passengers to the Honduras government. United States Minister Baker was on board the Costa Rica at the time.

The passenger about whom the trouble arose is Policarpo Bonilla, who recently led the revolution in Honduras, but was defeated by Gen. Vasquez. He then fled to Nicaragua, and with 300 of his adherents joined the army of President Sacasa, who was engaged in an attempt to quell a rebellion. Bonilla had decided to leave Nicaragua. He therefore sailed from Corinto for Guatemala on November 4 on the Costa Rica. American Minister Baker and more than 100 other persons were his fellow passengers. They arrived Sunday morning at Amapala, a port of entry of Honduras on the Pacific coast, and at 2 o'clock in the afternoon the commander of the Port Villila demanded that Capt. Dow should surrender Bonilla. Seven shots were fired after the Costa Rica, although she flew the American flag. None of the shots struck her, however, but it is feared the steamship City of Panama, of the same line, which was lying in the port, may have been injured, because the firing continued for some time after the Costa Rica was out of range.

BANKERS SET FREE.

A Milwaukee Judge Holds That the Grand Jury Was Illegal.

MILWAUKEE, Nov. 8.—Sixty-seven indictments, returned against well-known Milwaukeeans by the two grand juries which have been investigating the bank and other failures are null and void. This is the result of a decision by Judge Johnson in the circuit court Monday afternoon when he dismissed Eugene S. Elliott and F. W. Noyes, directors of the defunct Plankinton bank, who had been indicted for embezzlement by both the first and second grand juries and who instituted habeas corpus proceedings to secure their release on the last indictments. The indictments which Judge Johnson's decision has thrown out are as follows:

Frank A. Lappen, 14; William Plankinton, 8; F. T. Day, 3; Charles L. Chson, 5; E. S. Elliott, 5; F. W. Noyes, 5; William H. Monsen, 7; John B. Koetting, 10; G. C. Trumpff, 3, and Judge J. G. Jenkins, 5—total, 67.

The attorneys for the indicted bankers went into court and contended that the indictments found against their clients were null and void because the jury had no legal existence when they were returned—that is, that the term of the jury expired with the September term of the municipal court and that, therefore, the jury had no authority to return indictments on the last day of the October term.

Judge Johnson promptly decided in favor of the bankers, saying that it was clear under the statutes that the point made by the defense was well taken and that the jury had no legal existence when it returned the indictment. He ordered that the prisoners be discharged at once.

District Attorney Hammel threatens to have the bankers arrested on complaints issued by depositors, but up to a late hour no arrests had been made.

MET AN AWFUL DEATH.

An Invalid Fatally Burned in a Bath of Blazing Alcohol.

CHICAGO, Nov. 8.—Literally cooked in a bath of blazing alcohol, Mrs. Mary Lasinski of 21 Wade street received injuries Sunday morning which resulted in her death later in the day. She died after hours of fearful agony. For a long time past she has been an invalid and, after sundry other means of relief had proved useless, she determined to try the effect of alcohol baths. Her first experiment was Sunday morning. As she stepped into the bath she slipped and in so doing splashed the liquid over the edge. A stream of it ran over the side and reached the lamp beneath the bath by which the alcohol was heated. In an instant the flame had crept into the bath and before the ill-starred woman realized what had happened she was up to her waist in living fire. The flames mounted and wrapped themselves round the upper part of her body. She shrieked for help and struggled to escape. In her haste she slipped back into the bath, and by the time she could escape from the furnace she was burnt from head to foot. She ran from the room crying aloud in her pain. The burning alcohol clung to her skin and she fell writhing to the floor. At last she fainted from the agony and when assistance arrived she was so badly injured that there was no hope of her recovery. Almost every particle of skin had been burnt from her body and every movement enhanced her torture. She died an hour or two later.

Rise in Rivers Proves Beneficial.

PITTSBURGH, Pa., Nov. 8.—The slow but steady rise in the Allegheny and Monongahela rivers enabled the shipment of about 1,000,000 bushels of coal in light river craft Monday afternoon and evening. There are in this harbor awaiting shipment to points on the lower Ohio river between 25,000,000 and 30,000,000 bushels of coal.

FOUR MILLIONS IN GOLD.

Big Shipment from the New York Assay Office to the Philadelphia Mint.

NEW YORK, Nov. 8.—The sub-treasury has shipped to the mint at Philadelphia $4,000,000 in gold bullion, which will be coined into eagles and half-eagles. The shipment was the balance of $10,000,000 ordered sent some time ago. Six millions was sent two weeks ago. The bullion left the assay office shortly after 8 o'clock. The bullion was packed in boxes of various sizes, one of the packages weighing 450 pounds.

Killed Himself at the Breakfast Table.

MCKEESPORT, Pa., Nov. 8.—Henry Kinkle and wife, residing at Camden, a city suburb, quarreled at their breakfast table. Kinkle arose from the table and taking a revolver from his pocket fired a bullet into his head. He died almost instantly. Eighty years ago Kinkle's father committed suicide in exactly the same manner.

Died from a Dog's Bite.

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 8.—Reid McDonald, a merchant of Seattle, Wash., died in a private hospital here of hydrophobia. He was bitten by a mad dog in Chicago two months ago.

THE ELECTIONS.

The Results Are Generally Favorable to Republicans.

McKinley Has Over 50,000 in Ohio—Iowa Gains Over Her Republican Majority of 1892—Virginia Strongly Democratic.

NEW YORK, Nov. 8.—All political factions looked on with wonderment and surprise when the results of yesterday's election became known. The vote polled for secretary of state by the New York democracy, of which Tammany hall is the head, was fully 10,000 below their expected majority. The greatest struggle of the campaign was centered in the contest for associate judge of the court of appeals, and has probably greatly influenced the general voter throughout the state, the candidacy of Isaac H. Maynard having been greatly opposed. Maynard fell considerably behind his ticket and polled 20,367 votes less than cast for secretary of state. Practically complete returns from many counties of the state and scattering returns from the city indicate that the republicans have elected the entire state ticket and that they will have a good working majority in the next legislature. The democrats concede the state to the republicans by 15,000 majority. The republicans have also carried the lower branch of the legislature, but the senate is not conceded by the democratic leaders. The republicans claim a good majority in the law-making body, but the democrats say it will be close, and some maintain that they will retain control.

COLUMBUS, Ohio, Nov. 8.—With a plurality of 50,000 and two-thirds of both branches of the legislature, McKinley has won the most decisive victory recorded in Ohio since the civil war. The weather was pleasant all over the state and there was a full vote of over 800,000. The decisive results of former years have been because of a small vote, those of one party or the other not turning out. But the voters were out yesterday all over the state and McKinley has a majority over all, with democratic, prohibition and populist tickets opposed to him.

DES MOINES, Iowa, Nov. 8.—The election in Iowa will go down as a republican landslide. The gains have been steady all night and average about six to the precinct. Returns from more than one-fourth of the state are now in and the ratio of increase can hardly be materially changed. Returns as to prohibition and populist votes are scattering, not enough to base good estimates on. The prohibitionists will probably not poll over 12,000 votes, doubling their vote of last year, and the populists 25,000, showing only a gain of 5,000. Chairman Blythe, of the republican state central committee, claims the election of the whole republican ticket by upwards of 30,000. Chairman Fullen, of the democratic committee, concedes the election to the republicans, by probably 20,000. In the legislative districts the republicans have made many gains and are now certain of working majorities in both houses, assuring a republican successor to United States Senator Wilson.

NEWARK, N. J., Nov. 8.—The elections in New Jersey were to fill the places of one republican and seven democratic senators, and a complete lower house. They resulted in the choice of seven republicans and one democrat, a republican gain of six. This will make the senate stand 11 republicans and 10 democrats, the republican majority being one, against 11 democrats last year. The new house of assembly will, apparently, contain 37 republicans and 23 democrats.

BOSTON, Mass., Nov. 8.—The result of the election in Massachusetts yesterday can only be described as a huge political landslide. For the first time in three years the state will have a republican governor and his plurality is 30,000. The whole ticket is elected with him and the legislature solidly republican in both branches. Candid democrats had conceded the defeat of John E. Russell, their candidate for governor, by a small majority, while even the most sanguine republicans would not claim over 15,000 for Greenhalge.

YANKTON, S. D., Nov. 8.—The election passed off quietly throughout the state. The returns all show that the republican state and judicial ticket is elected. Late returns show a larger vote cast than was thought early in the day, the result showing about two-thirds of the vote of last fall.

RICHMOND, Va., Nov. 8.—The returns show that the democrats have carried the state by an increased majority. The indications are that Congressman O'Farrall, the democratic candidate for governor, has been elected by a plurality of at least 50,000. The democrats claim fully four-fifths of the general assembly, and these figures are not likely to be greatly reduced. The campaign in this state was exceedingly lively for the populists have made great inroads on the republicans.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Nov. 8.—The democrats had things their own way in Kentucky, and according to reports received by the United Press up to 9 o'clock last night, the next legislature will include 110 democrats, 25 republicans and 3 populists.

CHICAGO, Nov. 8.—Judge Gary (Rep.) runs ahead of his ticket and his election is assured by something like 5,000 majority.

FLOWERS, SHRUBS AND TREES.

THE great oaks in Waverly, Mass., are survivors of an oak forest that must have existed in that region, according to the geologists, as far back as the tenth century.

IT is stated that one New Yorker living opposite Central park expends one hundred and fifty dollars monthly upon his roof garden, and there are no less than six such parterres in the city.

ORCHIDS are comparatively new to florists and the public, but they are becoming more common, and at the same time more perfect, every year. In spite of the fact that they are very expensive, as indeed all the choice blooms are nowadays, they are often seen in the florists' supplies.

AS THE season for lifting dahlias is here, it may be well to say that the roots ought to be turned stems downward as soon as the tops are cut off, and kept so until spring. The losses of dahlias during the winter, otherwise than by freezing, are mostly caused by neglect of this precaution.

THE total railway mileage of the country on June 30, 1892, was 171,553.52 miles.

TRUE COURAGE.

Not Brute Strength but Patriotic Love Is Its Secret.

The braggart who is "spoiling for a fight," who makes a walking arsenal of himself, carrying a pistol in his hip pocket, a dirk in his bosom, a slung-shot on his wrist, can at any time be elevated by decent pluck, by a firm hand to his coat collar, and the man who lifts him will not smell of gunpowder. It is the man who does not want to fight; who will not fight, unless something as dear as life fires his courage; the cool, calm, collected man, that can be trusted when the long roll is rallying for the fight. He is not the hero who feels no fear in the presence of danger, but the man who realizes his peril and yet stands to his colors, or his post. He who snatches the wreath of fame from the curling smoke of the cannon's mouth is the man who tramples down his fears and rushes to the charge impelled by patriotic principle. The bully who boasts the brute courage he holds in common with the wolf, who hears not to heed the groans of the dying, is not the stuff of which heroes are made. Such were not the men who sang "Annie Laurie" in the trenches of the Crimea, whose tears "washed off the stains of powder;" such were not the troops of the Iron Cromwell, who went from their knees into battle and crushed the haughty chivalry of England into the dust as if they had been but tinselled schoolboys; such were not the psalm-singing Methodists of Nelson, who on the slippery deck and amid the broadside's reeling rack, did their duty to England; but they were men of gentle hearts, who thought of the loved at home, and for their sake, their sake alone, dreaded the carnage of battle.—Howard Henderson, in Ram's Horn.

The Greatest Medical Discovery of the Age.

KENNEDY'S MEDICAL DISCOVERY.

DONALD KENNEDY, OF ROXBURY, MASS.,

Has discovered in one of our common pasture weeds a remedy that cures every kind of Humor, from the worst Scrofula down to a common Pimple.

He has tried it in over eleven hundred cases, and never failed except in two cases (both thunder humor). He has now in his possession over two hundred certificates of its value, all within twenty miles of Boston.

A benefit is always experienced from the first bottle, and a perfect cure is warranted when the right quantity is taken.

When the lungs are affected it causes shooting pains, like needles passing through them; the same with the Liver or Bowels. This is caused by the ducts being stopped, and always disappears in a week after taking it.

If the stomach is foul or bilious it will cause squeamish feelings at first.

No change of diet ever necessary. Eat the best you can get, and enough of it. Dose, one tablespoonful in water at bedtime. Read the Label. Send for Book.

"August Flower"

"What is August Flower for?" As easily answered as asked. It is for Dyspepsia. It is a special remedy for the Stomach and Liver.—Nothing more than this. We believe August Flower cures Dyspepsia. We know it will. We have reasons for knowing it. To-day it has an honored place in every town and country store, possesses one of the largest manufacturing plants in the country, and sells everywhere. The reason is simple. It does one thing, and does it right. It cures dyspepsia.

IN THE VALLEY.

To-day, when the sun was lighting my house on the pine-clad hill,
The breast of a bird was ruffled as it perched on my window sill,
And a leaf was chased by the kitten on the breeze-swept garden walk,
And the dainty head
Of a dahlia red
Was stirred on its slender stalk.

Oh, happy the bird at the rose-tree, unheeding the threatening storm!
And happy the blithe leaf-chaser, rejoicing in sunshine warm!
They take no thought for the morrow—they know no cares to-day;
And the thousand things
That the future brings
Are a blank to such as they.

But I, by the household ingle, can interpret the looming clouds,
For the wind "soo-hoos" through the keyhole, and a shadow the house enshrouds;
And I know I must quit my mountain, and go down to the vale below,
For my house is chill
On the windy hill,
When the autumn tempests blow.

My mind is for ever drawing an instructive parallel
'Twixt temporal things that perish and eternal things that dwell—
When billows and waves surround me, and waters my soul o'erflow,
I descend in hope
From the mountain top
To the sheltering vale below.

I go down to the valley of silence, where the worldly are never met;
I know there is "balm and healing" there for eyes that with tears are wet;
And I find, in its sweet seclusion, gentle solace for all my care,
For that valley pure,
With its shelter sure,
Is the beautiful vale of prayer.

THE STORY OF A TABLEAU.

FROM THE GERMAN.

TRANSLATED BY EMILY S. HOWARD

[Copyright, 1893, by the Author.]

ON a beautiful summer day not long ago, two handsome women sat on the terrace of one of the many charming hunting-castles with which the mountains of Styria abound.

"Bear in mind, Dora, that Prince Benatschew is a very dangerous man."

Countess Dorothea blushed crimson. "Why do you call him dangerous?"

"Is not your husband a little jealous of his pretty wife?"

"Ah, if he only were! But he devotes night and day to the study of political and economic subjects, and has no time for me."

"Do you mean to say that he neglects you?"

"Not exactly; but he has so many things to take up his thoughts that he would not have time to be jealous. Infidelity on my part would arouse his anger, but it would not try his heart. He is a cold and austere man, Emmy—a great and noble man, if you will—but like a block of ice."

"While Prince Benatschew is a veritable volcano."

Dora does not reply, for the subject of their conversation appears on the terrace where the two ladies are chatting.

"I hope that I am not disturbing an exchange of confidences, ladies?"

"We were speaking of you, prince," answered Emmy. "It was said that you are a man of a volcanic disposition."

"You must be flattering me."

Countess Dorothea has indignantly risen. "I have said nothing of the sort, for I know nothing of Prince Benatschew's character. Pray, let us return to the drawing-room; I hear Mr. Greenlow play the prelude to his—"

"I entreat you, countess, stay. It is the 'Moonlight Serenade,' and I am sure we can enjoy it to better advantage here, with the real moon shining down upon us. What a lovely summer night! Look down yonder, countess, and watch the effect here, from where I am standing! Do you see the moon reflected in the lake, and the fountain transformed into a sparkling pillar of silver?"

Reluctantly Countess Dorothea follows the prince. This man exerts a strange power over her. Emmy is right; he is a dangerous man.

"Where are you, Emmy?" cries she, as she turns to where her friend had been sitting. "Come and watch the moonlight."

But Emmy has disappeared through the door which leads from the veranda into the brilliantly lighted drawing-room, and the two are left alone. A timid yet pleasurable feeling of awe takes possession of Dorothea's soul.

During the past days she has conscientiously avoided the tempter. To-night she remains spellbound, held captive by a power which is greater than her resistance. Will he again speak of love to her?

"It is indeed a delightful scene," she says, with quavering voice. "A delightful scene," she repeats, in confusion; "but let us go in."

"COUNTESS DOROTHEA HAS INDIGNANTLY RISEN."

Yet her feet seemed rooted to the spot. She has lost all control over herself. The man of the world interprets these symptoms correctly, and begin to do what she has feared—or hoped, she does not know which—whisper a passionate avowal of love into her ear.

To him her silence means a yielding to his entreaties. "You have made me supremely happy," he murmurs softly, and steps aside to meet several persons who are at this moment approaching from the drawing-room. Among them is Count Tolstegg, Dorothea's husband.

Early in the morning of the following day, Count Tolstegg informs his wife that he is called to the city on important business and must leave by the last train that evening.

"And the tableau in which you are expected to take part?"

"As the train does not leave until nine, I will have ample time to figure in that, since I was foolish enough to consent to such childish play. Our hostess insists that no one but myself can represent the character for which she has chosen me, and it would be unkind to spoil her pleasure."

"Then we will leave before the ball commences?"

"We? There is no reason why you should not remain. I will come for you in a few days."

"Command me to go with you, Otho—I beg of you!"

But Count Tolstegg shrugs his shoulders with a smile, and makes no reply.

The guests are assembled in the pretty little amateur theater, and the players have gathered behind the scenes on the stage. In the first row sits Dorothea, and beside her Benatschew. He has been her escort during dinner, and has filled unnoticed her glass with champagne as often as possible. Dora's cheeks are flushed, and a feverish light burns in her black eyes. Her excitement, however, is not caused by the wine, but by the inward struggle of the past few days.

"I will not!" cries conscience. "I will—I must!" answers another voice in her breast, as if under the ban of some strange hypnotic power. Her husband's departure! Has everything conspired in Benatschew's favor? Oh, if Tolstegg had but spoken one word—one word of comfort and kindness—when she entreated him to take her back with him. She would have gathered strength from it to resist the passionate yearning that drives her into the tempter's arms. There is but one way out of the difficulty. She must confess to her husband the danger with which she is beset. Several times during that day she has been on the eve of doing this, but when she lifted her eyes to her husband's cold, indifferent countenance, she relapsed into silence. And now, now he is going from her—to leave her unguarded to the other's wiles. "I am lost! I am lost!" moans the unfortunate woman.

Three of the tableaux, copied from famous works of art, have already been presented. The next on the programme is the one in which Count Tolstegg is to figure. A side-door which leads to the stage is suddenly thrown open, and some one enters and advances toward Countess Dorothea, beckoning her to follow. One of the performers has been taken ill, and Dora is the only one who can successfully take her place. Would she consent? The tableau is already arranged; there is no time to be lost.

Dorothea gives her consent. Her dress is soon arranged to suit the character which she is to represent. They endeavor to show her the photograph of the painting from which the tableau is copied in which she is to figure, but in the general confusion it has been mislaid. Count Tolstegg is bidden to instruct his young wife. She is ready.

"I AM SUPPOSED TO HAVE STABBED YOUR LOVER."

The count hurries to her side. A cry of delight and admiration escapes Dorothea's lips. She has never known him to look more handsome. He snatches her hand and draws her on the stage with him. The others are in their places. Tolstegg leads her to the center of the stage and, bidding her to kneel down before him, he says, with muffled voice: "I am supposed to have stabbed your lover; you are to gaze with horror upon his bleeding form. Press one hand to your temple—so—clenching the other, as I grasp your wrist. You are trembling, dear. Have I hurt you? Forgive me; but for a moment the part which I am playing seemed so natural, as if I were in reality the avenger of my honor."

"Otho—speak—would you have done as he did?" asks Dorothea under her breath.

"Oh! my life, my all—I don't know whom I would have killed in such a case. Perhaps myself!" whispers Count Tolstegg, with suppressed emotion, as his eyes rest lovingly upon the prostrate form of his young wife.

"Otho!"

"Attention!" cries the stage manager. The signal is given. The curtain rises.

An hour later Count Tolstegg's carriage is on its way to the station. Leaning back in the cushions, with his arm around her waist, and her head resting on his breast, sits Dorothea.

She has confessed to her husband.

The proud, austere man draws her gently to him. "Then Master Angeli has helped me to be the savior of my honor—"

"And of my happiness," tenderly whispers Dorothea.

Frank Advertisements.

Advertisements are not invariably composed to enhance the value of the wares they describe. We meet with them of all kinds, and many of them so far from appealing to our love of gain, suggest, if not loss, great trouble and inconvenience, which only philanthropic natures can be expected to face. Here is one from a church paper, inserted no doubt, by some good woman who has done her best for a young person of her own sex in vain before appealing to a Christian public: "Will anyone undertake as servant a bright, clean, neat girl, who is deceitful, lazy and inclined to be dishonest?" Let us hope that somebody will. There is nothing, at all events, deceitful in the description of the ware the advertiser wishes to dispose of. The carefulness she exhibits to enumerate the virtues, such as they are, of her unpromising protege seems itself a guarantee of good faith. One can fancy her saying to herself: "What can I say with truth in favor of this unfortunate girl?" "Neat, bright and clean"—one could say as much of a drawing room grate—and yet it is manifestly all that can be said.—London Illustrated News.

AGRICULTURAL HINTS.

CORN HOUSE PLAN.

A Building That Saves the Crop from Damaging Effects.

The accompanying illustrations from sketches by C. E. Benton, of Massachusetts, show a novel and useful plan for a corn house, by which not only more corn is sheltered in proportion to the size and expense of the building, but, what is of vastly more importance, the corn is saved from the damaging effects of driving rain and snow, which in moist climates so seriously affect the value of the crop in the old-fashioned cribs, while it is waiting to be ground or fed. The ordinary crib has slatted sides, and the ventilation is horizontal, hence the driving rain and snow finds easy access to every ear of corn. But by this method the ventilation, while even more perfect, is from the bottom upwards, which entirely protects the corn from direct exposure to the elements. The building, which may be of any convenient size or proportion, is placed upon chestnut or oak posts two feet high, which are at proper intervals and are firmly set in the ground. A building of suitable size for a small farm is eight by twelve feet, and six feet from sill to plate. A partition, as shown in Fig. 1, leaves an alleyway four by eight feet at one end, with an outside door, a, as well as a doorway, b, which gives access to the crib. For convenience there should also be a window at c.

This makes a convenient place in which a corn-sheller may be stored and used, and in which, also, the bags may be filled when a grist is being put up for the mill. The arrangement leaves a crib eight feet square for the corn, and, as it could be filled considerably above the plates, it would store about four hundred bushels of ears, or sufficient to make two hundred bushels shelled. The bottom of the crib is floored with narrow boards, leaving a space of three-fourths of an inch between the boards, thus making a slat bottom to the crib instead of slat sides. The sides should be boarded tight like any other building. To secure perfect ventilation, rough doors are hung from the sills of the building, against the posts on which it rests, and care is taken while the corn is curing to keep all these ventilating doors closed, except on the side towards the wind. Thus a current of air will be continually forced up through the corn, and escape through the ventilator in the roof. Fig. 2 shows the ventilation door open at the end of the building and held up by a hook. An upper door is provided through which to fill the crib, and if it desired to fill it to the very roof this may be accomplished by carrying the last few bushels up a step ladder in the alleyway.—American Agriculturist.

AMONG THE POULTRY.

IT is a good plan to cull out and sell early all the chickens that are not to be wintered.

EVEN in winter it is an item to have dust for the fowls where they can flutter at will.

THE wise poultryman avoids extremes, but feeds enough to keep the fowls in a good, thrifty condition.

IT is when the hens are idle and closely confined that they are most liable to fall into the habit of feather pulling.

THE objection to throwing out the egg shells to the hens is the liability of their getting into the habit of eating eggs.

IN caponizing, the earlier a bird reaches maturity in his natural state the earlier the operation should be performed.

IN obtaining the highest prices from special customers, it will pay to put all the eggs of one color together before sending to market.

CHICKS that give promise of proving standard fowls will thrive much better if the culls are removed and more room in the quarters and a freer range given to those that are to be kept.

ON the farm, at least, the fowls should have a good range, as they will pick up much that would otherwise go to waste, and in this way the cost of feeding be greatly lessened.

DIARRHEA may often be mistaken for cholera, as the symptoms at the start are nearly the same. As soon as the birds are affected they have a downcast look, become sleepy, lose strength and have more or less fever.

PROPERLY managed, an incubator will hatch fully as many eggs in proportion as the average hen, especially during the winter. But it is necessary to fully understand the machine and to give proper care in order to obtain the best results. Now is a good time to buy and try an incubator, as it will give plenty of time to get accustomed to managing it before it is necessary to fill for hatching.—St. Louis Republic.

Sugar Beets in America.

One of the agricultural experiment stations reports that beets raised from improved home-grown seed contain twenty-five per cent. more sugar than beets raised from imported seed. Considering that the imported seed is the best seed from foreign countries, where the beet-sugar industry has been a long-established success, this is a remarkable showing. The home-grown seed gave results from ten to twenty per cent. better this year than last. Such rapid improvement on the best that Germany has produced in long years of patient work indicates advantages of soil and climate and the probability that this country will surpass foreign countries in the production of beet sugar.—Farm and Fireside.

THE AMERICAN FARMER.

Why His Future Looks More Promising Than Ever Before.

At no time in the history of the country has the future of agriculture been more promising. There was a time, not long ago, when the soil and the farmer were not on friendly terms, when there was a conflict between them. But that time is past, or is passing with the progressive farmer.

He has learned, is learning every day, that the fault was with him and not the land. The soil, lacking certain ingredients, could not produce good results. The horse cannot be expected to work at the plow all day, many days, if fed only on dry hay.

To-day the farmer is coaxing his land very much as he does his stock, or he is providing food for his plants with almost as much care as he feeds his animals, if he expects to be successful. The farmer tests his land for himself; he does not wait for the chemist, or prefers to be his own chemist in his way. If potash, nitrogen or phosphoric acid are wanted, he adds them, and he has come to the stage of independence when he mixes his own fertilizers, and knows exactly with what he has to work. That's progress. Commercial fertilizers are the farmers' aids, but the government analysis and inspection has opened his eyes, and he sees now that he may prepare his own fertilizers and save money.

The farmer no longer plants haphazard; he has begun to see that agriculture is an art, a science more intricate than any other; that to be successful in its prosecution he must know several sciences. No longer does he merely drop a potato in the earth, cover it up, keep down the weeds and dig the increase in the fall. He studies the soil and the fertilizer and then the potato. Shall he plant large or small potatoes, cut or uncut, one eye or more, the stem end or the seed end?

Thus throughout the range of agriculture every step is thought out and practically made in advance. There are many croakers about agriculture, some editorial croakers in newspaper offices who, possibly, might be able to tell a hay-cutter from a grindstone, who rise up periodically to say with a loud voice (more or less, according to their circulation) that agriculture has a black eye; that it is limping along on one leg, and not a very strong leg at that, and that the whole fabric of agriculture, like the sheep, is going to the dogs.

If these croakers had attended some of the "winter meetings" that have been held in the different states last winter and seen the interest and enthusiasm, seen the men—aye, the women, too, assembled and spent two or three days in asking each other questions and comparing notes, the agricultural pessimist would admit, if honest, that there is a force behind agriculture that will not let it stand still. Let every farmer keep his shoulder to the wheel. It turns easier than it did, and does not have to be helped out of so many ruts and quagmires as it did. Let every farmer be proud of his calling, stick to it, dignify it and swear by it (not profanely).

Why, it is not long ago when the farmer at gatherings of any kind took a back seat: it was rare to see a farmer on the platform. All the speeches were made by the lawyer, the clergyman and the "good talker" of no calling or profession. That has changed. The farmer got nearer and nearer to the platform, and now, forsooth, he is on it and doing the talking, and taking no odds of any man. This is not idle talk; it is fact. Agriculture is alive.—George Appleton, in Farm and Fireside.

Little Drops of Water, Etc.

There is a fashion of depreciating such small industries as the care of poultry on farms as being below the ambition of a farmer and rather to be considered as contemptible than deserving. But, as a rule, small things seem small to small minds, while the more intelligent look upon small things more in the light of parts of a whole, to be considered in the aggregate. There are farmers who make less money clear from twenty acres of wheat than the wife gains from her fowls or from her well-cared-for hives. Indeed, this may remind us of what the great poet, the lover of rural things, said of this small business of keeping bees: "Labor in tenui, at gloria non tennis," which means that labor bestowed on a trifling matter may bring rewards that are not trifling. Every little thing on a farm should count. It is the aggregate of many little ears of grain that makes the farmer's income; and to pick a snowy ball of cotton by the nimble fingers is a trifling thing, but many balls and many fingers go to make up the great aggregate of 4,000,000,000 pounds of this staple, which, were it not gathered, would desolate the whole civilized world. Truly, small things are not to be despised, if it is but a single bee or a helpless one-day-old chick.—Rural World.

Epilepsy in Pigs.

This disease is not at all uncommon in pigs. It is recognized by the pig falling suddenly, mostly when feeding, trembling, convulsed and screaming. The animal foams at the mouth, lies for a few minutes and then gets up and goes to feeding again, seemingly no worse for its experience. The disease is due to some lesion of the brain and is inherited. For this reason pigs so affected should not be used for breeding. It is not a disease that prevents the animal from growing or fattening, and it does not affect the meat in any way injuriously. It is wholly nervous and due to some disordered condition of the brain, but as the brain is very sensitive to the effects of indigestion it is often the case that this disturbance may be traced to this cause. Then treatment may be useful; otherwise it is not.

How to Discover Bad Legs.

In examining the legs of a horse, the purchaser should first stand with his face to the broadside of the horse, as he stands on the level ground, and observe whether he rests perpendicularly on all his legs, having the natural proportion of his weight on each straightly, squarely and directly, or whether he stands with all his legs straddled out, or with all drawn together under the center of his belly, as if he were trying to stick them all into a hat; or lastly, whether he favors one or more of his legs either by pointing it forward, or by placing it in any position in which no weight at all, or a very small stress of weight, is thrown upon it.—Farm and Fireside.

FEED plenty of buttermilk to the poultry. A good plan is to mix it with either bran or meal, giving all that they will eat up clean.

THE BAGPIPE.

It is by No Means an Exclusively Scottish Instrument.

The bagpipe is not, as is generally supposed, an exclusively Scottish instrument and unknown to other nations. It is, indeed, the national instrument of Scotland, but it is also that of the Hill countries in India, and is still popular among the mountaineers of Turkey, Roumania, Bulgaria, Hungary, Italy and Sweden. It was known in China centuries ago and is yet to be heard in Thibet. The Persians had a bagpipe, and so had the Egyptians, and in the British museum may be seen a set of small pipes, without the bag, of the time of Moses.

It is certain that the bagpipe was in use among the Hebrews and Greeks, and it is supposed the Romans borrowed it from the latter. The Greeks learned its use from the Celtic races with whom they came in contact. The music of the pipe having always had a peculiar fascination for the Celts.

In its primitive state the instrument consisted of a simple chanter and drone with bag attached. The pipe called the chanter, is a kind of oboe, a tube with eight holes, and is handled like that instrument. The drones are pipes that sound each only one continuous low note.

The music proceeds from the chanter and drones, whose mouthpieces are inserted in a leather bag, which the player inflates by blowing with his mouth through a tube, the wind being forced out by pressing the bag under the arm. During the sixteenth century another drone was added, and from the early part of the eighteenth century till the present time all Scotch bagpipes have had three drones.

The music played on the bagpipe is called the pibroch, and has wonderful power in exciting the martial instincts and hilarity of the Scottish Highlander. To an American its rhythm is so irregular and its notes in stirring pieces appear to be so jumbled that he can hardly reconcile his ears to them, but those who understand pipe music affect to discover in a well-composed pibroch the imitative sounds of march, conflict, fight and pursuit, and all the movements of a desperate fight.

Although not the most tuneful of instruments, no sound, however melodious, can thrill the hearts of Highlanders, whether Scottish, Swedish, or Indian, like a burst of their own wild native pipes. On the battlefield it has animated those who followed it to the intensest frenzy; when all other music has been drowned by the confusion and carnage of the scene it has been borne into the thickest of the fight, where its followers could be always found struggling fiercely to its strange, weird notes.

And not only on the field of battle, but on their return from foreign campaigns, it has welcomed them back to the home of their loved ones and the hills of their nativity in strain that recalled the memories of the past as no other music could do.

Many remarkable instances have been recorded of the effect of the pibroch on the Highlanders of Scotland. When they marched across the desert sands of Egypt, beneath the burning sun, under command of Sir Ralph Abercrombie, at the beginning of the present century, weary, footsore, short of water, the pipe struck up "Lochaber No More." Tears filled the eyes of many a stern soldier as the plaintive melody filled the air, and first one and then another faltered in the march and lagged behind.

One of the officers, on noting the men falling out, ordered the piper to play the "Cameron's Gathering." The tune worked like magic. The stirring memories of a thousand years were aroused, the stragglers fell into line again, the ranks were closed, and all marched resolutely forward to victory.—Kate Field's Washington.

WORLD'S FAIR TROPHIES.

The McCormick Harvesting Machine Company Awarded Seven Medals and Diplomas for the Superior Excellence of Their Binders and Mowers.

CHICAGO, Oct. 24th.

At the World's Columbian Exposition today seven medals and seven diplomas were awarded the McCormick Harvesting Machine Company of this city. These honors are in recognition of the merit of the following named machines manufactured by the McCormick Company: The Machine of Steel, Bindlochine, Open Elevator, McCormick Simple Knotter, No. 4 Steel Mower, Big 4 Steel Mower and the Corn Harvester. These, the highest awards, are based on the performance of the McCormick machines before the judges in the field, at the regular field trials of the Exposition, held at Wayne, Ill., in July last, the machines tested being those regularly built for the general trade. It is a significant fact that of all the manufacturers of harvesting machinery having exhibits at the World's Fair, the McCormick Company alone complied with the committee's request to show the capabilities of their machines in the field. The first successful reaper was invented by Cyrus Hall McCormick in 1831, and from that time to this the McCormick machines have had a decided prestige over all others. They have won the grand gold medals and highest awards at every World's Fair, and it was possibly for this reason that sixteen different manufacturers of Binders and Mowers did not compete in the field with them. Throughout the entire season these sixteen concerns, in their efforts to have a floor award granted, have done everything possible to baffle the Commission and prevent a fair open field exhibit that should test the working qualities of the machines. And now, after a four months' fight by the makers of harvesting machines who did not dare meet McCormick in the field—a fight in which the United States Commission voted at every turn that the only way to examine a machine was by seeing it at work in the field—and after having signed an agreement with all the others not to show in the field, one concern wanted an award so badly that only two weeks ago it went so far as to get a secret permit to pay the expenses of a new Committee to secretly accompany their special machines to a remote section of Colorado, where no other machines could be shown, and where the crop (if there is any left) must be much lighter, and the surface of the ground firmer, with the evident hope that these conditions would insure as easy work and as light draft as were shown by the regular McCormick machines in the official tests in July, in the very heavy grain then harvested. The diplomas awarded the McCormick machines speak in highest terms of their efficiency, ease of handling and extreme light draft. The McCormick No. 4 Mower showed wonderful power at work, and a 5 ft. cut machine, in a field averaging three tons to the acre, with a dynamometer perfectly adjusted by the U. S. Custodian of Government Weights and Measures, drew at work, at an average draft of 152 lbs. The judges pronounce this a remarkable performance. The McCormick Binders, cutting 6 ft. of heavy oats on uphill ground, and carrying bundle carriers, measured by the same standardized dynamometer, showed a draft as low as 320 lbs., and none higher than 360 lbs. This wonderful showing was a great revelation to many distinguished foreigners at the trial, and no one present was at a loss to know why more machines did not take part in the tests.

Cream of Tartar and Soda

Have uses in cooking well known to every housekeeper; but the method of refining them to make them chemically pure, and of mixing them together so as to produce their greatest leavening power and best results when combined, is a matter of great exactness, requiring the most expert knowledge and skill.

Royal Baking Powder

Is the product of this knowledge and experience and the expenditure of many thousands of dollars in patents and appliances for its preparation. It is a compound of strictly pure grape cream of tartar and absolutely pure soda, combined with exactness and care by famous chemists, and it will produce more wholesome and delicate bread, biscuit, cake, rolls, etc., than can be had where this modern agent of cooking is not used.

Beware of the cheap compounds called baking powders to catch the unwary. They are made with alum and are poisonous.

KANSAS AND CALIFORNIA.

CALIFORNIA has raised 720,000,000 pounds of fruit within the last year.

KANSAS hens lay more eggs than those of any other state in the union.

KANSAS still has nearly one million acres of unoccupied government lands open for settlement.

ELECTION day is a legal holiday in California, Maine, Missouri, New Jersey, New York, Oregon, South Carolina and Wisconsin.

IT is claimed that in California a superior grade of tobacco is grown. California asserts that it is superior to the product of North Carolina and Virginia, and almost equal to that of Cuba.

Are You Going South This Winter?

If so, make your arrangements to go via the Big Four Route. Whether in pursuit of health or pleasure, no portion of the country offers so many and varied attractions at this season as the Sunny South. The Orange Groves of Florida, redolent with the perfume of sweet blossoms, wave their branches in hearty welcome to the tourist from the Snow-clad Northland and the mellow breezes of the Southern Sea woo the invalid from the Blizzards of the Frozen North. There is one line to Florida, "The Big Four Route," which on account of its excellent train service, perfect connections in Union Depots and absence of transfers, forms the "Tourist's Ideal Line to Florida." From all points north of the Ohio River the Big Four Route, in connection with the Through Car Lines from Cincinnati, will be found to offer the Best Time, Best Service and Best Equipment to all Southern Points, and if you desire to travel with comfort and ease be sure your tickets read via the Big Four Route.

DELANO DIARY

—Fairday tomorrow, Nov. 11.

—Thanksgiving will be observed on Thursday, Nov. 30.

—Remember the entertainment, at the hall Tuesday evening.

—Mr. Johnson, the Miller, has built a comodious residence near the mill which he will soon occupy.

--The social given by the Y. P. S. C. E. at Miss White's last night was well attended and highly appreciated by the young people.

—Frank Pfrang fell from the roof of Geo. Schaffer's new barn, where he was helping shingle on Saturday and bruised his hip considerably.

—Swedeback & Erickson have raised their building on Bridge Street near the City Hall and it is now occupied by the Wrought Iron Range Co.

—Mrs. Wicklund has been confined to her bed most of the time for the past three weeks from injuries received by slipping and falling at Watertown, while there attending church.

—The premises of Joseph Nieson are still under quarantine on account of diphtheria. There has been five cases in all, in the house, Mrs. Nieson and the baby being the latest cases. So far there has been but one death, that of the oldest boy who was the first to take the disease.

—Several of the Delano foot ball team are figuring on visiting Minneapolis on Thanksgiving day, to get some pointers from the match game between the University of Minnesota and the Cornell team. If our boys give their High school yell, they may frighten both teams out of playing a good game.

—With two sermons every Sunday at the M. E. church and two every alternate Sunday at the Presbyterian church during the winter, Delanoites will be better supplied than for a long while, with a place to spend their Sundays, and more interest will be manifested than when but one sermon a week or even more seldom, is heard.

—Mr. Dahl, Ex-City Engineer of Minneapolis, has been at work this week establishing grades on our streets. After the City Council adopts a grade it is to be hoped it will be followed, and that the dirt and gravel that is to be moved will be put where the engineer indicates and not where some officious street commissioner, or councilman may think handiest.

—Reports from Watertown say that three men giving their names as Airy, Williams and LaCroix were arrested for steeling a fur overcoat that Miller had out for a sign at his store last week. They were fined $25 and costs or thirty days in jail, each. They took the jail and were forwarded to the county seat. They are supposed to have been interested in other similar cases throughout the community, but have escaped being caught before.

—The Board of Education have voted to re-arrange the upper part of the school house making one more room, over the rear stairs, closing them up. So that we may conform to the rules of a high school. We are sorry to see the back stairs disappear from their place. In case of fire in the front of the building they would be found exceedingly convenient. Of course the board will provide an out-side fire escape of some kind, as they would hardly expect a hundred or so of pupils to be confined in so dangerous a place without a possible means of escape in case of fire.

—Don't forget that on next Tuesday evening, November 14th the Criterion Comedy Company will present for the first time in this city the three act melo-drama, "An only daughter," and 1-act farce, "Deception." Prof. John O'Connor, of Waverly has been secured to furnish the music and accompany the specialties which will be introduced incidental to the performance, and his well known ability as a pianist, is a guarantee of good music. The latest comic song success entitled, "Hey Rube," or "Two Jays at a Circus," will be introduced by Messrs. L. W. Everson and E. H. Slater. Don't forget the time and place. Reserved seats on sale at Wittman's drug store. Curtain rises at 8 o'clock.

Personals.

Guy Murphy has returned from his western trip.

Paul Datko is home from Larimore, for the Winter.

F. G. Nott. of Howard Lake, did business in Delano today.

Jenner Chance visited the Twin Cities the first of the week.

Mrs. William Hawker spent a part of the week at Hamline, with her son Charles S.

Alexander Hayes and Mr. Long, of Montrose, made Delano a business visit on Thursday.

John Sleight, of Rockford, was over Thursday. He did not express himself concerning Ohio.

The portly form of W. H. Mapes was seen at an early hour on Monday morning, on our streets,

David Cochran, Waverly's noted Populist attorney, was practicing in Delano courts on Wednesday.

Dick Murphy is back from the prairie. He raised a fine crop of whiskers which he brought along.

Misses Smith and Taylor, teachers in the Buffalo school, visited with Miss Irene Cheeley last Saturday.

Willie Kubon, of Minneapolis, came up on his bicycle and spent a few days with Delano friends this week.

A. Andersen is home from his summer's work on his farm. He likes Delano for a winter residence.

Mr. Peterson and family, of St. Paul, spent Sunday in Delano, and listened to a sermon by their old Pastor, J. W. Powell.

Arthur Powell, of the State University, came up last evening for a few days visit with his parents, Rev. and Mrs. J. W. Powell.

Card of Thanks.

We wish to express our heart felt thanks to all who helped us in any way at the time of the sickness and death of our little daughter, Hazel.

Chicken-Pox.

Cases of Varicella, or chicken-pox have been seen about town during the summer. This is almost strictly a children's disease. And is usually unattended with evil results, in healthy families. Quite frequently the first symptom of chicken-pox is several red, raised spots on the body or extremities of the little one, these vesicles soon fill with water, and present the appearance of a small water blister. Some times the eruption appears on one portion of the body and afterwards on another, giving in the same patient blisters forming and drying up, or all stages of the disease in one patient. Occasionally blisters form in the mouth and throat and are quite annoying. Usually little if any treatment is needed, save to keep the patient indoors during bad weather. It may happen that high fever, or if a child is croupy or subject to spasms, symptoms of these will attend the onset of a case.

Judge Canty vs. Whiskey.

Last week while sentencing a young Minneapolis man to the peretentiary for 15 years, for killing his friend in a saloon row, Judge Canty took occasion to express himself concerning the law in such cases, quite plainly, also against the vices of idleness and drinking. The young man who committed murder claims to have been so drunk as not to know that he shot his friend. Below we give a portion of the Judges feeling and eloquent lecture to the criminal before his departure to Stillwater. Read it carefully young man. Read it carefully:

"Your parents and family are hard working, honest, law-abiding people, and this certainly has fallen upon them with terrible force. I feel much more sympathy for them than I do for you in this case. While you were undoubtedly, at the time of the commission of this crime, under the influence of liquor, and perhaps considerably so—I am inclined to think you were—still the experience of ages is that it will not do to excuse men when they commit such crimes under the influence of liquor. The experience of all time is that because men are more likely to commit crimes at such times, that the punishment ought to be more severe on that account in order to protect society from men under the influence of liquor; at the same time I do not feel like applying that principle here.

"You like most other men, have been the 'architect of your own fortune.' While I have no doubt you had no intention of committing this crime while you were sober, and undoubtedly had none until after this fight in the evening, and possibly not until the moment you committed it, still the evidence shows that you had been putting in your time in idleness for nearly a year; that you had been somewhat addicted to drink, just how much the evidence does not show.

"Now, a young man in the prime of life, industry and energy, doing nothing but occasionally drinking whisky—if it was only occasionally—is bound to end up in something bad. While he continues idle he is feeding all his vices. He must occupy himself with something. If he does no occupy himself with honest business he is likely to fall into something dishonest."

Is there not a possibility that the club business is being a little overdone in this country If we don't stop organizing so many new clubs, various places will at length be in the condition of the country neighborhood where there were 10 different church organizations and only 9 families in the place.—Wright County Times.

The Eagle says "it is acknowledged that Wm. Quinn is the only man with tack enough to properly 'oil' the Buffalo Gazette when it has a bucking spell." Nobody ever heard of it being "acknowledged" by anybody but the Eagle, and after "acknowledging" herself through her own columns that there was no law preventing her being bribed by Bill King her "acknowledgements" for other people don't amount to much.

DON'T LOOK FOR THE FLAWS.

Don't look for the flaws as you go through life,
And even when you find them
It is wise and kind to be somewhat blind,
And look for the virtue behind them;
For the cloudiest night has a hint of light
Somewhere in the shadows hiding;
It is better by far to look for a star
Than the spots on the sun abiding.

The current of life runs ever away.
To the bosom of God's great ocean;
Don't set your force 'gainst the river's course
Or think to alter its motion;
Don't utter a curse on the universe
Or rave at the trials before you;
Don't butt at the storm with your puny form
But bend, and let it go o'er you.

This world will never adjust itself
To suit your whims to the letter,
Some things will go wrong your whole life long
And the sooner you know it the better,
It is folly to fight with the infinite,
And go under at last in the wrestle,
The wisest man shapes unto God's plan
As the water shapes into its vessel.

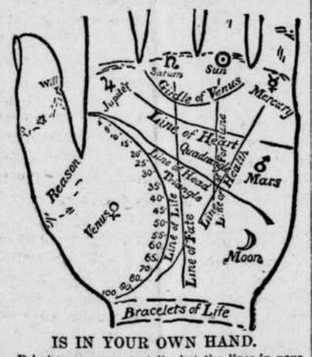
YOUR FUTURE



IS IN YOUR OWN HAND.

Palmistry assumes to tell what the lines in your hand indicate. It will amuse you, if nothing more. The above diagram almost explains itself. The length of the LINE OF LIFE indicates probable age to which you will live. Each BRACELET gives you thirty years. Well-marked LINE OF HEAD denotes brain power; clear LINE OF FORTUNE, fame or riches. Both combined mean success in life; but you must keep up with modern ideas to win it. You will find plenty of these in Demorest's Family Magazine, so attractively presented that every member of the family is entertained. It is a dozen magazines in one. A CLEAR LINE OF HEART bespeaks tenderness; a straight LINE OF FATE, peaceful life; the reverse if crooked. A well-defined LINE OF HEALTH spares you doctors' bills; so will the health hints in Demorest's. No other magazine publishes so many stories to interest the home circle. You will be subject to extremes of high spirits or despondency if you have the GIRDLE OF VENUS well marked; keep up your spirits by having Demorest's Magazine to read. By subscribing to it for 1894 you will receive a gallery of exquisite works of art of great value, besides the superb premium picture, 17x21 inches, "I'm a Daisy!" which is almost a real baby, and equal to the original oil painting which cost $300; and you will have a magazine that cannot be equaled by any in the world for its beautiful illustrations and subject matter, that will keep you posted on all the topics of the day, and all the fads, and different items of interest about the household, besides furnishing interesting reading matter, both grave and gay, for the whole family; and while Demorest's is not a fashion magazine, its fashion pages are perfect, and you get with it, free of cost, all the patterns you wish to use during the year, and in any size you choose. Send in your subscription at once, only $2.00, and you will really get over $25.00 in value. Address the publisher, W. Jennings Demorest, 15 East 14th St., New York. If you are unacquainted with the Magazine, send for a specimen copy. A large QUADRANGLE means honesty; a large TRIANGLE, generosity; long FIRST DIVISION OF THUMB, strong will; LONG SECOND DIVISION, reasoning faculty. The MOUNT OF JUPITER betokens ambition; that of SATURN, prudence; the SUN, love of splendor; MARS, courage; MOON, imagination; VENUS, love of pleasure; and MERCURY, intelligence. Take our advice as above and you will be sure to possess the last and most valuable quality.

HOW A PUZZLE WAS SOLVED.

When you want a certain article, you want the best make of that article, don't you?

But how to determine which make is best is what puzzles you, isn't it?

And when the puzzle is solved for you, by authority which cannot be questioned, you are pleased, aren't you?

And you would like to hear of one puzzle that has been solved for the people of the whole world, wouldn't you?

Well, we will tell you about that very puzzle, and its solution.

At the Universal Exposition of 1889 at Paris, France, the best sewing machines of the world, including those of America, were in competition. They were passed upon by a jury composed of the best foreign mechanical experts, two of whom were the leading sewing machine manufacturers of France.

This jury, after exhaustive examination and tests, adjudged that the Wheeler & Wilson machines were the best of all, and awarded that company the highest prize offered, the GRAND PRIZE, giving other companies only gold, silver and bronze medals.

The French Government, as a further recognition of superiority, decorated Mr. Nathaniel Wheeler, president of the company, with the Cross of the Legion of Honor, the most prized honor of France.

That is how the puzzle of the best sewing machine in the world was fully solved by the most competent authority in the world in favor of the No. 9 and No. 12 Wheeler & Wilson machines.

The No. 9, for family use, and the No. 12, for manufacturing uses, are the best in the world to-day.

And now, when you want a sewing machine, if you do not get the best, it will be your own fault.

Ask your sewing machine dealer for the No. 9 Wheeler & Wilson machine, and if he does not keep them, write to us for descriptive catalogue, prices and terms.

OUR COUNTRY'S HOPE.

Our country stands with outstretched hands,
Appealing to her boys;
From them must flow her weal or woe,
Her anguish or her joys.

A ship she rides on human tides
Which rise and sink anon:
Each rolling wave may prove her grave,
Or bear her nobly on.

The friends of right with armor bright,
A valiant Christian band,
Through God our aid may yet be made
A blessing to our land.

Judge J. O. Andrews, of Watertown S. D., brother of Dr. Andrews of this city enjoys a reelection with a majority of 300.—Mankato Journal.

PHIL SCHEIG and Lou Floyd have been arrested in Southampton, Eng., and are soon to be in Minneapolis for trial. Not much use trying to escape the law now-a-days, when the law sets out to attend to business.

THE Minneapolis Journal, St. Paul Globe and other enterprisind dailies are claiming all the honors of capturing the absconding manager of the defunct Minneapolis Guaranty Loan Company, Louis J. Menage. And still Menage is sailing high in his new Southern home.

OUR Republican friends seem pretty thoroughly convinced that William McKinley, of Ohio, must be their standard bearer in '96. This will, of course, make "protection to home industries" the battle cry of the campaign. The McKinley bill has already been in working order long enough to convince most people that it cannot prevent a lowering of prices of farm produce and laborers' wages.

SOME of the Republican papers are howling about Hawaii. They succeeded in making people believe that the silver question was of more importance than any other to the United States, and now they seem bent on bringing up these little Islands imbroglio to take up the time of Congress. Any thing before tariff appears to be their tactics. Tariff is a tax, all the same and Grover Cleveland is a man to keep his pledges. We will hear about them when Congress comes together next month.

SECRETARY OF STATE GRESHAM has written one of the ablest and most exhaustive state papers that has been given to the public for some time on the Hawaii question. He takes the ground and argues the points, in language not to be controveried, that, after examining into the case thoroughly he is satisfied that the United States authorities went too far in aiding the overthrow of the existing form of Government in the Islands, and does not propose to take advantage of the weakness of foreign powers to acquire their possessions in any such way. He closes his letter as follows:

"The Government of Hawaii surrendered its authority under a threat of war until such time only as the government of the United States, upon the fact being presented to it, should reinstate the constitutional soverign and the provisional government was created, 'to exhist until terms of union with the United States of America has been negotiated and agreed upon.'

"A careful consideration of the acts will, I think, convince you that the treaty which was withdrawn from the senate for further consideration should not be resubmitted for its action thereon.

"Should not the great wrong done to a feeble, but independent state by an abuse of the authority of the United States be undone by restoring the legitimate government? Anything short of that will not, I respectfully submit, satisfy the demands of justice. Can the United States consistently insist that other nations shall respect the independence of Hawaii while not respecting it themrelves?

"Our government was the first to recognize the independence of the islands and should be the last to acquire sovereignty over them by force and fraud. Respectfully submitted.

W. Q GRESHAM."

Party Lines.

A great deal is being said about party lines. Some advocate the abolition of party lines altogether. It is hard for us to see how with one party favoring a paternal form of government. Wanting the government to provide everything for its people, and to throw around them the strong wall of protection. To pension not only those who deserve pensioning but many who have no excuse for being beneficeries of the government. To tax or license, for a consideration, for a consideration, one class of business while others do business free of charge and another party favoring free and equal rights to all men, a right to do business where they can do it to the best advantage. A man's right to compete in the markets of the world for business, without being hampered by productive tariffs, or license to do business, given for a sum of money, to a favored class who are posessors of sufficient wealth, while the poor man is frozen out of trade or business altogether. While men are posessed of principles diametically opposed to each other, though each thinks himself right, and has the best interests of his country at heart. from his standpoint it is hard to see how they can consistently surrender their party for any other. A great many things are brought to bear at the present time, As in the past, to bring about the end. Men have been "electionered" have been persusded to vote against the man represnting their principles became his opponent, who opposed the views of the voter, politically as far as possibles to do so, was a member of church or his club, or the secret organization to which he belonged. So long as men will use or allow others to use the fact that they are together on some other grounds than politics, to use their votes when simply political questions are at issue. So long may you expect turmoil, uneasiness, and unrest among the masses. A hunting after new ideas, new parties, anything to quiet the feelings, to aid in making men believe they have done the best they can. The proper thing to do is to do what the GAZETTE suggested a few weeks since, post up from non-partisan literature, and from both sides, newspapers, form your opinion of what is right and what is wrong for our government and whenever the privilege presents itself exercise your right to vote according to the dictates of your own conscience. Don't ask Tom, Dick and Harry how you shall vote. But find out what they believe about living questions from your own judgment, and vote accordingly. Be independent. Be a man.

Hold Your Wheat.

Nov. 8th, 1893.

MY DEAR SIR: Every country in Europe, excepting Russia, has this year had a short wheat crop. Our own crop is at least 100,000,000 under last year and 200,000,000 less than we raised in 1891.

The general financial stringency of the last six months has brought out large supplies, for all the harvest this year has been a poor one. This has kept the market price down. The price is governed by the law of supply and demand. For over a year we have had too liberal a supply.

The exports this fall have been large, amounting to about 80,000,000 since the last harvest began. It is doubtful if January 1st, 1894, there will be enough wheat in the United States to meet our usual requirements till after another harvest. As a result of the present low price a smaller acreage of winter wheat has been sown than for several years past.

After a thorough investigation of the conditions existing I feel certain that the year 1894 will bring much higher prices for wheat, and I do not hesitate to urge every one of our northwestern producers to hold their wheat in hand for a few months. We might just as well keep, at least, a part of this extra profit for ourselves as to give it to the elevators and millers by selling now. I myself have two crops on hand and it shall rot before being marketed at the low prices of the past year.

The conditions are such that every bushel of wheat now remaining in the producers hands can be made to bring one dollar before another harvest, if all of it would be held for that price.

Each day the world consumes over 6,000,000 and the present large supplies at terminal points would rapidly decrease, if the farmers would cease, for a time, to augment them.

Will you help the northwest to save a little more of the great wealth it produces, by giving this letter space in your paper.

Yours very truly,
CHAS. L. HYDE.
Pierre, S. D,

WASHINGTON LETTER.

(From our Regular Correspondent.)

WASHINGTON, D. C., Nov. 10, 1893.

President Cleveland is hard at work upon his message to Congress and all of the members of the cabinet upon their annual reports, just as they would have been had the result of the election been more satisfactory to them. About six weeks is usually devoted by the President to the preparation of his annual message to Congress, but this year, although the message will be unusually important, he will have only about four weeks in which to prepare it.

While neither the President nor any member of the cabinet cares to publicly discuss the result of the elections at this time it can be positively stated that they do not regard them in any sense a condemnation of the administration and will not swerve a hair's breadth from the line of policy that had been previously marked out. Of course they were disappointed. They had cause to expect that the democratic state tickets would be defeated in Ohio and New York, but not by such large pluralities; in Massachusets and Iowa they were both surprised and disappointed, although they knew of the usual efforts that were being made to persuade every man who was in any sense a sufferer from the business depression resulting from past vicious republican legislation that the democratic party was responsible for it all. They did not expect them to succeed so well, that is all.

Few democratic Congressmen are in Washington now, but those who are here are here are unanimously of the opinion that the result of the elections will not have the slightest effect toward changing the nature of the tariff and other contemplated legislation. Representative McMillin, a prominent democratic member of the House Ways and Means committee, says: "The tariff question has nothing to do with it, as the character of the bill we will report has not yet been made public and therefore could not have been condemned." Representative Forman says: "You can never tell what will happen in an off year. I believe that the defeat will make the democrats a little more cautious and harmonious. We have been getting too confident and too independent." Judge Lochren, Commissioner of Pensions, says: "It is the natural result of the hard times. The unthinking people have charged the financial troubles to the party in power." Not a single democrat has yet been found here who is even a little bit discouraged over the out look Ex-Congressman Morrison, who is regarded by many democrats as available Presidential timber, voiced the general democratic sentiment when he said: "I can find no better expression than that of the Irishman who after being thrashed said: 'I am certainly licked, but not conquered.'"

Not a few republicans find that the dumpling of victory has a spider in it. Those who have been maneuvering to make either Mr. Benjaman Harrison, Senator Allison or ex-Speaker Reed their Presidential candidate for 1896 find their labor all swept away by the prominence now enjoyed by Gov. McKinley and his phenominal plurality. McKinley has never been popular with the republican leaders because he would never allow himself to be used by them.

The worst disappointed people of all are the populists who were led to believe, or rather led themselves to believe, that they would carry Virginia and thus get a substantial foot hold in the South Not only did they fail to carry Virginia, although they had the passive if not the active assistance of the republicans, but they even failed to hold their own in their western strongholds.

The republican administration left the navy department a costly legacy in in the plans upon which several of the smaller gunboats have been built, but the costliest of all were those for the new battle-ship Texas, which was built at the Norfolk navy yard. According to the official information received at the Navy department this week it will take about $50,000 in money and about three months to make the changes necessary to make the boiler keelsons strong enough to support the boilers. The Texas is being built upon English plans which have from the very first been opposed by many naval officers, because of various defects which they have from time to time pointed out, and not a few of them have expressed the opinion (in private) that it is impossible ever to make the Texas either a good sea-going ship or a good fighting ship, no matter what charges are made.

The administration has demanded an apology from the goverument of Honduras for having fired upon a vessel flying the American flag.

THE TOLEDO WEEKLY BLADE

And Book Containing all the Nasby Letters for One Dollar.

In answer to a general demand from all parts of the United States, the Toledo Blade has published in one volume, cloth bound, all of the "Nasby Letters" ever written by the late D. R. Locke, omitting perhaps a few unimportant letters on local and forgotten topics. Only a few of these letters were ever published in book form. Everybody has read some of them, but who has read all of them? The book contains over 500 large pages, and all the Nasby Letters written during a period of twenty-five years; also a port ait of D. R. Locke from his last photograph. It would sell at one dollar or more, but will never be placed on sale. One hundred thousand copies are now being printed and bound, and one copy will be sent postpaid by mail free to every person who this winter remitts one dollar for the Weekly Blade one year. Everybody invited to send for a specimen copy of the Weekly Blade, which will give a full description of the book "The Nasby Letters."

The Toledo Weekly Blade is the best and most popular weekly newspaper published in this country. It has the largest circulation of any weekly news paper, and goes to every State, Territory and nearly every county of the Union. Only one dollar a year, including the above mentioned book free. Send postal to the Blade, Toledo, Ohio, for a free specimen copy of the paper. Send the address of your friends also. 7-1t

Judge Benedict Writes an Interesting Letter From Cape Town.

From the St. Paul Globe we clip the following items of interest from a letter from Hon. C. H. Benedict, who our readers will remember as Delano's 4th of July orator in 1891, and who has been appointed counsel to Cape Town by President Cleveland:

"John E. Hearn has received a letter from Hon. C. H. Benedict announcing his arrival at his post as consul at Cape Town, Africa. He states in his letter that he, as well as his wife and daughter Emily, are pleased with the place and enjoyed the voyage of thirty-three days at sea. They have plenty of social entertainment, and are delighted with the beauties of Cape Town. In describing the city he says it has a population of 100,000, located on the sea. The mountains back of the town extend almost perpendicular to a hight of 4,000 feet. The colleges and churches are highly praised. The public library building is larger than the city hall in St. Paul, the theatre is as large and handsome as the Metropolitan in St. Paul, the street car service is good and the climate is delightful and healthful, the water system is splendid. A description of the products, flowers, fruits and scenery is wound up with the statement that the country is the nearest to perfection he ever saw. He sends thanks to his friends for securing his appointment, and says he never can show his gratitude for the aid given him in securing the appointment. The United States interests there are spoken of as being extensive."

Menage is Arrested.

NEW YORK, Nov. 16.—A specia from Guatamala says:

Acting on the request of the United States, the police arrested today Lonis Menage, the refugee from Minneapolis who was the head of the Northwestern Guaranty Loan Company, and was concerned in gigantic speculations. He fled the country and was reported to have gone to Chila. Menage was greatly surprised by the arrest. His case resembles that of Weeks, and there is much comment in official circles, as it is known that the prisoner is under serious charges. Menage is cool, but nervous, and will not discuss the case.—Globe.

Our Thanks Giving Gift to Ever One of Our Readers.

"AN AMERICAN BEAUTY."

By special arrangement with the publishers, we are enabled to make every one of our readers a present of an exquisit oil panel-picture, 20 inches high, entitled, an "American Beauty," which has been admired by all who have seen it. This superb picture is from the brush of the same artist who painted the "Yard of Pansies" and "Yard of Roses." The reproduction is equal insevery respect to the original, from which it cannot be distinguished, and accompanying it are full directions for framing at home at a cost of a few cents, thus forming a beautiful ornament for the high narrow wall-spaces for which it is so difficult to obtain pictures of the proper shape. It is a suberb Thanksgiving gift. Send your name and address to the publisher, W. Jennings Demorest, 15 East 14th Street, New York, with three cents (either stamps or pennies) to pay for the packing, mailing, etc., and mention that you are a reader of the BUFFALO GAZETTE and you will receive by return mail one of these valuable works of art.

WE HAVE Established Headquarters at

DELANO

And expect to be here for the next FOUR MONTHS. We sell the BEST RANGE in the World and took more premiums at the World's Fair than any other firm there when every stove firm in the land was represented. All we ask of you is to go and examine the dealers Range and then exanine ours, and if you don't say we have the cheapest and best Range made, why don't deal with us. We expect the dealers to kick and the more they kick the better we like it. They do the kicking and we sell the Ranges. We have sold over one thousand Ranges in this State this year and you can write and ask anyone using our goods about their merits, and we refer you to any Bank in St. Louis as to our standing.

YOURS TRULY,
WROUGHT IRON RANGE CO.

YES, young man, football is an intellectual game. It brings the understanding into play.

THE average annual production of the precious metals in the world from 1876 to 1880 was: Gold, $119,975,000; silver, $112,500,000.

TEN THOUSAND babies were checked at the world's fair children's warm storage plant and only one abandoned. This is a great record in kinder gartening.

A REPRESENTATION of the bagpipe was found in the ruins of Tarsus. The instrument was in use 2,000 years before the Christian era, and its origin is unknown.

THE Hartford (Conn.) Courant is 129 years old and as frisky as the youngest colt in the newest pasture. It is almost superfluous to wish the Courant a long and prosperous life.

MISS DORA MILLER, a New Orleans teacher, has patented a blackboard eraser, for the right of which she has been offered $5,000. She's going to wipe out a mortgage with it.

COL. A. H. MCLEAN, who died, single, in Caledonia, N. Y., recently, aged 75 years, was engaged to President Fillmore's only daughter, who died before the day fixed for their marriage.

OF the children under 10 years of age in this country, 8,983,000 are whites of native parentage; 3,735,000 are whites of foreign parentage, and 2,156,000 are colored. As compared with the census of 1880 the foreign element is steadily increasing over the whites of native parentage.

HERE is another argument in favor of the use of tobacco: A short time ago a man named Jose Cortez died in Mexico at the advanced age of 198, and he had smoked all his life. If he had not used tobacco he might have been kicked to death by a mule when he was but a stripling of 65.

REV. MR. AND MRS. SPRAGUE and Rev. Mr. and Mrs. Pierce, all ordained ministers of the Unitarian church, followed each other in a San Francisco pulpit recently. Mr. Pierce preached on "Faith," his wife on "Hope," Mrs. Sprague on "Charity" and Mr. Sprague on "The Greatest of These."

SMITH COLLEGE, at Northampton, Mass., rejoices in a widow among its present enrollment of students. She is a girl in her earliest twenties, is very pretty, and is altogether an object of much admiration and interest to the 599 spinsters who constitute the remainder of the college pupil population.

A CYCLONE insurance company in South Carolina refuses to pay for a bridge destroyed in the recent storms by a huge wave that swept inland from the sea. The company's contention is that it was water and not wind that wrecked the bridge. It remains to be seen whether or not the plea will hold water.

POVERTY as it exists in London is almost beyond conception. It was stated in a public address before the London Reform union, recently, that in that city 150,000 families live in single-roomed tenements; that one in eight of the city's population dies in the workhouse or workhouse infirmary; that over 300,000 persons live all their days in destitution, and that 1,300,000 have to subsist on $5.50 per week per family.

THE wisdom of the world's fair management in establishing an emergency hospital at the fair grounds has been fully demonstrated. Since the work of construction began there have been cared for at the hospital 18,500 patients, an average of about 120 a day. Some of these were workmen injured during the work of construction, but the majority were visitors who were overcome by heat or fatigue. All received prompt medical or surgical care, and but thirty-three deaths were recorded.

DR. SAMUEL F. SMITH, the author of "America," passed his 85th birthday recently at his home in Newton Center, Mass., near Boston. He is active and alert, and feels the burden of his advanced age little. He visited the world's fair during the early summer. Since his return from his long trip abroad, ten years ago, Dr. Smith has been actively engaged in literary pursuits and religious work. He has continued to preach, supplying vacant churches in neighboring Massachusetts towns.

IT is estimated that the oriental nabobs of the Midway Plaisance, at the world's fair, pocketed at least $1,000,000. The banks and tourist agencies have been the recipients of deposits from Egyptians, Copts, Franks, Arabs, Turks, Hindoos, Japs, Nubians, Syrians, Singalese and the representatives of other ancient civilizations whose names, customs and morals have all been new and full of interest to other people. PROF. BROOKS, of Geneva, N. Y., the discoverer of the new comet on October 16, regards this, his latest addition to the cometary family, as his silver wedding present, because it came to him on the morning succeeding the twenty-fifth anniversary of his wedding. It is interesting to note that this is the third comet found by Prof. Brooks in the constellation Virgo, all being within short distances of each other. It is also the third found by him in the last fourteen months, and the nineteenth comet discovered by this astronomer. The first eleven were detected with telescopes of his own construction.

ROUND-UPS of contraband Chinese are affording exciting diversion for American citizens along the British Columbia border. Gangs of ten or a dozen coolies, convoyed by white men attempting to smuggle them into this country, have recently been the object of exciting chases by citizens or officers in the border counties of Washington. A company of thirteen Chinese and two white men was discovered near Sumas. Citizens gave chase, the two white men opened fire, and in the melee one Chinaman was badly wounded and six were captured. Several captures from such bands have been recently made.

SPOILED THEIR PLANS.

A Brakeman Thwarts a Gang of Train Robbers and Is Shot.

MOUNT PULASKI, Ill., Nov. 15.—A daring attempt was made Monday evening to hold up the south-bound passenger train on the Peoria, Decatur & Evansville railroad, between Mount Pulaski and Lincoln. The train left Lincoln at 8:45 p. m., and was due here at 9 o'clock. It consisted of a combination baggage and express car, a smoking car and two coaches.

At the junction of the Peoria, Decatur & Evansville railway and the Havana branch of the Illinois Central is situated the citizens' coal shaft, which has always been a favorable place for tramps to board trains on either of the roads. Monday night when the train held up stopped for coal and water three men were seen to board the front end of the combination car, but not much attention was paid to the occurrence, as it happens frequently. When the train reached Salt creek bridge, 6 miles east of Lincoln, it slackened its speed, owing to the defective condition of the bridge. At this point a shot was fired into one of the coaches, which caused Brakeman Scott to run forward to inquire the cause. As he approached the forward platform of the car next to the last he was confronted by a medium-sized man wearing a gum coat and a mask made of a handkerchief. Scott saw the danger and promptly cut the bell cord, thus preventing the robbers from stopping the train. He was in the act also of extinguishing the lights in the car when the robbers, who had confronted him, fired at him and inflicted a dangerous wound in the abdomen. Scott, however, had succeeded already in putting the car in darkness and in baffling the robbers. Being unable to stop the train they were afraid to undertake to rob the passengers in the darkness. One of the passengers ran to rescue the brakeman, but was halted by a shot from a confederate, which passed through the passenger's hat.

Immediately the robbers began shooting into the cars. The engineer hearing the firing increased the speed of the train so rapidly and suddenly that one of the robbers, a tall, slim man, did not venture to jump from the train when the other jumped. He was carried to this station, where he alighted, and with a revolver in each hand began firing to intimidate whomever he met. No one attempted to intercept him. A posse was organized at once and began a search. All strangers here in Lincoln were taken into custody and the sheriff of the county was notified.

When the train pulled into Mount Pulaski the passengers were in a lively state of excitement. The injured brakeman was placed under the care of physicians, who pronounce his injuries very serious. The train proceeded on its way with a guard of armed citizens, who volunteered to accompany it as far as Decatur. Brakeman Scott's home is in Paris, Edgar county, Ill.

The pay-car was generally supposed to be attached to this train, but owing to the fact of the many train robberies of late Superintendent Starbuck decided to hold the pay train until daybreak. Five shots in all were fired through the window from the plat form.

ST. PAUL, Minn., Nov. 15.—Near Worthington, Minn., Sunday night a gang of robbers attempted to wreck the Omaha passenger train. The track was torn up so as to throw the train from the track. John B. Iverson, a farmer living about 3 miles from the junction, had been to Worthington to get $350, and shortly before dark started for home. About half a mile from the junction a gang of men working on the track called for him to halt, and on his refusal opened fire, wounding him in the leg. When he recovered consciousness he was minus his cash. He raised the alarm and section men sent along the track found the spikes drawn at the most dangerous point on the grade.

HUNDREDS KILLED.

Destructive Storm Sweeps Over the Southern Part of Japan.

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 15.—Advices from Yokohama state that a severe storm swept over the southern part of Japan, beginning October 28 and lasting several days. In Okayama where the flood wrought the most destruction 141 persons are known to have perished and 100 more are missing. Thirteen hundred and forty-six houses were washed away, bridges were destroyed and a great number of horses and cattle killed. From other points 448 persons are reported killed, 475 ships and boats wrecked and great damage done to farming lands. Multitudes are receiving aid from the local government.

OHIO'S VOTE.

Some Late Figures Regarding the Recent Election.

COLUMBUS, O., Nov. 15.—Based on full official returns from all except eight counties and the pluralities of the republican and democratic parties in the eighth, the prohibition vote in sixty-four and the populist vote in sixty-six counties, the following totals are figured out: McKinley, 432,900; Neal, 352,000: Macklin, prohibition, 4,600; Bracken, populist, 16,300; total, 822,900. McKinley's vote was 16,800 over Harrison's in 1888 and 27,700 over it in 1892. The prohibitionists lost 4,000 and the populists, so far as reported, gained 1,400.

FIGHTING FOR LIBERTY.

Cuban Rebellion Reported in Full Sway and Help Is Promised.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 15.—Marcos Morales, president of the Cuban league in this state and chairman of the advisory board of that organization, has received dispatches which aver that a rebellion is in full sway in Cuba. He asserted that the natives of that island have risen in force and have determined to throw off the yoke of Spain. They expect help from their countrymen in the United States, and President Morales says it will be given.

Embezzled $3,700.

CHICAGO, Nov. 15.—John Connors, custodian at the city hall of stolen property recovered by the police, has embezzled $3,700 of the funds intrusted to his care and will be arrested for the crime. Connors lost the money thus wrongfully obtained in playing the races at Hawthorne. He has been relieved from duty.

A Peacemaker Killed.

PADUCAH, Ky., Nov. 15.—Fred Anderson while fighting with his brother accidentally stabbed to the heart Lee Holland, a friend who slipped between the belligerents. Anderson escaped.

WESTERN OUTLAWS.

They Shoot an Oregon Bank President and Steal a Big Sum.

WALLA WALLA, Wash., Nov. 15.—A daring bank robbery and attempt to murder the cashier occurred at Milton, Ore., 10 miles south of this city, at 3 o'clock Monday afternoon. At the time few persons were seen on the street. Three men, well mounted, without attracting special attention rode leisurely into town and dismounted at the door of the Bank of Milton. Two entered the bank, while the third stood guard outside and held the horses. Two pistol shots were soon heard and immediately after the men emerged from the bank, mounted the horses and rode like the wind out of town to the southward. No attempt was made to mask faces and one of the men was identified as A. McCarthy.

President A. Hopson, Cashier N. A. Davis and Assistant Cashier William Hopson were in the bank at the time. Cashier Davis was behind the counter counting out $770 to give to President Hopkins. The first intimation of robbery that he had was when the two shots were fired by the robbers before making any verbal demands. Both shots took effect on President Hopson, one passing through the left arm, and one going through the left side, inflicting a painful flesh wound and felling him to the floor. A revolver was held so close to the head of Cashier Davis that the concussion knocked him down.

The robbers then demanded from William Hopson the money and he handed them a tray of counter change, containing $994.25. Taking this they left immediately, without any attempt to get the cash in the vault. The noise of the shots spread an alarm and within five minutes an armed and mounted posse was in pursuit. The robbers were tracked southwest to Dry creek and it is supposed they turned there and went toward Wallulu, but all traces were lost a short distance beyond Dry creek.

CAUGHT IN ENGLAND.

Plunderers of a Minneapolis Bank Are in the Toils.

LONDON, Nov. 15.—Philip Scheig, formerly paying teller of the Bank of Minneapolis, and Frank Floyd were arrested at Southampton Monday night on board the North German Lloyd steamer Saale, from New York. Scheig is charged with robbing the Bank of Minneapolis of $75,000 and Floyd is charged with being an accomplice in the robbery. The Saalle was delayed by bad weather and was not sighted at Southampton until 8:50 o'clock Monday evening. A tender on which were several harbor police met the vessel a few miles from Southampton and the officers placed the two men under arrest. Mr. Gillig of the Bank of Minneapolis, who came to England on the Umbria for the purpose of intercepting Scheig and Floyd, accompanied the police down the bay and identified the two men. Scheig and Floyd both made violent resistance to arrest, and Scheig tried to use a revolver. They were soon overpowered and disarmed, two revolvers being taken from each man. The baggage of the men, which is supposed to contain the bulk of the stolen money, was seized.

FATAL FLAMES.

Several Buildings Burned at Memphis—Loss of Life Feared.

MEMPHIS, Tenn., Nov. 15.—What promised to be one of the most destructive fires of late years was checked Monday night by the fire department after a heroic fight, with the following losses: Schmatzreid Stove company, building and stock total loss, $70,000; insured, $50,000. Lemmon & Gale, wholesale dry goods, stock $180,000; building, $350,000; loss on building by fire, $7,000; loss on stock by water, $108,000; insured for $100,090. The Young Men's Christian association had rooms in the Schmatzreid building and found themselves hemmed in by the fire. Several jumped from the third story and were seriously hurt. A. J. Perkins, secretary of the Y. M. C. A., was fatally injured. Several persons known to have been in the building are missing and it is feared have perished.

REFUGEES IN JAIL.

The Ten Men Who Escaped from Siberia Placed Under Arrest.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 15.—The Russian minister at Washington has intervened in the matter of the ten escaped Russian convicts who were recently picked up in the Pacific ocean and landed at San Francisco. The minister asked that the men be arrested, presumably for the purpose of ascertaining whether they are criminal offenders escaped from Siberia. The treasury department promptly acted on the request and ordered the arrest of the men, and it has received word that this has been accomplished and that the men are in jail.

A BOLD ROBBERY.

Bandits Secure $1,000 from an Oklahoma Merchant.

EL RENO, O. T., Nov. 15.—Four bandits walked into the store of William Hawler at Arapahoe, O. T., Saturday evening, and, presenting revolvers at the heads of the proprietor and clerks, demanded that they open the safe and give up the money it contained. Their request was quickly granted and the robbers rode off with the booty. The robbery took place early in the evening and the amount secured was about $1,000. There is no trace of the perpetrators.

Another Victim.

CHICAGO, Nov. 15.—Miss Kate Snow, of Longwood, died Monday at Mercy hospital from injuries received in the Rock Island collision at Seventy-first street last Wednesday. Her father, D. M. Snow, was injured in the wreck and died immediately after his removal to Longwood. Miss Snow's death increases the list of fatalities to twelve.

A Train Robber Sentenced.

HOUGHTON, Mich., Nov. 15.—Jack Butler, the train robber, pleaded guilty Monday and was immediately sentenced to a term of five years in the branch state prison at Marquette.

Kills His Wife and Then Himself.

MILWAUKEE, Nov. 15.—Herman Schank Monday evening shot his wife and then himself. Both died shortly afterwards. Schank was 30 years of age and his wife 28. The tragedy occurred at No. 604 River street, where the couple lived. A quarrel caused the shooting.

Wife of Senator Platt Dead.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 15.—Mrs. Platt, wife of the Connecticut senator, died Monday. She was stricken with paralysis several years ago and never recovered. She was greatly beloved by a large circle of friends.

MINNESOTA NEWS.

Dismissed.

Assistant Attorney General Edgerton, together with the county attorney of Mille Lacs county, argued the Norton case before Judge Searle at Princeton. The court granted the motion to dismiss, and in his decision took occasion to say that unless there was some evidence adduced on the part of the state it was useless to have another trial, for the evidence did not warrant a conviction, and even if the jury did convict he would feel obliged to set the verdict aside, and in this Judge Baxter concurred.

This was the celebrated case of the state vs. A. Z. Norton. Norton was the village marshal and shot Joseph Brumbaugh, who resisted arrest. The coroner's jury returned a verdict of justifiable homicide. The case was brought to the attention of two grand juries, but no indictment was returned. At the September term in 1892, however, a true bill was found, accusing Norton of murder in the second degree. The case was continued for one year. Last September a trial was had and the jury failed to agree—nine for acquittal and three for conviction. Assistant Attorney General Edgerton, who conducted the prosecution, made a motion for a change of venue to another county. The motion was denied and a day was set for trial. The county attorneys made a motion to dismiss and the assistant attorney general, who wanted to take other action at the instance of the attorney general, was defeated. This ends the case.

Gold Is There.

A. L. Gray, the special government agent sent out by the general land commissioner to investigate the Rainy river gold fields, has finished and says there is undoubtedly plenty of coal in that country. He will recommend the withdrawal of such lands from entry under the timber and stone and homestead acts, and the extension of the mineral laws in force in Colorado, California and other Western states to the gold lands in Minnesota. This will satisfy the gold hunters, as a contest will be next to impossible. If the extension becomes a fact there will be a great hegira to the new gold fields.

To Organize Beltrami County.

A movement is on foot to organize Beltrami county, which has hitherto existed as an unorganized county. A meeting has been called of the legal voters of the county, to be held Nov. 25, at Popple postoffice. This is on the western border of the county. Three commissioners will be appointed to undertake the organization in legal form, and blank petitions will be prepared for the voters to sign.

Released.

Some weeks ago Gov. Nelson granted John Beaver, a life convict, a commutation of sentence to 25 years. It was reported that Beaver would be released three years hence, and that he would not be allowed good time. This was a mistake, for Beaver is already a free man. He went to Belgium, where a sum of money awaits him. Beaver killed his wife in St. Cloud in 1870.

A Close Call.

An interurban car bound for Minneapolis was run into by a freight train at the railroad crossing below the university. The electric car had one side badly smashed and was knocked from the track. One passenger, whose name could not be learned, was cut by broken glass, but no more serious casualties are reported, although the car was well filled.

News in Brief.

The saw and planing mill at Merritt burned to the ground, also 120,000 feet of lumber owned by C. M. Hill, Saginaw. The cause was spontaneous combustion. Loss, $16,000; no insurance.

George Dixon, a prominent farmer, committed suicide by hanging himself from the cross beam in the barn.

The St. John's Catholic church at Foley Station was destroyed by fire. No insurance.

The township of Oneta, St. Louis county, has commenced action against G. J. Mallory to recover $4,097, the amount of shortage of Township Treasurer M. L. McMinn, on whose bond for $50,000 Mallory was surety.

The barn and stock sheds of O. J. Taylor, near Albert Lea, were burned by the tipping over of a lantern. Considerable amount of stock was destroyed.

While on his way to Fergus Falls with a load of wheat, Swen Swensen, one of the prominent and well-to-do farmers, was thrown from his wagon and killed. He leaves a wife and one son.

Ludwig Thiel, a substantial farmer near Rochester, suicided by hanging. Despondency over a broken leg failing to heal was the cause.

The safe in the McNeice mill at Little Sauk was blown open. There was no money obtained, but certificates of deposit, checks and notes amounting to $1,000. The mill was badly shattered by the explosion.

Burnhem, the slayer of Clark at Minneapolis, although exonerated by the coroner's jury, must stand trial, as he was indicted by the grand jury.

Burglars entered J. P. Brandenbourger's clothing store at Hastings and carried off goods and jewelry to the value of $75.

The Minnesota coal company of St. Paul has concluded to retire from business. They say all the anthracite coal available to St. Paul has been corralled by the combine.

Anton F. Strakota attempted suicide by jumping from the Wabasha street bridge in St. Paul. B. T. O'Neil caught him by the coat skirts just as he went over and there were wild cries until an officer reached the scene and pulled Strakota back into the world.

Adolph Gloeser, treasurer of the Cigarmakers' union of St. Paul, a man prominently identified with labor interests, committed suicide by shooting himself.

Deputy Internal Revenue Collector Gullickson made a seizure of 250 pounds of oleomargarine that was being sold for butter at the store of Pierce & Pennoyer, Winona. Assistant Dairy Commissioner Graham had also found the material and confiscated all that had been sold. It was offered in violation of the state law.

Elias Gunnerson, an oiler in the Atwood saw mill, Stillwater, was instantly killed. He was oiling the shafts and became entangled in the machinery. His head was crushed.

The Sampson House at Excelsior was totally destroyed by fire.

In Misery With Dyspepsia

Distress in the Stomach—Tired and Nervous

"New York City, June 22, 1892.

"I was in misery with dyspepsia. Sometimes I had no appetite, and when I did eat a hearty meal I felt much distress for hours after. I did not seem to have any ambition; was restless at night, and in the morning tired and nervous. My digestion was irregular and unsatisfactory. My wife urged me to take Hood's Sarsaparilla, and the result is that I have

"German Syrup"

I am a farmer at Edom, Texas. I have used German Syrup for six years successfully for Sore Throat, Coughs, Colds, Hoarseness, Pains in Chest and Lungs and Spitting-up of Blood. I have tried many kinds of Cough Syrups in my time, but let me say to anyone wanting such a medicine—German Syrup is the best. We are subject to so many sudden changes from cold to hot, damp weather here, but in families where German Syrup is used there is little trouble from colds. John F. Jones.

Old Time Methods of treating Colds and Coughs were based on the idea of suppression. We now know that "feeding a cold" is good doctrine.

UNSUNG.

As deep from sight are hidden
The jewels that are best,
So the poet's dearest treasures
Are hidden in his breast;
And though full sweet his measure,
He is a harp unstrung;
For of his soul's rare music
The best is left unsung.

Perhaps too vague its meaning,
Perhaps too short its stay
To catch the subtle beauty
Of the ethereal lay;
For, howsoever sweetly
The poet's voice has rung,
Far better in his bosom
Are songs that lie unsung.

And so are all men poets,
For in each heart a string,
When rightly touched, full sweetly
With melody will ring;
And in each soul, however
Discordant be the tongue,
Are strains of rarest beauty
That ever lie unsung.

Methinks this sweet soul music,
Too low for mortal ears,
May be a faint, far echo
Wafted from higher spheres—
Unclouded realms elysian,
From whose bright shores has sprung
The melody harmonious
That here must lie unsung.

A WHITE RIVAL.

How a Bull Pup Came Near Spoiling a Romance.

[Copyright, 1893, by the Author.]

What she could see in him I could never understand.

He was certainly big, and presumably strong and muscular, but neither in beauty nor in intelligence was he anything out of the ordinary of nature's handiwork.

I have heard her rave about his eyes; they were the color of coffee-berries, and moderately large, but their expression, to my mind, was eminently sheepish. He was disgracefully selfish, too, and was under the impression that his acquaintances could do nothing better than attend to his meals and accompany him in his walks. He was also abominably inquisitive and peculiarly clumsy.

And in spite of all this, she loved him—the most beautiful girl in the world loved him, and lavished caresses upon him that any man with eyes in his head would have given a kingdom to receive.

His accomplishments were few. He pretended to catch rabbits, and was reputed a "ratter" on the strength of having once barked at a rat in a cage; the servants had, with much difficulty, taught him a stupid trick of running off with paper parcels in order to get at the sweets or biscuits hidden inside; and an infinite amount of shouting, hallooing, and waving of arms would occasionally induce him to jump over a walking stick held two inches above the ground.

In short, he was a most ordinary white bull terrier pup, with a pink nose, surmounted by a black spot like a blot of ink from a pen.

Nevertheless, I owe him a debt of gratitude for being the cause of my first introduction to Ella Barrington.

It was on an August bank holiday—the one blazing hot day of a damp and dismal English summer. All the morning I had sought to avoid my kind, and at length, by four o'clock in the afternoon, I had discovered a delightful bracken-covered dell by the dry bed of a brook in Richmond park, where, but for the distant shouts of the gay and h'less cyclist, nothing disturbed the pastoral beauty of the scene.

Here I stretched myself out, with my arms under my head and my hat tilted over my eyes, and fell to dreaming and to wondering when, if ever, I, a bank clerk at two hundred a year, should so distinguish myself by the literary efforts which wholly occupied all my spare time as to be wholly independent of the bank, except as a place of safety for my superfluous thousands.

If only I could write a brilliant novel—the novel of the season! But American authors had declared that the stories of the world have all been told, and the serial papers preferred romances written by young ladies as being more sentimental and soothing, and the libraries would have nothing to do with the work of an unknown man, and—

A feminine shriek broke in upon my despondent musings, and the idea of a lovely woman in distress brought me to my feet.

She was lovely; of that there was no possible doubt. Tall and slender, with light brown hair and big appealing, dark blue eyes, eyelashes curling upwards and a red mouth drooping downwards dolefully.

She was angry, flushed and frightened, as was a small, stumpy girl, evidently her maid, who accompanied her. She clasped her gloved hands imploringly, and looked at me with tears in her eyes.

"My dog!" she panted. "My dog, Bull! Pray save him. Some 'Arries are murdering him!"

Then she ran through the bracken and I ran after her to the spot where five little east-end roughs and a villainous mongrel with one ear bitten through were wreaking vengeance upon a white bull terrier.

My six feet of authority, armed with a stout stick, speedily dispersed the dog's assailants. They retreated in confusion, employing language so bad as to be fortunately unintelligible to my damsel in distress, who was by this time kneeling beside her precious dog, hugging him effusively and trying to wipe away the blood from an injured leg.

The dog really had been a good deal knocked about, although I have no doubt he richly deserved it; he now, feeling himself an object of sympathetic interest, sat down and refused to move any further.

I knew something about dogs, and speedily bound up his paw with my own handkerchief and that of his mistress, which was simply marked "Ella."

Our faces were very close together over the dog's leg, and one of her tears splashed on to the back of my hand. Ella blushed, laughed and apologized. I never saw a lovelier blush or heard a sweeter laugh in my life.

Seeing that the beast was resolved not to walk, I carried him. He was a tremendous weight, and fidgeted abominably. But with Ella beside me, and her sweet, white hand, from which she had withdrawn the glove, constantly stroking the brute's neck, I trod on enchanted ground. The maid brought up the rear, giggling a good deal, but, as she constantly dragged behind to stare at soldiers, her presence did not in any way hamper us.

The accident took place near the White Lodge, and we had to pass out by the Star and Garter gates. Long before we reached them I was madly in love with Ella, and had already informed her that this was the happiest hour of my life, when to my dismay I learned that she was Miss Ella Barrington, eldest daughter of "Barrington's Starch," as we called him at the bank, where he lodged a portion of the wealth he had acquired in the manufacture of that commodity.

"Barrington's Starch" lived in a brand new stucco palace he had built for himself, near Richmond Hill; and, although he was not exactly a "Perkyn Middlewick," I could never understand how he could be the father of so refined and lovely and fairy like a being as Ella.

Before the gates of Barrington hall, as he called his brick and mortar monstrosity, we paused. We were friends, dear old friends, by this time. I knew that she was nineteen, and that she loved nothing in the world so much as her bull terrier pup, except her father and her brother Bob, and she knew every detail of my uneventful life of seven-and-twenty summers.

She asked me to come in; papa would want to thank me, she said.

I found papa genial enough, albeit somewhat condescending. "The young man from the bank," I afterwards found he called me, although my name, Ernest Wynter, was known to him, and he himself had begun life as a mill hand at six shillings a week. Still I was allowed to visit at Barrington hall, and to play tennis with the girls, and every day I grew more abjectly in love with Ella, whose unaffected charm of manner no parvenu surroundings could impair.

Of course I dared not to speak of my love to her. In my position, that was out of the question. I could only try to kiss the dog's head, just after her lovely lips had rested there, and to detain her hand as long as possible in greeting and parting from her.

Yet she must have guessed something of what I felt; for she took me one day into the kitchen-garden away from the children, and there, looking at me with lovely, tear-dimmed eyes, she suddenly remarked:

"I am so unhappy, Mr. Wynter. Papa wants me to marry Alderman Sir John Westbury. He is a nice old thing, and papa says I shall be lady mayoress. But I think he is quite as fond of my sister Bertha as he is of me, and—I am in love with some one else."

The look with which she accompanied her last words was a revelation. She grew very red the next moment and began rapidly talking of something else, while I, like a fool, stood and stared at her until her wretched young brother Bob came bawling down the garden after her, and so took my chance of speaking from me.

For the rest of the afternoon Ella avoided me, and, cursing my own stupidity, I went home and wrote her the following letter:

"My Dear Miss Barrington: I don't know whether you will think me the most conceited ass alive for supposing that a few words of yours to-day encourage me to tell you what I meant to keep secret—that ever since I first met you, three months ago, I have been so madly in love with you that I can think of nothing else. But as my entire income does not exceed two hundred and fifty a year I have thought it would be presumptuous to talk of marriage to you, even had I felt hopeful of gaining your love. I will not venture into your presence again until I have heard from you. Only, I entreat of you, for the sake of our delightful friendship, if I have made a mistake, and it is some one else whom you love, not to write to tell me what a fool I have been. I shall understand and respect your silence, and, much as I may suffer, I will not intrude upon you again.

"Always, my dear Miss Barrington, what you wish me to be—your sincere friend or your most devoted adorer,

"Ernest Wynter."

I suppose other men have watched for the postman before now, but surely no man ever waited upon his footsteps as I did for three whole weeks.

Even at the end of that time I should have gone on hoping, but for the fact that, meeting Ella and her sisters in the street, her manner toward me left no doubt as to her decision, for, whereas the younger members of the family were as friendly as ever, Ella's manner was chilling to a degree. She would not even look at me, nor would she shake hands when we parted.

I own I was thoroughly miserable, and developed a faculty for caustic epigrams at the expense of the sex in general, writing several stories, entitled respectively, "Jilted," "No Heart," "A Coquette's Conquest," etc.

Then, one dreary November day, I met Mr. Barrington in the streets of Richmond. He was unusually genial, and insisted upon my coming home to dinner with him.

"Never mind about dress," he said. "It is quite an unceremonious occasion. And, to tell you the truth, I shall be glad of a stranger's presence to control the family weeping. My Ella leaves us to-morrow, as I suppose you know, upon her marriage with my friend Sir John Westbury, the future lord mayor of London."

No, I did not know, and I could have gone home and blown my brains out. But instead, I went to dinner with him, feeling that I must see Ella for the last time.

She was looking very lovely, but extremely pale, and her red-rimmed eyes seemed to dwell on me reproachfully. I could not congratulate her, the words stuck in my throat. Sir John Westbury was there, a handsome, well-mannered man, who hardly looked his fifty years of age.

After dinner, Ella stole out to take a long farewell to her precious "Bull." Sir John objected to dogs on a honeymoon trip, and she feared she would be too nervous to attend to him in the morning.

Suddenly, as Sir John and Mr. Barrington and brother Bob and I sat over our wine and smoke, the dining-room door burst open, and Ella flew in, in tremendous excitement, laughing and crying hysterically.

In her hand she held aloft some dirty, crumpled pieces of paper, and at her heels was "Bull."

"Mr. Wynter! Ernest!" she cried. "This letter. Is it from you? When did you write it? When did you send it? Bull must have taken it from the hall table and buried it! It is dated a month ago, and I have only just found it in the ground in front of his kennel. Oh, please explain to papa and Sir John! I can't. I—I thought you didn't care about me, and that is why I was going to marry him!"

All this happened three years ago. Bertha is lady mayoress this year, and Ella Barrington is Ella Wynter, the idol of my heart. And installed in a palatial kennel in the garden of our pretty home is my white, my only, rival.

SCIENCE AND INDUSTHY.

—Whether a water wheel runs faster at night than in the day is a problem over which scientific readers of a German paper have been puzzling. The leading opinion is that the wheel does run faster at night, for the reason that the water is then cooler and somewhat more dense than when warmed by the sun.

—English-speaking countries have four different miles, the ordinary mile of 5,280 feet, and the geographical or nautical mile of 6,085 feet, making a difference of about one-seventh between the two. Then there is the Scotch mile of 5,928 feet, and the Irish mile of 6,720 feet. In fact, almost every country has its own standard mile.

—According to the census figures, the silk manufacturing industry in this country has grown wonderfully in the past ten years. In 1890 goods to the value of $69,000,000 were turned out, as against $34,500,000 in 1880. The number of hands employed here also increased from about 31,000 to 51,000, and the number of spindles have expanded from 508,137 to 1,254,798.

—A recent writer asks whether ants talk, and relates that he saw a drove of small black ants moving apparently to new quarters. Every time two met they put their heads together as though they were chatting. To investigate the matter he killed one, and the eyewitnesses of the murder hastened away and laid their heads together with every ant they met. The latter immediately turned back and fled.

—Metallurgy is tending to become one of the most efficient producers of manures in the world. Twenty years ago 20,000 tons of phosphoric acid were as poison to the 2,000,000 tons of cast iron which England produced, while English ships were ransacking the most distant regions of the globe for phosphoric acid for agriculture. The basic process has been the end of this anomaly. Apparatus attached to the furnaces in Scotland for the recovery of the ammonia out of the furnace gases have furnished a new and important source of sulphate of ammonia for agriculture.

—The results of six months' observations of Mars have led an astronomer at the Lick observatory to the conclusion—contrary to the generally-received views—that the dark portions of the disk represent land and the light portions water. This is supported by observations of San Francisco bay from Mount Hamilton, in which the bay appears brighter than the neighboring valley and mountains at the same distance. On this hypothesis the "canals" would correspond to ridges of mountains almost wholly immersed in water, while their doubling may represent parallel ridges of which our own earth furnishes examples.

He was a prodigious producer. He was capable of turning out a long serial in five or six weeks. His favorite posture while writing was lying on a rug or animal skin, face downward, leaning on one hand and with the other dashing off in lead pencil his fast-rushing thoughts, on large-sized coarse paper. He seldom revised his copy, or read it over. His fecund imagination was equal to all occasions. He was one of the finest extemporaneous speakers I ever listened to. He was the most genial of companions, and I cherish pleasant memories of a number of fishing excursions we made together in the Catskills. During the last years of his life he resided in a trim villa situated on the outskirts of the beautiful village of Stamford, in Delaware county, N. Y. A few hours before his death he is said, in spite of his age and enfeebled condition, to have stood up in bed and addressed a most effective and soul-stirring prayer to the Almighty. He realized that he was face to face with the grim specter, and the profound solicitude he entertained for his eternal spirit gave him this singular temporary strength to rise and, with sobbing voice, to implore mercy and forgiveness of the Omnipotence, whom he was so soon to confront.—N. "Speaking of memory," said a man, "I think I have a pretty good memory, but there are some things that I can't remember at all. I like, for instance (who does not?), to remember the preferences of my guests at the table; to be able to give, without asking after the first time, rare meat to him who likes it, the white meat to the one who prefers that, and so on; and I have pretty fair success in this; but I have one guest whose wishes in regard to tea and coffee I find myself utterly unable to fix in my mind. He takes coffee without sugar and with milk, and tea without milk and with sugar. Do you grasp that? You do, I know, for it is very simple; but do you know, I just simply can't remember it! I can't. Of course, I can realize it with perfect clearness when I think of it, but the impression promptly fades from my mind. If his habit were alike as to tea and coffee; if in both he used milk, but not sugar, or sugar but not milk, I could remember that easily; but when it comes to using one in one but not in the other, and the other in this but not in that, why, the effect produced upon my mind is, I freely confess, confusing, and I have to ask him every time."—N. FIDO AND PRETTY POLLY.

A Street Car Interview Which Resulted Disastrously to the Dog.

Two women, followed by a small pug dog, boarded a car at Fourth and Hill streets the other afternoon and seated themselves in the rear end of the trailer. Fido proceeded to amuse himself by running up and down on the carpeted seat, much to the annoyance of the trailman, who informed the ladies that the rules of the company prohibited dogs from occupying seats, and that he must come down. The owner cast a look of defiance at the trailman which plainly signified that not even her husband dared to suggest the curtailment of Fido's privileges, and that, of course, such an act would not be tolerated from any other man. The dog remained on the seat, and passengers getting on the car took seats on the opposite side, which was soon filled. At Oak street an old gentleman carrying an innocent-looking small cardboard box, got on, took a seat in the forward end of the car and deposited the box beside him. Several holes had been punched in the sides of the box and one in the top, evidently to give the occupant air. Fido was soon cognizant of the fact that he had company, and, approaching the box, gave a suppressed bark and placed his nose at one of the openings in the side. In his eagerness to investigate he nearly pushed the box from the seat, an act of inquisitiveness that caused the ladies to smile, while the old man, who was evidently rapt in meditation, continued to stare at the floor. The opening in the top of the box was larger than those in the sides, and Fido, allowing his curiosity to overcome his discretion, pushed his little black nose against the lid with considerable vigor. Immediately there was a yelp that startled the passengers, and the dog turned a somersault and landed on the floor in the center of the car, carrying the box with him. The old gentleman's opportu ity had come at last. Seizing the box, he gave it several energetic jerks, while one of the ladies gathered Fido by the heels and screamed. Of course they were soon separated, but, as a result of the encounter, the blood flowed copiously from the adventuresome pug's nose, while Polly, for the occupant of the box proved to be a big Mexican parrot, gave a vent to a torrent of screams and yells that completely drowned all the noises in that vicinity. The old gentleman, with a smile of intense satisfaction playing across his face, settled down in his seat, while the owner of the mutilated pug, after muttering something about its being an outrage to bring such "a monster as that parrot" into the car, rang the bell and got off, presumably to search for a veterinary surgeon to patch up the injured canine's nose.—Louisville Courier-Journal.

THE HOME BREAKFAST.

A Few Suggestions as to Its Service and Belongings.

It isn't every woman that can make a home breakfast table inviting, and we all know it. Most houses are left from six until eight in the morning to the servants, who exercise their own taste, so far as the table is concerned, not always with success.

Nowadays certain fashions prevail even to cups and saucers, and the clever housewife watches these new departures with pride; that is, if her home is her battleground. For the first meal of the day napery of good damask is considered the best, both for cloth and napkins, the delicate ferns, large round dots, and small figures being now greatly in vogue.

At the end of the table at which the mistress presides the Japanese tray, picked out in gilt and quaint designs, with a set of cups and saucers of the thin china in which these odd figures show, affords an acceptable bit of color. The chocolate and coffee pot should be of the same ware, with sugar bowl and milk jug to match. As condensed milk is universally used, the tall cup with cover and handle in which a tumbler of the fluid is kept can be utilized in its service, hiding the spoon by which it is dipped out.

Silver knives should replace the steel ones used at dinner, and at each plate should stand a salt caster of cut glass, and pepper dasher to keep it company. For every well-appointed table there should be a number of embroidered meat cloths to protect the table-cloth from the platter. For tiles blue is an excellent color scheme, or, if preferred, the crotcheted mats can be used for the vegetables or cereal dishes, while for hot bread the linen square dollies, the ends embroidered in long and short stitches in silk, are admirable. The butter may find a place on a decorated plate, with cover, and should be a square or oval print or individual balls or oblongs, firm from recent chilling. A vase or basket of flowers or ferns or a single growing green thing should be a part of the table furniture, possible as such is even in the most limited establishment.

When breakfast is not a hurried affair fruit is the first course, then the cereal. Any dish may follow, light or hearty, as the tastes of the family dictate—a well-made fish cake, an omelet, with cheese; poached eggs, with anchovy sauce, or a porterhouse or chops. It is not a menu, it is the manner of serving it that makes the meal dainty and appetizing, or the reverse.

It is with the small accessories well looked after, of which the table setting is the great principal, that food is enjoyed or merely consumed.—N. Y. World.

A SWORD OR A STRAW.

The Sense of Humor as a Life Preservative and Wrinkle Eradicator.

To have a sense of humor is to have an armor that protects one from many of the shafts of experience that would, without the antidote of humor, be poisoned enough to produce irritation at least. The man or woman who has this sense can always see the redeeming fun in any situation not shadowed by sorrow. Humor has been known, however, to thrust its unseemly presence in at a funeral, so that without self-control it would have produced effects that would at least stamp one as being heartless. Even a kitchen tragedy may become a farce if the mistress has a sense of humor, as when, the closets not being in a condition in which a careful mistress would have them, the maid replies to her rebuke: "Well, if you hadn't been snooping, you wouldn't have found out, and then you wouldn't have been bothered about finding a new girl!" Whether the sensation of the Lady Bountiful who, accosted on the street by a woman begging with her baby in her arms for pennies to buy bread, discovers an odor of beer, and tells the beggar, who responds: "Sure, no, my lady, it's the starvation of my stomach you do be smellin'," be anger or amusement, depends upon whether "my lady" has a sense of humor or not. A hostess is told by a departing guest that she reminds her of a woman whom the hostess considers quite handsome, and upon the hostess showing plainly that she appreciates the implied compliment, the guest adds, "Oh, I said only a little;" this hostess depends altogether for her sensations on the presence or absence of a sense of humor. The would-be reformer in the Working Girls' club who, in trying to influence a girl to a more healthful way of dressing, is looked at kindly and responded to with, "You wouldn't look so bad if you wore your clothes tighter," is annoyed or amused according as she has or has not a sense of humor.

If you have a sense of humor, you have fun, a great deal of fun, at unexpected situations. If you do not have it, you experience instead anger, indignation, or annoyance; or at least you admit that you are disturbed. A sense of humor is a life preservative, a nerve protector, a wrinkle eradicator.—Christian-at-Work

PARASOL ANTS.

The Efforts of the Government at Trinidad for Their Extermination.

The government of Trinidad has passed an ordinance for the extermination of "parasol ants," so far as its power extends. The pest has become unbearable. In fact, from the nature of things wherever this ant is found a growing civilization must wage war to the death with it. For the creature strips trees of their leaves, which it neatly trims the size of a threepenny bit, and carries to the nest. An army of Æcodoma cephalotes at work is one of the strangest sights in tropical America. The column may be followed for a mile, three and four inches in width, a seried mass of ants each carrying aloft upright as a flag its green disk. They will strip a tree of which they fancy the leaves in twenty-four hours. But Nature has limited their ravages in the way Darwin and Wallace teach us to expect. Many species of tree are quite protected against them by peculiarities which we can not detect. Many others are so far protected that the ants will not attack them if they have a choice. But the enterprising foreigner brings his useful fruits and plants from every quarter of the world, and establishes them in the domain of the Æcodoma. Then there is joy unmixed. With unprotected food in abundance, the ants multiply as they never could before. So the Trinidad authorities have made a law that the warden of any district may authorize a landowner who "suffers or is likely to suffer" from their ravages to enter any neighbor's ground and destroy the nests—if he can, be it understood. And any one obstructing such proceedings when duly authorized by the warden becomes liable to a fine of ten pounds or imprisonment for three months with or without hard labor.—London Standard.

Are You Going South This Winter?

If so, make your arrangements to go via the Big Four Route. Whether in pursuit of health or pleasure, no portion of the country offers so many and varied attractions at this season as the Sunny South. The Orange Groves of Florida, redolent with the perfume of sweet blossoms, wave their branches in hearty welcome to the tourist from the Snow-clad Northland and the mellow breezes of the Southern Sea woo the invalid from the Blizzards of the Frozen North. There is one line to Florida, "The Big Four Route," which on account of its excellent train service, perfect connections in Union Depots and absence of transfers, forms the "Tourist's Ideal Line to Florida." From all points north of the Ohio River the Big Four Route, in connection with the Through Car Lines from Cincinnati, will be found to offer the Best Time, Best Service and Best Equipment to all Southern Points, and if you desire to travel with comfort and ease be sure your tickets read via the Big Four Route.

KNOWLEDGE

Brings comfort and improvement and tends to personal enjoyment when rightly used. The many, who live better than others and enjoy life more, with less expenditure, by more promptly adapting the world's best products to the needs of physical being, will attest the value to health of the pure liquid laxative principles embraced in the remedy, Syrup of Figs.

Its excellence is due to its presenting in the form most acceptable and pleasant to the taste, the refreshing and truly beneficial properties of a perfect laxative; effectually cleansing the system, dispelling colds, headaches and fevers and permanently curing constipation. It has given satisfaction to millions and met with the approval of the medical profession, because it acts on the Kidneys, Liver and Bowels without weakening them and it is perfectly free from every objectionable substance.

Syrup of Figs is for sale by all druggists in 50c and $1 bottles, but it is manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co. only, whose name is printed on every package, also the name, Syrup of Figs, and being well informed, you will not accept any substitute if offered.

DELANO DIARY

—M. E. Social at the parsonage tonight. Everybody invited.

—The Delano cornet band will give a dance on Thanksgiving Eve.

--Storm doors and windows have been located for winter this week.

--The Criterion Comedy Company intend going to Waverly next week.

—John Ball is at work repairing John Klick's house on the west side.

—The Delano Criterion Comedy played to a $64 house Thesday evening.

—The Ladies' Aid Socieiy of the M. E. church meet with Mrs. J. E. Brothers this afternoon.

—Read the "Hold Your Wheat" circular in another column, and see what you think of it.

—Dr. C. B. Ames has moved into the Bruggeman building on Railroad avenue. Office in his residence.

—Several severe cases of tonsellitis, quinsy, and sore throat of various kinds are prevalent here at present.

—A much and long needed bridge is being built across the creek near Jacob Hen's place on the Watertown road.

—In the Delano school report some of the pupils have deportment 50. That looks bad. What you been doing children?

—There is some talk among the young men of Delano of organizing a club to hold dances once a week during the winter

—The services at the M. E. Church next Sunday evening will be especially interesting to young men but all are cordially invited.

--Trade is picking up, and our merchants wear their usual smiles, while trading with customers from near or from many miles.

—Joseph Van Eman says he has a very nice Cashmere shawl that the owner can have by calling for it. He picked it up the other day.

—Wm. Zabel has moved into the Kubon property on the west side where he has built him a nice little barn and fixed up for winter.

—Several deer hunting parties have returned from the northern part of the state. Some of them brought home some venison it is reported.

—The Steel Range Co., whose ad appears in another place, is doing a rushing business. Their mule teams are to be seen on almost any road every day.

—Fred Adickes, Jr., after ascertaining that he could not work his cornhusker by steam to advantage and cripling one of his hands returned the machine to its former owners.

--Competition is the life of trade. Delano finds it so in her pork market. 5½ and 6 cents was being paid this week. If you can get good cash figures at home it saves a couple of cold days drive to the city.

—Leo and Bob intend giving Sunday teas during the winter, at their restaurant, as it is very fashionable for families to take supper out on Sunday evening, and Leo and Bob are going to keep up to the times.

—Safe crackers and other burgulars are still plenty among neighboring villages. Watertown reports the mill company $100 short. And from Camden Place comes the news that while two men were returning home from the city, where they had been with a load of hay, they were relieved of $35 and a gold watch.

—George T. Williams, of the Ida County Watch, Iowa, known as the "long-haired" editor is in town this week getting up a "write-up" of Delano, for the Eagle. Mr. W. understands his business, judging from what we have seen of his work. The Annandale Post of last week started in on a continued story of that village from the pen of the "long-haired" editor. It is good reading.

—We are informed that the civil engineer, Mr. Dohl. of Minneapolis, who has been engaged establishing grades for Delano streets has completed his plat which will be submitted to the village council for action thereon at their regular meeting. He is said to be preparing a report of the survey he made of the river also. The present stage of water, he claims, would furnish a 22-horse power, for a steady thing.

--Dame Rumor has been to work this week as usual. She has even got so bad that one gentleman was hunting around to find "when and where Rev. Millspough would preach Frank Pfrang's funeral" a few days ago. People knowing Mr. Pfring as a devout Catholic and Rev. Millspough an Episcopal Rector wondered at this; when on inquiry it was learned that Frank Pfrang was not in need of a funeral, being still on the land of the living. Dame Rumor should be more careful.

—Charles Wiese, Jr., and several other young men had a lively time on Monday trying to shoot a dog that had bitten Charley's younger brother. The dog appeared to know that he was wanted and succeeded in keeping some house or other object between himself and his pursuers for a long time. After keeping hot on the trail till Tuesday evening the poor dog was captured and led to the edge of town where amid about as much excitement as a bear would occasion he was shot by Jake Mayer.

—The first case of going through the ice to record here is that of Uri Hanseman, who tried the thin skim of ice last evening on the river, with usual results. It wouldn't hold him, so he went through in about three feet of water. Willie Zabel bravely ran to his assistance and kept him from drowning until August Bernick ran out to them and brought them to shore. Uri was as wet as a drownded rat when he arrived at home where he was welcomed by his mother. Had the dam been in and the water about 4 feet deeper the chances of Uri coming out alive would have been much smaller. Keep off the ice until there has been some cold weather.

The board refused to refund the village of Buffalo $4 for sidewalk in front of the court house.

The Journal accuses French of having started heavenward. Of course in this case, the Senator's club will be useless.

C. C. Tallman was given the job of papering the court room, judges room and upper hall of court house, to be done before Dec. 4.

The State Bank of Waverly is to supercede the Bank of Waverly as a depository of county funds, the bonds of $20,000 being accepted.

Tuesday, Jan'y 3d, at 2 p. m. was set as the time to hear school petitions of Lambert Pykes, Sebastian Hoffmeester, John Morris and A. E. Nelson.

Resolved that the County Attorney be authorized to admit judgements in the sum of $38.80 in favor of C. A. French who has commenced suit against the county.

Congressman Baldwin's constituents will soon have an opportunity to satisfy themselves as to the position he will take on the tariff question. The major knows tariff is a tax.

From the dailies we learn that D. F. Jackson has been appointed postmaster at Howard Lake. Mr. J. is one of the solid Democrats of the county, always on hand to do his share for the cause.

The contracts with Hewett for building two bridges across Crow River were rescinded and a resolution passed to make a new contract for the Middleville bridge, the county to pay $1,832.67 leaving a balance of $916.33 for Middleville to pay.

It is said that farmers about Buffalo threaten to set up a farmer's store on their own hook. Unless you have an experienced head to the business better keep out. You can't expect to succeed any better than a lot of dry goods clerks would farming.

It is rather amusing to read of the dreadful fear some of our contemporaries have that "hold Hengland" will in some manner get control of the country. The latest is the wonderful effusion of Joe Wheelock of the Pioneer Press when he writes that if the United States don't take Hiawaii England will. Secretary Gresham is a true American and can be trusted to look out for American interests.

At a meeting of of the County Commissioners this week the sum of $259 68 was allowed Jas. H. Ege for clothing and board of Wright county prisoners. It looks like quite a pile of money to send over to Hennepin county for such purposes. Why can't Wright county run her own boarding house and buy her prisoners' clothing of her own business houses? Don't the commissioners believe in trading in our home markets?

Editor Tanner evidently has something on his mind, and has been torturing himself, his readers and those about whom he wishes to speak for several weeks past: watching for a favorable opportunity to give vent to his pent up feelings. Out with it brother; don't be bashful! They are not. "An honest confession is good for the soul." Make a clean breast of the whole business, and have done with it, and then you may train your artillery on the evils of the age as represented by the Protectionists, by believers in Fiat money, ownership of transportation methods and other things about which people are interested.

Among Our Exchanges.

Three deaths the past week are charged to foot ball. The sport may be a manly one, but most sensible men will prefer to spend their leisure moments in a dynamite factory to habitual indulgence in it.—Globe.

Washington, Nov. 16.—Major Baldwin scored at the interior department today, where it was given out that W. W. Wolff of Motley, J. C. Smith, of Oak Grove and Mark Ranking of Anoka would be appointed pine examiners in the places made vacant by the removal of Hall, Stacey and Veling. The three are Demncrats of the Sixth district, and their appointment was urged by Baldwin.—Pioneer Press.

A large force of men and teams are at work preparing the grade for the tracks leading into the match factory site. The work will be pushed forward as fast as possible so that the track can be laid and the material for the building got on the ground this fall. And should the weather be favorable the foundation will be built so that work can be commenced on the building early in the spring.—Buffalo Journal.

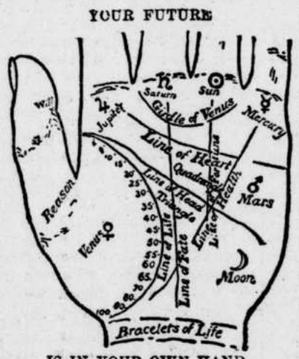
YOUR FUTURE



IS IN YOUR OWN HAND.

Palmistry assumes to tell what the lines in your hand indicate. It will amuse you, if nothing more. The above diagram almost explains itself. The length of the LINE OF LIFE indicates probable age to which you will live. Each BRACELET gives you thirty years. Well marked LINE OF HEAD denotes brain power; clear LINE OF FORTUNE, fame or riches. Both combined mean success in life; but you must keep up with modern ideas to win it. You will find plenty of these in Demorest's Family Magazine, so attractively presented that every member of the family is entertained. It is a dozen magazines in one. A CLEAR LINE OF HEART bespeaks tenderness; a straight LINE OF FATE, peaceful life; the reverse if crooked. A well-defined LINE OF HEALTH spares you doctors' bills; so will the health hints in Demorest's. No other magazine publishes so many stories to interest the home circle. You will be subject to extremes of high spirits or despondency if you have the GIRDLE OF VENUS well marked; keep up your spirits by having Demorest's Magazine to read. By subscribing to it for 1894 you will receive a gallery of exquisite works of art of great value, besides the superb premium picture, 17x22 inches, "I'm a Daisy!" which is almost a real baby, and equal to the original oil painting which cost $3 00; and you will have a magazine that cannot be equaled by any in the world for its beautiful illustrations and subject matter, that will keep you posted on all the topics of the day, and all the fads, and different items of interest about the household; besides furnishing interesting reading matter, both grave and gay, for the whole family; and while Demorest's is not a fashion magazine, its fashion pages are perfect, and you get with it, free of cost, all the patterns you wish to use during the year, and in any size you choose. Send in your subscription at once, only $2 00, and you will really get over $25 00 in value. Address the publisher, W. Jennings Demorest, 15 East 14th St., New York. If you are unacquainted with the Magazine, send for a specimen copy. A large QUADRANGLE means honesty; a large TRIANGLE, generosity; long FIRST DIVISION OF THUMB, strong will; LONG SECOND DIVISION, reasoning faculty. The MOUNT OF JUPITER betokens ambition; that of SATURN, prudence; the SUN, love of splendor; MARS, courage; MOON, imagination; VENUS, love of pleasure; and MERCURY, intelligence. Take our advice as above and you will be sure to possess the last and most valuable quality.

HOW A PUZZLE WAS SOLVED.

When you want a certain article, you want the best make of that article, don't you?

But how to determine which make is best is what puzzles you, isn't it?

And when the puzzle is solved for you, by authority which cannot be questioned, you are pleased, aren't you?

And you would like to hear of one puzzle that has been solved for the people of the whole world, wouldn't you?

Well, we will tell you about that very puzzle, and its solution.

At the Universal Exposition of 1889 at Paris, France, the best sewing machines of the world, including those of America, were in competition. They were passed upon by a jury composed of the best foreign mechanical experts, two of whom were the leading sewing machine manufacturers of France.

This jury, after exhaustive examination and tests, adjudged that the Wheeler & Wilson machines were the best of all, and awarded that company the highest prize offered, the GRAND PRIZE, giving other companies only gold, silver and bronze medals.

The French Government, as a further recognition of superiority, decorated Mr. Nathaniel Wheeler, president of the company, with the Cross of the Legion of Honor, the most prized honor of France.

That is how the puzzle of the best sewing machine in the world was fully solved by the most competent authority in the world in favor of the No. 9 and No. 12 Wheeler & Wilson machines.

The No. 9, for family use, and the No. 12, for manufacturing uses, are the best in the world to-day.

And now, when you want a sewing machine, if you do not get the best, it will be your own fault.

Ask your sewing machine dealer for the No. 9 Wheeler & Wilson machine, and if he does not keep them, write to us for descriptive catalogue, prices and terms.

THE WAY TO BE HAPPY.

There was a good shepherd who lived under ground,
And the way to be happy, 't was said he had found;
As I wished to learn it, I went to his cell,
And when I came there, the good shepherd said: "Well,
Young man, by your looks, you wish something, I see:
So tell me the business that brings you to me?"

The way to be happy, 'tis said you well know,
As I wish to learn it, can you it to me show?
Now I beg and entreat, if you have such a plan,
That you'll write it me down as plain as you can:"

Upon which the old shepherd went quick to his pen,
And brought me this note when he came back again.

"'Tis being, and doing, and having, that make
All the pleasures and pains, of which beings partake;
To be what God pleases—to do a man's best,
And to have a good heart—IS THE WAY TO BE BLEST."

Thanksgiving Day.

Next Thursday, Nov. 30, has been set apart by President Cleveland as Thanksgiving day. For years it has been the custom to keep one day in November for the purpose of expressing our gratitude to the Giver of all good. Religious services are held in the churches. Congregations are assembled. Families are brought together and seated around the bountifully supplied table to partake of the good things of earth while they are reminded of the goodness of Him that gives them their daily bread. Upon this occasion we have much for which to be thankful. He has kept us from the terrors of war, and peace has reigned supreme over our land. Although we hear of suffering of poor people for lack of employment and other causes, our immediate neighborhood finds enough to do to keep it busy, and to provide for the necessaries of life, and many luxuries. There is work for willing hands, and food for all. We can therefore give thanks upon this occasion with a feeling that we are discharging a duty we owe to Him that protects us in our coming in and in our going out, that tempers the wind to the shorn lamb; that is mindful of us; even of the hairs of our heads. We should observe this National holiday in a thinkful and becoming spirit. Let us do so.

THE committee on tariff have agreed to place raw wool and iron on the free list. It looks as if the Democrats are going to come out all right and redeem their pledges made before the election of Grover Cleveland. Let the good work go on.

THE suggestion that the authorities at Washington should tender the United States to Queen Victoria as a part of her domain if they refused to aid in taking Queen Liliuokolani's Little Island away from her is rather far fetched. It is not a parallel case.

LOU FLOYD, of the trio who have been rolling high at the expense of the Minneppolis Bank, has arrived in the Sawdust city, where he awaits the coming of his brother and Phil Scheig from Southampton, Eng., where they were recently captured on landing. The whole business of the bank robbery may now be made public.

SOME of the progressive politicans who wish to have American citizens, and others foreign to Hiawaii run the Queen's government for her, are the most opposed to having any more foreigners come to the United States to assist in running this country; even if they do take out naturalization papers. Be consistent, men. Be consistent.

TALK about partizanship when a Democratic administration is so long suffering and exceedingly magnanimous as to allow a man to hold the position of U. S. District Attorney any longer than they are obliged to, who has said in a political speech that "There is enough in the political history of every Democrat to damn him forever."

THERE appears to be a dispute among the Justices of the Supreme Court of the United States as to whether or not the Great Lakes are to be considered, according to law, High Seas. Certainly if a crime is committed in the middle of one of the great lakes by a foreigner, or by any one else he must be amenable to punishmsnt in some manner, and some where. In compliance with laws governing coasts of the ocean it would look as if high seas might be the proper term.

A HEALTHY body is a fine thing for a college student but he should possess enough gray matter to take care of it.

POUNDS advoirdupois of bone and muscle and not texture of cerebral matter are at a premium in some of our modern colleges now-a-days.

JERRY RUSK, Ex-Governor of Wisconsin, and Ex-Secretary of Agriculture under the Hays administration, died at his home in Viroqua, Wis., on Monday, Nov. 21, age 63 years.

THE usual number of drownings from venturing on thin ice too early in the fall have alrealy been reported. When will people learn to keep off of ice that is not strong enough to hold them up?

CORNELL University foot-ball team wired the Minnesota University team that as their team was badly demoralized they could not meet them at Minneapolis on Thanksgiving day. This leaves the Minnesota University boys champions. We don't wonder that Cornell did not want to come after reading the record of the Gophers.

FOOT BALL is responsible, according to the newspapers, for more deaths considering the number engaged in the so called sport, than any other sport, game, trade or profession. When we think that but few play foot ball and we read almost daily of some poor fellow having his neck twisted, or broken out-right, his bones broken, joints sprained or otherwise crippled for life we are led to class the "sport" with that of carrying dynamite, of manufacturing powder, and like dangerous avocations. Soldiering, railroading and trades of this character, of course furnish a goodly number of deaths and injuries. But people don't follow these trades for fun, and besides there are many more engaged in them. If foot ball can't be played without all the bullies in the country trampling to death the brains of our colleges: the coming young men of the next decade, it is about time to put a stop to foot ball. Even if the Minnesota University does have the belt in her possession. Let her keep it.

SECRETARY GRESHAM has given out the Commissioner Blount report on the Hawaiian troubles and the Republican press and politicians are doing their best to make fun of it. One man says Mr. Blount wasn't careful enough to select his men for consultation; that several of the leaders of the Provisional Government did not get to tell their story, while people, promiscuously, were consulted as to reasons for the state of affairs. We supposed that the commissioner was sent over there to find out from the people how they felt about the change of government, and not to accept presents of the board, servants, teams etc. At this distance it looks as if Mr. Blount had discharged his duty in a fair and statesmanlike manner and had tried to obtain facts rather than favors, and that he had succeeded admirably, even if to the discomforts of some of his predecessors. The administration at Washington, too, knows a "condition" when it sees it, and knows what to do with it. These Republicans make a great howl about allowing any more of their brothers and sisters, old fathers and mothers and other relatives to come to America, saying we have had emigration enough, and this thing must stop, while they reach out into the Islands of the Sea and try to "annex" a country that they claim is unable to take care of itself, with a lot of what they term very ignorant natives from the Queen down. What do they want them for? Do they think they could place bayonets at their ballot boxes and carry the election straight! Better keep your fingers off of other people's property. Form toughing alliances with no government. Tend strictly to our own business.

After McGary.

Mr. McGary in your columns of November 10th seems in a very wrought up condition over the single gold standard. A great many people get in the same condition. They feel that they are about the only people in the universe who are real straight and honest, and the first thing they do is to begin to call everybody else thieves and robbers without being able to lay their fingers on a single dishonest one, but simply from general principles.

I believe there are plenty of dishonest people in the country and not a few of them hold public offices. But I believe the majority of all people want do to as near right as they can, according to their own judgment of what is right. Now we believe that Congress, on the recommendation of President Cleveland did a very wise thing to repeal the Sherman law and we further believe that the men who voted and worked for that repeal were just as honest in their opinions as I am in mine, or McGary in his.

We believe on general principles that there can be but one standard in anything with safety to the interests which it represents. So do we believe that there should be but one standard of money and all other money should be subsidiary to it for if we could have two standards, then why not three and if three why not four and so on. Why not gold and silver and nickel and copper. It can readily be seen that this would lead us into constant complications and difficulties. Now if there is a single standard with which all values are compared no one can be cheated, because there can be no up and down fluctuation as there always will be on the changes of value where we have two or more standards. Another thing McGary wants to remember is that the amount of money in the country makes no difference so that it be sufficient to carry on trade for it is not given away, we only get what we earn.

I would now like to ask Mr. McGary how a single, standard a gold standard if you will, is going to send people to Lazerous houses?

I have no doubt that the Honored Lincoln said what our friend states that he did, but he does not say that a gold standard of money was to do it nor that any form of money was, to accomplish what he predicted. The real cause for this condition of affairs is in the fostering of monopolies by our iniquitous tariff system and it is to be hoped that the good work begun by Congress will be finished by a revision and reduction of the tariff. I would like to ask Mr. McGary a few questions: First, why under a gold standard will the government be compelled to issue $200,000,000 to $300,000,000 more bonds? Second, if they do, why will the poor by this act be in the clutches of the rich? Third, what do you mean by saying, "This thing of paying out millions of money for the sake of having Government bonds is all a farce."

WASHINGTON LETTER.

(From our Regular Correspondent.)

WASHINGTON, D. C., Nov. 17, 1893.

The fool killer ought to have been in Washington this week. He might have worked twenty-four hours every day without completing his job. Although there is no cable to Hawaii and no possible way that any news could have been received from there since that which reached here by telegraph from San Francisco on Monday, and that which came to the State department from Minister Willis has not been made public, the town has been full of stories giving details of what had or had not been done there. They are all alike—mere guess work, and a majority of them are but stupid guesses. No one in Washington knows to a certainty whether the provision l government of Hawaii has retired in favor of the Queen who was, last January, by the action of Minister Stevens in ordering a force of United States marines ashore, bulldozed into abdicating in favor of said provisional government, although those who have seen the communication of Minister Stevens could doubtless make a guess that would be very near to the facts. A good many of those who went off half-cocked, as the saying goes, when Secretary Gresham's report recommending that the wrong done by Minister Stevens should be repealed by the present administration was made public are now sorry they did not do more thinking and less talking. A man cannot be a good juror who would decide upon his verdict as soon as the testimony of one witness is heard. Only one witness has been heard in this Hawaiian business yet. When all the evidence which is in the possession of the administration is all have been made public, as it all will be in due time, no democrat will have any reason to blush for the verdict of the people, but some republicans who have been prominent may blush for shame, if they have not forgotten how.

President Cleveland must feel like asking himself sometimes whether a man forfeits all the rights he is supposed to have as a citizen when he becomes President. When he does not advertise his intentions in the newspapers he is accused of surrounding himself with mystery. Because the newspapers were not informed beforehand that the family of the President was to move this week from their suburban residence to the White House that simple domestic event was heralded to the country as a sudden and mysterious change of plans on the part of the President, and a lot of fool reasons given to account for it. After seeing his family settled in the White House the President committed the heinous crime of going to New York in company with Secretard Lamont to attend to some pressing private business, without telling the newspaper men about it. As soon as they found he was gone they made the wires hot with stories about his having gone to New York for the purpose of having a dangerous surgical operation performed, etc. Now could anything have been more absurd? How probable it seems that a man having too comfortable homes in Washington where he could have the constant attention of a loving wife would prefer to go to New York for a surgeon, if he had need of one, instead of having the surgeon come to him at his home. President Cleveland is back at his desk and there is nothing the matter with him, except he believes he has the right to regulate his private affairs to suit himself; but some people think that a serious complaint.

It is considered probable that the new tariff bill will be completed in about ten days. There is a possibility, however, that it may not be made public until after Congress meets, as there is quite a strong feeling among democratic members of the House that it will save time not to mention annoyance and bickerings, to have the new bill submitted to and approved by a democratic caucus before it is reported to the House, and that if changes are to be made or asked for it should all be done in caucus. This appears to be good logic, but there are a number of prominent democrats who are opposed to causing on the bill. It strikes your correspondent that the democratic party would be the gainer if its representatives in both the House and the Senate would caucus upon every important measure that is to come before Congress. There never was a time when the necessity was greater for presenting a solid front to the enemy; there was too much guerrilla fighting at the extra session for the good of the party.

Owing to the time of the President being taken up with his message to Congress and that of the members of the cabinet with their annual reports, there will probably be very few appointments made until after Congress meets.

CORRESPONENCE

MAPLE LAKE.

The Catholic church will be completed in a short time. It is a very nice building. John Schaffer, Jr. is doing some very fine painting inside. The church will cost when done about $5000.

Our post office was robbed last Sunday nigh. The burgulars broke in the front door and took out the safe wighing 1200 pounds, took it to the railroad track about twelve rods away where they drilled a hole into it and bursted it. Postmaster Martin O'Loughlin was lucky in having but a few dollars in it at the time.

The weather has been very fine this fall allowing farmers to do lots of work.

Tuberty, how is it that the street lamps don't want to burn? Maybe they are as bull headed as the village authorities.

They say A. Westrup has shipped the most wood so far this fall.

The Catholics will hold a fair next week for the benefit of their new church. The fair will commence Monday and last until Friday.

Wallace King, the hustling machine agent of Waverly, was seen on our streets one day last week. FRANK.

INDEPENDENCE INCIDENTS.

The farmers have all their crop harvested and in store and will soon be ready for the cold blasts of winter. Can then sit under their own vine and fig tree and meditate on coming events, and surely there is before us much food for thought. The whole world and especially the United States is being excited over the condition of things, politically and financially. Some say times are improving since the passing of the repeal bill and the McKinley election in Ohio, but if you buy an all wool suit, you can't see any difference in the price now from what it was before the McKinley bill was passed.

It seems the democrats have been badly snowed under in a good many of the states, especially Ohio. Such is life in the political world.

There will be a temperance lecture in the town hall at Armstrong by Rev. G. F. Wells next Monday night at 7:30. Everybody invited.

Those itinerant chicken thieves have made this community several visits during the last few weeks but the turkeys and chickens have caught on and now they believe in high protection. One fellow says his roosts on top of his chimney.

Qute a good many people from Independence attended the funeral of Mrs. Moses Brandon, at Delano last Sunday. Mrs. Brandon was one of the early settlers of Independence, coming here in 1856.

Married, in Minneapolis, on Wednesday of last week, Mr. Quin Bradford to Miss Rena Shaw, both of Independence. Their friends wish them a prosperous and happy life together.

Some fellow writing in last week's Gazette says to the farmer "Hold your wheat." This may be good advice but can't say how logical it may be, that same thing has been tried on before but failed. I can't see why the duty of 25 cents per bushel on wheat

DELANO

And expect to be here for the next FOUR MONTHS. We sell the BEST RANGE in the World and took more premiums at the World's Fair than any other firm there when every stove firm in the land was represented. All we ask of you is to go and examine the dealers Range and then examine ours, and if you don't say we have the cheapest and best Range made, why don't deal with us. We expect the dealers to kick and the more they kick the better we like it. They do the kicking and we sell the Ranges. We have sold over one thousand Ranges in this State this year and you can write and ask anyone using our goods about their merits, and we refer you to any Bank in St. Louis as to our standing.

YOURS TRULY,

THE paid attendance at the world's fair numbered precisely 21,477,212. It will thus be seen that something like 44,326,425 persons either got in on free tickets or did not attend at all.

OF all the millions who attended the world's fair Europe sent but a paltry 22,000. America sends 100,000 tourists to Europe every year, fair or no fair. Our foreign friends are not great travelers, it seems.

THERE are few scientists who do not believe that petrified human beings are pure humbugs. One scholarly Smithsonian institution man said he could not find a single instance on record of human petrifaction.

THERE have been "good old days," but the old days were not all good. In the reign of Henry VIII., for instance, beggars were hanged for soliciting food, 300 persons suffering death for this misdemeanor in one year.

AMERICAN inventors took out 23,478 patents during the first nine months of the present year, yet the erratic and elusive collar button still reigns and fat men are compelled to invite an apopletic stroke every time they put on their shoes.

IT has been said that the world pays most to those who kill—generals and great lords; next most to those who amuse—singers and actors, while those who preach, teach and write for the papers come along somewhere near the bottom of the list.

A CALIFORNIA editor announces that he ran out of money and for three weeks cooked his meals in the sun. The coal baron has no terrors for poor humanity in the portion of California in which that editor moulds thought and uses the effulgent orb of day for a kitchen range.

THE farmers of Kansas have found a means for utilizing the sunflower, which grows wild in that state and has caused them no little trouble. It is found that the fiber makes an excellent paper for wrapping purposes, being at once stronger and more pliable than that made from straw.

ONE of the freaks of the late contest at the polls was the election of a Brooklyn bartender to the New York state senate against his will. He was nominated half in jest, and he himself considered the affair as a huge joke and electioneered for the other fellow. But the landslide overtook him, and now he is Senator George Owens instead of plain "George, old boy."

IT has been discovered that the United States has a good title to a couple of islands in the Pacific ocean adjoining the Hawaiian group. They were acquired by right of discovery about thirty years ago, but have never been taken possession of. They are excellently located for coaling stations, and the navy department will take immediate steps to utilize them as such.

MR. AND MRS. ROBERT L. READE have agreed to disagree. They have parted company on anything but amicable terms, Mrs. Reade remaining in Paris, while her husband has returned to New York. Mrs. Reade was the once notorious Josie Mansfield, and Mr. Reade, who was the son of a wealthy Minneapolis man, married her because he said she was the only person who could save him from drinking himself to death.

MEDICAL journals are calling attention to the growth of intemperance among women. There can be no doubt that the fair sex is becoming more and more addicted to liquor yearly, and their opportunities for indulgence are constantly increasing. And it is a well-known fact that a woman who once allows the passion for drink to get the best of her seldom reforms. The subject is a serious one, and deserves the most careful attention, not of medical men alone, but of society at large.

COL. EDMUND RICE, United States army, who was commandant of the Columbian guard at the world's fair, has a military record of distinction. For more than thirty-three years he has been in active service. He enlisted from Massachusetts at the beginning of the war, and was acting as captain when he was only nineteen years old, and before the war was over had risen to the rank of colonel. Col. Rice's work in organizing the three thousand raw recruits into the disciplined Columbian guards has been highly commended.

A FRENCH inventor has found out a way to beat the impetuous and deadly tornado. He would simply erect tall towers and attach to the highest points thereof great charges of some powerful explosive. The bombs must be connected by wire with an observation station, and when the tornado approaches the observer simply touches a button, an electric current touches off the bomb and the concussion breaks the tornado all up. Whether an explosion violent enough to smash a tornado would not be more disastrous than the tornado itself the inventor fails to state.

FRANCIS H. WEEKS, son of an old and honored New York family, lawyer and trustee for large estates, who was brought back from Costa Rica and charged with having embezzled more than $1,000,000 of money which had been placed in his hands by clients, has been taken to Sing Sing prison. The famous betrayer of trust was brought into court, pleaded guilty on one of the strongest indictments against him and was given the maximum penalty of the law—ten years at hard labor. If he behaves himself during confinement he will be released at the end of six years and six months.

THE last spark of the Centennial exhibition at Philadelphia flickered out recently when the Centennial board of finance met and dissolved the organization after seventeen years of existence. The Philadelphia Ledger says: "They could not wind up affairs and disband the corporation because they had a small fund remaining that could not be economically divided. Year after year they met on the anniversaries of the opening and closing of the exhibition in social dinner parties, until at length congress passed an act under which the corporation could dispose of its remaining assets and be dissolved."

WHAT BLOUNT SAYS.

Some Extracts from the Hawaiian Commissioner's Report.

Queen Liliuokalani, He Declares, Would Not Have Been Deposed Only for the Interference of Mr. Stevens, the American Minister.

SYNOPSIS OF THE DOCUMENT.

NEW YORK, Nov. 22.—The Herald prints under a Washington date what purports to be a large portion of the report of Commissioner Blount. It sums up as follows:

"Commissioner Blount's report will show that Minister Stevens landed the troops from the Boston long before there was any valid excuse for their presence on Hawaiian soil; that he declined to remove them when requested to do so by the government and informed that the authorities were willing and fully able to preserve order and to protect American interests; that these troops were stationed across the street from the government building, in which Minister Stevens knew the revolutionists were about to read their proclamation and that the revolutionist committee relied upon the American troops to protect them in this act of rebellion; that Mr. Stevens recognized the provisional government according to a preconceived programme before that government had obtained possession of the departments and military power at Honolulu, and that the military power was surrendered, as the queen surrendered, only through awe of the superior force of the United States."

WASHINGTON, Nov. 21.—Secretary Gresham decided Monday afternoon to make public all the correspondence and the report of James H. Blount, the special commissioner sent to Hawaii by President Cleveland to investigate the revolution which dethroned Queen Liliuokalani and the establishment of the provisional government. The report in substance does not add much information to that contained in the extract published in Monday's dispatch. He says:

"Before any demand for surrender had even been made on the queen or on the commander or any officer of any of her military forces at any of the points where her troops were located the American minister had recognized the provisional government and was ready to give it the support of the United States troops."

He shows the position which the queen occupied, and describes the race and citizenship of the men concerned in the revolution. The various commissioners of the provisional government and Minister Stevens are quoted and commented upon.

Mr. Blount shows collusion on the part of the United States minister and the revolutionists. He goes into the details of the matter and points out by time and place the haste with which Mr. Stevens acted, and by quoting from Stevens' report and the papers on file at the legation declares that the minister misrepresented the revolution to the United States government. He points the lack of harmony in the statements and criticizes Stevens, saying:

"Mr. Stevens consulted freely with the leaders of the revolutionary movement from the evening of June 14. These disclosed to him all their plans. They feared arrest and punishment. He promised them protection. They needed the troops on shore to overawe the queen's supporters and government. This he agreed to and did furnish. They had few arms and no trained soldiers. They did not mean to fight. It was arranged between them and the American minister that the proclamation dethroning the queen and organizing a provisional government should be read from the government building and should follow it with a speedy recognition. All this was to be done with American troops provided with small arms and artillery across a narrow street within a stone's throw. This was done.

"The leaders of the revolutionary movement would not have undertaken it but for Mr. Stevens' promise to protect them against any danger from the government. But for this their mass meeting would not have been held. But for this no request to land troops would have been made. Had the troops not been landed no measures for the organization of a new government would have been taken. The American minister and the revolutionary leaders had determined on annexation to the United States and had agreed on the part each was to act to the very end."

Mr. Blount says that the natives feel that a great wrong has been done them and their queen, when the queen resigned under protest, and did not believe that the action of Stevens would be indorsed. He adds:

"Indeed, who would have supposed that the circumstances surrounding her could have been foreseen and sanctioned deliberately by the president of the United States? Her uniform conduct and the prevailing sentiment among the natives point to her belief, as well as theirs, that the spirit of justice on the part of the president would restore her crown."

That is the only thing in the nature of a recommendation made in the long report.

Commissioner Blount in his report gives the following account of the causes leading up to the deposition of Queen Liliuokalani:

"In the legislatures of 1890 and 1892 many petitions were filed asking for a new constitution. Many were presented to the king and queen. The discontent with the constitution of 1887 and the eagerness to escape from it controlled the elections against the party which had established it. Divisions on the mode of changing the constitution, whether by legislative action or by constitutional convention and the necessity of a two-thirds vote of the legislature to effect amendments, prevented relief by either method. Such was the situation at the prorogation of the legislature of 1892. This was followed by the usual ceremonies at the palace on the day of prorogation—the presence of the cabinet, supreme court judges, diplomatic corps and troops. The queen informed her cabinet of her purpose to proclaim a new constitution and requested them to sign it."

Mr. Blount tells how the cabinet refused to sign the constitution and the consequent displeasure of the queen. January 16 a proclamation was issued by the queen and her cabinet saying that what she proposed to do the Saturday previous was compelled by stress of her native subjects. This was sent to Minister Stevens. There was no response. January 17 she sent another letter, telling him that the present constitution would be maintained. On the back of this was written the word "Declined," also the time received noted. Mr. Blount says the cabinet could not be removed for two years, and, it being against a new constitution, there was no possibility of it being proclaimed.

His description of the revolution is as follows:

"Nearly all of the arms on the island of Oahu, in which Honolulu is situated, were in the possession of the queen's government. A military force organized and drilled occupied the station house, the barracks and the palace—the only points of strategic significance in the event of a conflict. The great body of the people moved on their usual course. Women and children passed to and fro through the streets, seemingly unconcerned of any impending danger, and yet there were secret conferences held by a small body of men, some of whom were Germans, some Americans and some native-born subjects of foreign origin. On Saturday evening, the 14th of January, they took up the subject of dethroning the queen and proclaiming a new government with a view to annexation to the United States.

"The first and most momentous question with them was to devise some plan to have the United States troops landed. Mr. Thurston, who appears to have been the leading spirit, on Sunday sought two members of the queen's cabinet and urged them to head a movement against the queen, and to ask Mr. Stevens to land the troops, assuring them that in such an event Mr. Stevens would do so. Failing to enlist any of the queen's cabinet in the cause, it was necessary to devise some other mode to accomplish this purpose. A committee of safety consisting of thirteen members had been formed from a little body of men assembled in W. O. Smith's office. A deputation of these, informing Mr. Stevens of their plans, arranged with him to land the troops if they would ask it, for the purpose of protecting life and property. It was agreed between him and them that in the event they should occupy the government building and proclaim a new government he would recognize it.

"The two leading members of the committee, Messrs. Thurston and Smith, growing uneasy as to the safety of their persons, went to him to know if he would protect them in the event of their arrest by the authorities, to which he gave his assent. At the mass-meeting called by the committee of safety on the 16th of January there was no communication to the crown of any purpose to dethrone the queen or to change the form of government, but only to authorize the committee to take steps to prevent a consummation of the queen's purpose and to have guarantees of public safety. The committee of public safety had kept their purpose from the public view at this mass-meeting and at their small gatherings for fear of proceedings against them by the government of the queen. After the mass-meeting had closed a call on the American minister for troops was made and signed indiscriminately by Germans, by Americans and by Hawaiian subjects of foreign extraction."

The commissioner says the response to that call does not appear on the files of the legation. That very night the committee on public safety assembled in a house next to Minister Stevens' residence. J. H. Soper, an American, was elected to command the military forces. It was on Monday evening, January 16, at 5 o'clock that United States troops were landed. Not much time elapsed before it was given out by members of the committee of safety that they were designed to support them. At the palace, with the cabinet, among the leaders of the queen's military forces and the great body of the people who were loyal to the queen the apprehension came that it was a movement hostile to the existing government. Protests were filed by the minister of foreign affairs and by the governor of the islands against the landing of troops.

Messrs. Parker and Peterson testify that on Tuesday at 1 o'clock they called on Mr. Stevens and by him were informed that in the event the queen's forces assailed the insurrectionary forces he would intervene. At 2:30 the same day the members of the provisional government proceeded to the government building in squads and read their proclamation. They had separated in their march to the government building for fear of observation and arrest.

Mr. Blount describes the location of the troops, showing that the American troops controlled the position of the queen's troops, and continues:

"They were doubtless so located to suggest to the queen and her counsellors that they were in cooperation with the insurrectionary movement and would, when the emergency arose, manifest it by active support. It did doubtless suggest to the men who read the proclamation that they were having the support of the American minister and naval commander and were safe from personal harm."

CAUGHT IN THE ACT.

Canadian Dynamiters Try to Destroy a Monument at Montreal.

MONTREAL, Can., Nov. 22. — Henri Mercier, aged 20, an officer of the Sixty-fifth Canadian rifles, son of ex-Premier Mercier; Paul de Martigny, aged 19, son of a prominent physician; Oscar Pelland, 18, brother of L. O. Pelland, a prominent barrister, and Gaston Hughes, son of Lieut. Col. Hughes, chief of police, were arrested at an early hour Monday morning. They were caught red-handed in the act of attempting to blow up the Nelson monument on Jacques square, where, since 1808, it has stood to commemorate the victory of England's great admiral over the combined fleets of France and Spain in the memorable battle of Trafalgar.

While the police of Montreal congratulate themselves on the timely discovery of the plot the consummation of which possibly meant the loss of many lives, the affair has caused a tremendous sensation. For some weeks the French press has been agitating the removal of the monument from the famous French square, and incidentally have bitterly attacked the private life and personal character of Nelson, claiming him to have been a moral leper. This no doubt led to the conception of the plot.

That the destruction of the monument had been carefully thought out was evident by the fact that a hole had been bored in the base to admit the dynamite cartridge. When the police seized him young Mercier was just placing the cartridge, and attached to it was a fuse 20 feet long. The city hall, the courthouse, the Jacques Cartier hotel and the Riendieu hotel surround Jacques Cartier square, and the cartridge was large enough to have blown the entire block to atoms. The cartridge was 11 inches long and contained a pound and a half of dynamite

STARTING UP.

Activity in the Iron Mills Follows Settlement of the Wage Question.

PITTSBURGH, Pa., Nov. 22.—As a result of the settlement of the scale question on a basis of $4.75 for puddling and the finishers' scale on the same lines laid down in the Finishers' union scale a portion of the Youngstown mills resumed work Monday after an idleness of twenty-three weeks, the longest continuous shutdown in the history of the iron business in the Mahoning valley. At the Youngstown mill of the Union Iron & Steel company the finishing mills were started, the employes expressing satisfaction at resuming work. At Andrews Bros. & Co.'s the eight and ten inch mills and the bar mills were started and the puddle mills will go on to-day. The Brown-Bonnell Iron company expects to be ready to light up to-night, and the Mahoning Valley Iron company will commence at once.

Crimes of Bank Officials.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 22.—In his annual report Mr. Drummond, chief of the secret service, states that section 5209 of the revised statutes, which relates to the unlawful acts of bank officials, is so worded that crimes not specifically characterized by it cannot be reached by law. Mr. Drummond recommends that the period fixed by the statue of limitations in cases of crime committed by bank officials be extended from three to five years. He says the Columbian half-dollar was counterfeited to a very great extent.

Acquitted.

BOSTON, Nov. 22.—After an exciting session of the hearing of the charge of murder preferred against Stephen Toole for causing the death of his mother and sister by putting poison in a bottle of porter, Judge Fallon ordered the discharge of the prisoner. The government's case was weak from the start, and the best efforts of counsel could not strengthen it.

ENGLAND SNOWBOUND.

A Railway Train Stuck in a Twenty-Foot Drift—Deaths in the Storm.

LONDON, Nov. 22.—The storm has caused great havoc inland and is continuing its work of destruction. The Saffron & Walden branch of the Great Eastern railway is blocked with snow, and snow has also stopped all traffic on the Great Northern railway between Ashwell and Harston. Near Ashwell a train is imbedded in a 20-foot drift of snow, and a gang of 100 men with a snow-plow have been at work trying to get the way clear.

The 3:45 express train from London for Cambridge was snowed in Sunday morning near Royerston. One hundred men worked all day long in digging out the train. Snowplows had gone out in advance of the train and they, too, were imbedded in the drifts. Toward night the track was sufficiently clear for the train to proceed. All went well until Harston was reached, where the train stuck again. The passengers then abandoned it. Mrs. Eyre, a local carrier of Smalley, was found dead in the snow yesterday on the road to Derby, to which place she had started to walk Saturday.

The gale in the English channel was renewed with fury Monday. All the boats running between Calais and Dover are storm-bound at these two ports and vessels arriving at Dover report having experienced the most fearful weather in the channel and in the North sea. Disasters and fatalities are reported on all sides and distressed vessels are to be seen off every part of the coast. The lifeboats have been working gallantly for nearly three days and have succeeded in saving a large number of lives.

It is feared that the loss of life will be greater than in any storm of recent years. A spar bearing the name Moray has come ashore at Sand End, Banffshire. This is taken to confirm the report that the steamer Moray was lost off that place during the gale of Friday night. There is now scarcely a doubt that her entire crew of fifteen persons were drowned. The Electro has foundered in the North sea near Heligoland. Her passengers and crew were saved. Eight fishing smacks from Hastings are missing and it is feared that they were not able to ride out the storm. Many smacks are missing from Yarmouth. The ship Samuel Landann has foundered in Lynn channel. Five of her crew were drowned.

The Glasgow steamer River Garry has been wrecked at Dunbar, and her crew, consisting of five officers and about sixteen seamen, perished.

The gale continues at Yarmouth. The herring boats which have arrived there were in a greatly damaged condition, the value of their gear smashed being at least $100,000. Many fishermen have been drowned.

Wreckage and timber from a vessel that stranded at Hartlepool have washed ashore. Nothing has been seen of the crew. A small steamer went ashore near Cullen, Scotland, twelve of the crew drowning.

The ship Cambrian has been wrecked at Nairn, Scotland. Three bodies have already been washed ashore from the wreck, and it is supposed that all of the crew were lost. The gale prevails chiefly upon the eastern and southern coasts.

Great damage was done at Lubeck, Germany, by Sunday's storm. The rivers were very high and the district surrounding the harbor was inundated until nightfall. The shipping in the narbor and near the shore suffered heavily. Much damage was also done in the villages in the vicinity. A dispatch from Lubeck says that the gale is reviving. The ship Surprise from Blarritz, France, was wrecked at Lubeck and five of her crew were drowned.

OSTEND, Belgium, Nov. 22.—The coast of Belgium is being swept by a gale almost phenomenal in its intensity. Many fishing-boats have been lost and their crews drowned.

AMSTERDAM, Nov. 22.—A very heavy gale is prevailing here and elsewhere in Holland. Dispatches received from the coast towns report heavy loss of life through the foundering of fishing smacks.

GUATEMALA REFORMS.

Proclamation Relieving the Laboring Classes from Slavery.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 22. — President Barrios, of Guatemala, has published a decree which is, in fact, a proclamation of emancipation of the laboring classes from slavery. It has been the custom of the government, through its military agents, to take forcible possession of the persons of the lower classes at any and all times, sending them to work where they pleased. It often happened that the voluntary laborers of a small planter would be taken away and sent to a more powerful rival. Henry C. Stuart, consul general at Guatemala, reports that the president's decree is to go into effect March 15, 1894.

EARTHQUAKE IN PERSIA.

Two-Thirds of the Town of Kuchan Destroyed and Many Lives Lost.

LONDON, Nov. 22.—A special dispatch to the Times from Meshed, Persia, says that a severe earthquake occurred Friday evening at Kuchan, an important town in the northern part of the province of Khorassan. The town is situated at the eastern extremity of the Ala Dagh mountains. It is thought that the loss of life was large. Two-thirds of the town was dostroyed.

BLAND WILL TRY AGAIN.

To Renew the Silver Fight by Seeking to Revive the Law of 1837.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 22. — Chairman Bland, of the committee on coinage, weights and measures, is preparing a bill, which he will introduce at the opening of the next session, in effect reenacting the law of January 18, 1837. This law provided for the silver dollars of 412½ grains and declared that "the dollars, half-dollars, quarter-dollars, dimes and half-dimes shall be legal tenders according to their nominal value for any sums whatever."

Railroad Shops Burned.

CHICAGO, Nov. 22.—The Chicago & Grand Trunk railroad's repair shops and big storehouse at Fiftieth street and Kedzie avenue were entirely destroyed by fire Monday night. The loss is estimated at $100,000, and 200 men are, temporarily at least, thrown out of employment.

Work Resumed at Joliet.

JOLIET, Ill., Nov. 22.—The Illinois Steel company began work again with a force of 900 men, and will increase their force as the times warrant. The plant has been closed down eleven months.

Nervous Headaches

There are no people more miserable than those who suffer from this trouble, and there are none more happy than those who have been cured by Hood's Sarsaparilla. Read below:

"I personally recommend Hood's Sarsaparilla to my friends because it has been of great benefit to me. I have been suffering with dyspepsia and nervous headaches for several years. After using other preparations without success, I concluded to try Hood's and am pleased to say I have been benefited more by Hood's Sarsaparilla than by all other medicines combined. In fact, it has cured me. I have also used it as a blood purifier with marked success, and I

The Greatest Medical Discovery of the Age.

KENNEDY'S MEDICAL DISCOVERY.

DONALD KENNEDY, OF ROXBURY, MASS.,

Has discovered in one of our common pasture weeds a remedy that cures every kind of Humor, from the worst Scrofula down to a common Pimple.

He has tried it in over eleven hundred cases, and never failed except in two cases (both thunder humor). He has now in his possession over two hundred certificates of its value, all within twenty miles of Boston.

A benefit is always experienced from the first bottle, and a perfect cure is warranted when the right quantity is taken.

When the lungs are affected it causes shooting pains, like needles passing through them; the same with the Liver or Bowels. This is caused by the ducts being stopped, and always disappears in a week after taking it.

If the stomach is foul or bilious it will cause squeamish feelings at first.

No change of diet ever necessary. Eat the best you can get, and enough of it. Dose, one tablespoonful in water at bedtime. Read the Label. Send for Book.

THANKSGIVING DAY.

'TS been a year today sence last I kneeled 'nd thanked the Lord
For all the wondrous blessin's 'nd the joys these days afford,
'Nd here I am agin this year, prepared to do my part
At renderin' of thanks devout, most humbly from the heart,
For all the good things I have got from this here sinful life,
Although I vow I've seed of late a mighty lot of strife.

My crops went back on me this year: my Jersey cow, she's dead:
'Nd I for sixteen mortal weeks lay groanin' on my bed
With rheumatiz; 'nd cracky! Gee! It wasn't any fun,
I tell ye. Then my little mare—the speedy sorrel one
I sot so much store on—one day she shied 'nd run away,
'Nd lamed herself for life, 'nd smashed to smithereens the shay.

'Nd then my darter Susan, she eloped the fourth o' June
With that young Silas Tompkins. He's a worthless sort o' 'coon.
He never earned an honest cent, 'nd, far as I can see,
Ain't never likely to begin. The couple lives with me.
'Nd wife's gone kind o' flighty, too. It was indeed a sin
For me to sell for rags the sock she 'kep' her savin's in

'Nd yet, you know, I'm thankful, spite of all my beastly luck,
Because I don't get flabbergasted ev'ry time I'm struck.
I know there's lean 'nd fat for all, 'nd I've just had my lean,
'Nd now a juicy slice of fat 'll come my way, I ween:
'Nd even if it doesn't come, you'll hear my thankful roar
Because this dog-goned year just past 's behind me—not before.

COME, BLESS THE LORD.

Come bless the Lord Who is forever blessing,
Whose streams of love and mercy ceaseless flow,
Come, praise His name, with joyful hearts confessing
The debt of gratitude to Him we owe.

At His command, of His good-will and pleasure,
Because His constant care is over all,
The wide earth yields the husbandman its treasure,
And plenty reigns in storehouse and in stall.

Well hath His love for all our wants provided,
Each day has proved a messenger of good;
Through fields of plenty He our way hath guided,
His hand hath found us shelter, raiment, food.

God's love was still our lot e'en when in blindness
We saw not how the clouds that crossed our track
Mantled sweet tokens of His loving-kindness,
That shine forth brightly as our hearts look back.

A FRESH AIR THANKSGIVING PARTY.

FATHER and Mother Gray were in trouble. Here it was, only two days to Thanksgiving; the children and grandchildren had promised to come home for a regular good, old-fashioned time, and at the last moment letters and telegrams came which proved beyond a doubt that not one of them could come!

After the first outburst of grief and dismay was over, another perplexity stared them in the face. Here was the whole delightful old farmhouse ready for the expected guests; four chambers with beds aired and beautifully made up, to say nothing of the dear old trundle-bed and cradle brought down from the attic for the baby grandchildren. The plumpest, fattest of little pigs was ready to roast in the big brick oven, a turkey that never could be surpassed was ready for its oyster dressing, while there were rows upon rows of toothsome mince, pumpkin, apple and cranberry pies on the pantry shelves. There were cookies enough in the big stone jars to last those blessed grandchildren a month, on the lowest shelf, just as handy as could be for the little dears to help themselves, to say nothing of the frosted cakes and everything that could be dreamed of for the great feast. This was to be an especial occasion; the very first time it had seemed possible for them to think of such a thing since dear little Nat had gone home to Heaven. What could be done with all these vast preparations!

As the dear old people sat before the bright open fire talking the matter over, accepting the great disappointment, as people learn to who have had plenty of them all the way through life, the cat, which had been frolicking about in a most unbecoming way for one of her years, gave a spring at little Nat's crutches, which stood in the corner, and they tumbled down with a great clatter. Instantly a bright flash swept over Father Gray's ruddy face.

"O wife! I believe Nat has sent us a message from Heaven! You know about the Bible feast, bringing them in from the highways and hedges. The pig, and turkey, and pies and puddings have got to be eaten. Suppose we have a fresh air Thanksgiving party, for a dozen poor afflicted fellows like our Nat, not too sick to eat, mind you, but halt and lame, and blind and miserable."

"You blessed old dear!" exclaimed Mother Gray, actually getting up and going over to her spouse and giving him an affectionate hug and several kisses. "Nothing could be better than that. Perhaps it's a providence after all that none of our children could come, so we could do this beautiful thing for some of the Lord's afflicted ones."

The clock struck ten—eleven—before they got through with all their talk and plans for the jolly good time they would give the poor unfortunates for Nat's sake.

Father Gray wouldn't trust a letter, but went to the city himself the next day and had a talk with the good missionary, who knew just where to find the guests he wanted and promised they should be there the night before, by the six o'clock train.

"Now, remember, I don't care how poor and ragged they are, but they must be the ones that never have good times, afflicted ones, you know, only I hope they can all eat well."

The next day was a busy one, but at six o'clock Father Gray was at the station, a mile away, with a long "barge," on runners, borrowed for the occasion. The train was on time, and his old heart gave a great bound, and something choked him, for the very first one to appear was a pale, slender little fellow on crutches. But there was an eager crowd behind him, and Father Gray helped them out one after another, with hearty greetings, and such a jolly twinkle in his eye that after the first anxious look at him every boy felt sure it was all right, though as yet a most unaccountable fairy-tale sort of business. It did not take many minutes to get them snugly fixed for the ride, though there was not a sound one among them.

When the prancing horses dashed off, and the bells jingled, it was too much for them, and a general burst of delight escaped them. A short, blissful ride brought them to the open door of the farmhouse, and there stood the dear little house-mother, smiling, and crying, and kissing every little lad the moment he reached the ground. After they got fairly into the house so she could see them, there was danger of a serious flood of tears, for, indeed, it was a pitiful sight. There were poor little feet twisted out of all shape, and crooked spines, and painful deformities of which the dear soul had never dreamed. But the pale faces were bright and cheerful, their clothes clean, though patched and mended oddly enough, as if they had done the work themselves, mostly.

Soon they were seated about the long table. A reverent blessing was invoked, and then—what a sight for hungry boys! Before each was a generous bowl of rich, creamy milk; great plates of white bread and brown bread, heaped dishes of delicious baked sweet apples and cookies. It was a supper the like of which they had never seen, simple, abundant, wholesome.

While they ate Father Gray told them about the little pigs, and the new calf, and all the other creatures of the great barnyard, which they should see the next morning. And oh, the delights of that hour after supper, around the great open fire, with stories and games, and curious toys, and picture books; for all of Nat's precious treasures were brought out that night for the first time since they had been laid away, with heart-aches and tears, so long ago. And Mrs. Gray told them about her dear Nat, how sweet and patient he was through all his sufferings; how he loved Jesus and was glad to go to Him at the last. After a short Psalm and a tender little prayer, the boys were put to bed. Such beds! Clean, soft, with warm blankets that Mrs. Gray tucked in snugly when she went the rounds to see that all were comfortable for the night. With a motherly kiss, and "God bless you, dear," for each, they were left to blissful dreams.

By daylight the next morning they were up, and out to see the cows milked, and to explore the wonders of the barnyard, and the great barns, and came in to breakfast with glowing cheeks, and high spirits, and such appetites! and such a breakfast to match! Potatoes bursting their jackets open in mealy whiteness, heaped up platters of sausage, puffy biscuits, great twisted doughnuts, with pitchers of new milk, or hot coffee if they wished it—can you imagine the comfort that pervaded every little half-starved stomach, when well filled with such a breakfast as that?

Then came family worship, and as it was Thanksgiving day, and their guests not dressed for appearance in church, they had a little service of their own in which Father Gray reckoned up quite a long list of mercies for even the most afflicted ones to be thankful for, and then poured out of a full heart a wonderful prayer of praise and thanksgiving to God in such simple language that every one could feel and understand it. Soon after, the jingle of merry sleighbells was heard, and a shout went up when they saw the prancing horses and the long "barge" at the door.

"Come on, boys! Mother wants to get rid of us all for awhile; so tumble in and we'll have a ride." They did "tumble in," and, well wrapped in fur robes and blankets, away they flew over the icy road. As soon as they were well out in the woods, he let them whoop and hurrah, and shout and sing to their hearts' content. Just at the right moment he brought them back, and after being washed and brushed, warmed and made ready for the great event of the day, they were solemnly ushered into the dining-room. For a moment they stood dazed at the sight; for the feast that was so daintily spread would have gladdened the heart of an epicure. The prettiest china, the finest napery, the choicest and best of every table adornment, had been brought on to grace this feast, as it spread for the dear Lord Himself; for were not these guests His little ones? Of Himself he would say: "Inasmuch as ye do it unto these, my poor unfortunate ones, ye do it unto me!"

A murmur of surprise and delight filled the room. Surely this was a fairy land and a fairy feast. But when through glitter of sparkling glass, and polished silver, and dainty device of flowers and fruit, they caught sight of the roasted pig with the red apple in his mouth, the great turkey, the huge chicken pie, and all the abundant accompaniments, smiles changed into a cheer that no one tried to suppress.

How they did eat; and how Father and Mother Gray and round-faced Gretchen did heap their plates, over and over again.

Evidently the old saying that "boys are hollow down to their heels" was not far from truth.

Another blissful evening around that glowing fire. Another night in those downy beds, undisturbed by nightmares or dyspeptic pains—a happy surprise to Mother Gray, who, expecting the worst, hovered about them like a guardian angel until midnight. Another breakfast more wonderful than the first, consisting of savory remnants of that never-to-be-forgotten Thanksgiving dinner, and then the parting hour. The impatient horses had to wait until every child had been tenderly kissed and received a generous lunch basket—a treat to carry to their cheerless homes, and then a great silence fell on the dear old home. But the memory of that blessed time brightened the lives of those poor unfortunates and made them believe their Father in Heaven did care for them after all.

It was not long before Father Gray went to the city again and brought back the pale, delicate lad who was so like their own lost one and adopted him for their own. So Nat's corner by the fireside is filled by a happy boy who returns the tender care bestowed upon him with all the love of a grateful heart. A great doctor has seen him and says perhaps he may be made strong and well again.

Father Gray keeps his eye on all the other boys, and into their shadowed lives has come hope for the future that looked so desolate awhile ago. And all this joy, all this blessedness, all this good that is going to go on forever, came from this wonderful "Fresh Air Thanksgiving party."—Mrs. A. W. Curtis, in Chicago Advance.

ITS BEGINNINGS.

The First Thanksgiving Days That Were Observed on This Side the Water.

The first thanksgiving service held in North America was observed by religious ceremonies conducted by an English minister by the name of Wolfall in the year 1578 on the shores of Newfoundland. The reverend gentleman accompanied the expedition under Frobisher, to whom belongs the honor of bringing the first English colony to settle on these shores. This was perhaps the first Christian sermon preached and the first celebration of the Holy Communion in North America.

The earliest record of any observance of a similar service within the present territory of the United States was held by the Popham colony, who settled at Sagadahoc, on the coast of Maine, in August, 1607. This service was conducted by the Rev. Mr. Seymour, according to the directions of the Church of England for that Sunday. On the 19th day of August (O. S.), 1607, they formally took possession of the New World in the name of their sovereign, unfurled the proud flag of England and laid the foundations of a free Christian state with prayer and thanksgiving. Their charter was unrolled and read before all the people, after which a sermon was preached by Rev. Richard Seymour. This was thirteen years before the landing of the Pilgrims at Plymouth and three months after the landing of the company at Jamestown in Virginia. At the same time they held the first popular election in the territory of the United States, and the first officers elected to govern an American commonwealth were chosen.

The Pilgrim Fathers anchored in the harbor of Plymouth, Mass., Saturday, December 9 (O. S.), 1620. Monday, December 11 (O. S.), a landing was made upon what is called "Forefather's Rock." During the long dreary winter which followed, forty-six of the one hundred and one settlers died and had been buried on the bluff overlooking the place of their landing.

November 9, 1621, the ship Fortune arrived bringing an addition of thirty-five persons. The Pilgrims had gathered their crops from twenty acres of corn and from six acres of barley and peas; the cold weather had brought into the harbor an abundance of water fowl, and deer and wild turkeys were found in the forests near the settlement. About this time Gov. Bradford gave direction for the observance of a day of thanksgiving to be held December 13, 1621 (O. S.).

From that time the observance of a day of thanksgiving occurred with more or less regularity in Plymouth colony and later among the settlers at Salem and Massachusetts Bay.—L. L. Gracey D.D., in Chautauquan.

A REMARKABLE BIRD.

Its Song Is Like the Lion's Roar—It Is Omnivorous, With the Accent on the Om.

The dance of the ostrich is one of those peculiar native customs which certain fowls develop, without any apparent incentive except it may be the law of heredity. It usually occurs in the early morning, when the young, strong birds are let out of the inclosure, and is said to be entirely due to awkwardness and uncertainty. This leads them to advance and turn in a dervish-like whirl which is very quaint and fantastic as they float about assisting their motions by their outspread wings. They circle and reverse almost as a waltzer would, and when a larger number of these strange birds go through their dancing antics it is almost impossible to believe that they have not been taught the accomplishment by a dancing master. Their waltz often ends in disaster, as they break each other's legs, which is certain death, or become dizzy and fall down in a demoralized heap. The kick of the ostrich has been known to destroy life.

In the opening chapter of Rider Haggard's "Jess" there is a highly dramatic account of a fight for life with an ostrich, and it is historically correct. In fighting they are apt to break their own legs, they give such desperate blows. Indeed, it would seem as if all the vital energies of the great bird were centered in its long, ungainly legs, which are graceful only when going across their native grass-covered plains with a rapidity of motion that must be seen to be appreciated.

I am only rehearsing a few of the peculiarities of the creatures which have made it of interest ever since the days of Job "which leaveth her eggs in the earth and warmeth them in the dust." It would appear to be an evidence of cunning rather than stupidity for Mrs. Ostrich to adopt this very simple method of incubation. However, it has its disadvantages, for while she is away getting a good dinner her enemy, the white-necked crow, spies the ungarded nest. He knows he can not break one of those mammoth eggs and devises a shrewd plan to help him. Taking a stone in his beak he flies over the spot, calculates with bird sagacity the necessary distance and drops the stone. Plunk! An egg is broken, and he descends to his feast. This is said to be the same kind of a raven that fed the prophet Elijah. His wisdom seems almost of a supernatural order.

It is said that the cry of an ostrich is like the roar of a lion, and the Hottentots often run from it in fright until they see the bird.

The ostrich is a generous layer. Sixty eggs will be found in and around a single nest. One of these eggs is equal to twenty-four hen's eggs. The Hottentots and Bushmen cook an ostrich egg by putting one end in a hot fire. Through an opening in the other they stir the contents, putting in salt and pepper, making a very palatable omelet.

It is never safe to drop any article when walking near a covey of ostriches. The ostrich will eat anything, seeming apparently to have no sense of taste. A story is told of a young girl who was visiting a zoo where a large ostrich snatched her kid gloves, which were rolled into a ball, and ate them. The next day the girl returned with the family contribution of a half-dozen pairs of gloves, all of which were as readily swallowed.

While the ostrich has absolutely no brain—see Job for authority—it has vicious propensities that show some sort of wicked intelligence. Some Cape Town people had a fowl fatting in a special coop near an ostrich kraal. The bird drooped and grew thin. It was watched and seen to peer through the slats of its coop, curious to watch its neighbors, the ostriches. Every time it put its head out it received a kick from its neighbor, and would soon have died had it not been removed.

A meek-looking male ostrich stood about with his consort looking so dejected that some visitors remarked it must be henpecked.

"Oh," laughed the host, "he is henkicked," and they soon saw him receive a staggering blow from his gentle spouse which sent him with drooping feathers into a corner.

Old Lightning belonged to an ostrich farm at San Diego, and was a magnificent bird. He acquired his name from the rapidity with which he could pluck a lighted cigar or pipe from a visitor's mouth or remove his watch and chain or any other ornament he could discover. The noiseless manner in which he could steal up behind one and then nip some personal property was remarkable. He was a natural-born thief. Once he snatched all the flowers off a young lady's hat. At another time he attempted to swallow a diamond ear-ring, but as it was fast in its owner's ear he could not manage it.

Old Lightning's greatest feat was swallowing a lighted meerschaum pipe, which he snatched from a visitor's mouth. The keeper had seen him and caught him around the neck and the pipe was exhumed, the tobacco still burning.—Detroit Free Press.

WILLIAM RAMICH, of Minden, Kearney Co., Neb., writes: "I was troubled with boils for thirty years. Four years ago I was so afflicted with them that I could not walk. I bought Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets, and took one 'Pellet' after each meal. The boils soon disappeared and have had none since. I have also been troubled with sick headache. When I feel the headache coming on, I take one or two 'Pellets,' and am relieved of it."

A RAPIDLY AGING TOWN.

The Decay of the Canal Street Region in New York.

It is a fact illustrative of the high pressure way in which the city of New York is run that the Canal street region already is old. In a fashion that would make a European city dizzy, it has dashed through all the phases which mark the progress from youth to age; and already, in no more than a man's lifetime, has passed on into decay.

Eighty years ago it was suburban and obscure. Twenty years later, Hudson square having been laid out and St. John's church built, it began to be fashionable. In another twenty years—the square being then surrounded by the wide-fronted houses of which many stately wrecks remain—it was one of the most gravely respectable parts of the town; and for more than a decade it remained at this aristocratical high-water mark. Then began its slow decline—which ended in a sudden and irrevocable plunge, in the year 1869, when the Hudson river Railroad Co. crushed the region utterly, so far as its fitness to be an abiding-place of polite society was concerned, by clapping down four acres of freight station over the whole of the luckless park. Only one man of position stayed by the wreck, and even may be said to have gone down with it. This was John Eriesson, the builder of the Monitor, who continued in his house for many years on St. John's park, holding up in that frowsy and bustling region its traditional respectability, until he died there only a little while ago.

To-day, the dwellers upon St. John's park are mainly foreigners; a few Germans, but more Italians—as even a blind man, possessing a traveled and intelligent nose, would know by the presence of several distinctively Neapolitan smells. The stately houses, swarming with this unwashed humanity, are sunk in such squalor that upon them rests ever an air of melancholy devoid of hope. They are tragedies in mellowtoned and carved wood-work that once was very beautiful.

By an odd twist of destiny it is mainly to the aristocratic houses on the square that an evil fate has come. The less pretentious structures therebouts have sunk only to the level of lodging or boarding houses; and many of them, as is manifested by their superior air of self-respecting neatness, still are private dwellings.—Thomas A. Janvier, in Harper's Magazine.

When the Kidneys Are Idle,

Or nearly so, there is danger ahead. Rouse them to activity with Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, which does not, like the unmedicated stimulants of commerce, excite them. Thus may be averted Bright's disease and other maladies by which both they and life itself are imperilled. The Bitters are a standard remedy for rheumatic, neuralgic and liver trouble, liver complaint, dyspepsia, constipation and malaria.

Are You Going South This Winter?

If so, make your arrangements to go via the Big Four Route. Whether in pursuit of health or pleasure, no portion of the country offers so many and varied attractions at this season as the Sunny South. The Orange Groves of Florida, redolent with the perfume of sweet blossoms, wave their branches in hearty welcome to the tourist from the Snow-clad Northland and the mellow breezes of the Southern Sea woo the invalid from the Blizzards of the Frozen North. There is one line to Florida, "The Big Four Route," which on account of its excellent train service, perfect connections in Union Depots and absence of transfers, forms the "Tourist's Ideal Line to Florida." From all points north of the Ohio River the Big Four Route, in connection with the Through Car Lines from Cincinnati, will be found to offer the Best Time, Best Service and Best Equipment to all Southern Points, and if you desire to travel with comfort and ease be sure your tickets read via the Big Four Route.

DELANO DIARY

—Advertise in the GAZETTE.

--The quarantine on the Nieson farm was raised this week.

—Rev. J. S. Shirrel, of Minneapolis, preached at the Presbyterian church last Sabbath evening.

---Thanksgiving services will be held at the M. E. church on Thursday at 10:30 a. m. Everybody invited.

---A few hours of fine skating has been engaged in by the young people on the still places in the river, the past week.

--Mat. Plattner's sick list for several days. His place in the store has been filled by Miss Rose Appel.

—Tuesday was our first regular winter day. Snow commenced falling in the morning and soon the earth was covered with a white mantle.

—Charley Conzet has documentary proof that all he can get for baled hay in Minneapolis is $6 50. So his margin for profit is quite small on what he has handled.

—Next Thursday will be observed throughout the United States as Thanksgiving day, having been designated by the President as the day on which we should give thanks to Almighty God for his goodness to us.

---Some poor fellow left portions of his supper along Railroad Avenue on Wednesday in several people's doorways. The night was cold for such business. The subject is an unpleasant one, and the hash unrecognizable; but it was there all the same.

---On Saturday morning at about 8 o'clock the farm residence of Eli Brandon, in the Rader neighborhood, was burned to the ground. Mr. B. was in town in attendance at the death bed of his mother at the time. Several neighbors came to the assistance of the young man who was at home, and most of the contents on the first floor were saved.

---Charley, the 15-year-old son of Nick Franzen met with a frightful accident on Friday at about noon. He went with his father in the morning to Pioneer Creek for a load of hay; the weather was quite cool, so when the hay was loaded he started afoot for home leaving his father to drive in with the load. He ran across a train near the switch east of town and in some manner was thrown under the cars injuring his left hand and left foot and bruising his head. He was taken home, where his hand and foot were amputated, thus leaving the active boy of the morning in the afternoon a cripple for life.

—On Sunday evening Rev. Powell preached an interesting and instructive sermon to young men. Using as his text "Thou art weighed in the balances, and art found wanting," found in v. 27, chap. v., Daniel. He held up to the audience the wonderful advantages young men have to-day of obtaining an education. Our high schools equal the colleges and universities of fifty years ago. Our young men can at their home villages obtain an education equaling that of George Washington, of the elder John Adams or of Daniel Webster. But young men must have honesty, integrity of character, must have other qualifications than book learning. Railroads will hire men who do not frequent saloons, do not gamble, can be relied upon every day to do their work; steady capable young men. The young men are now in most of the responsible positions in business, the next thirty years will see them holding the balance of power politically. They have a great responsibility, should fit themselves for it, and not be found wanting. Next Sunday evening at 7:30 he will preach especially to the young ladies, but all are invited to be present, even if they are no longer young.

--The Juvenile Aid Society will meet on Saturday with Miss Mollie Maxfield.

--The Delano Criterion Comedy Co. will go to Waverly next Monday.

--W. F. Kohler drives a fine iron-gray double team. They don't exactly match for size but Will expects one to grow.

--Our Republican village council seems to have got rid of the surplus in the village treasury and have concluded to raise $500 by tax to help out.

---The Wrought Iron Range Company advertised in the GAZETTE last Friday for a lost grip, and it was returned to them early this week. It pays to advertise.

---Dame Rumor has not yet learned to tell the truth, always. Yesterday she circulated the report that Charley Franzen who was hurt a week ago was dead. He still lives.

---Numerous loads of poultry, of every kind, were seen wending their way to the city markets this week, preparatory to Thanksgiving, which occurs on Thursday, Nov. 30.

--The post office boxes have been newly painted and some of them renumbered. Charley Carlton was the artist, and has already received many compliments on his ability as a decorator.

---A fine lot of Hubbard squashes have found sale in Delano this fall, but the supply seems to have been exhausted so soon. They take the place of sweet potatoes to a large extent and are much relished by many.

---Delano continues to be a good place to dispose of your farm produce at good prices for cash. The competition is real. No collusion among buyers, consequently farmers get about all there is in it when they sell in Delano.

—Tiff Hitzman, of Independence, was seen carrying home a big law book yesterday. He says he is going to study the profession. Tiff would make a gritty lawyer. His suit against Tom Pogrzeba went against him; he thinks of taking an appeal. Some body always has to be beaten in a suit at law.

---The school board should provide a stove for the new recitation room at the school house and not try to warm it with the furnaces which were already doing what they were put in for. The children in the upper rooms complain of cold feet. And if the furnaces are heated too hot they will be as dangerous to life as was their predecessor in a short time.

---On Monday morning the Judge of Probate came over and appointed Doctors Catlin and Shrader as a board of examiners in lunacy, in the case of Mrs. Ruth A. Young, wife of J. D. Young. Mrs. Young has been ailing all summer and at several different times tried to commit suicide, and it was deemed best to send her away for treatment. Judge Alley after reading the report of the Board consigned her to St. Peter, for treatment. She left on Tuesday evening.

—We understand an edict has gone forth from the G. N. depot that no more loafers will be allowed about the premises; no one but ticket holders or those having business will be allowed to sit in the depot. It was about time for this. the privileges granted, heretofore, had been terribly abused; crowds of young men filling the waiting rooms, smoking, swearing and in other ways making it an unpleasant place, especially for ladies who were obliged to wait for trains.

---The sad accident happening on last Friday to Charley Franzen ought to be sufficient warning to boys and young men to keep off from moving freight trains when they have no business there. It has been the custom here as it has at other places along the line, for boys to jump onto moving trains and get a ride, or to get on at the depot and ride up the grade either way and jump off the moving train. You know for yourselves the danger. Boys keep off the trains.

Tiff Hitzman, of Independence, was up after his mail, etc., the other day. He did not take to the woods after deer this year, and says it is too late in the season to go now.

Miss Emma Brothers left on Tuesday for Coeur D'Alene City, Idaho where she expects to make her future home. The good wishes of many Delano friends accompany her.

County Cullings.

The Delano Criterion Comedy Company will play at Waverly next Monday evening.

It would be well to look out for lightning rod peddlers and other travellers besides the ordinary pedestrian, as they are reported as being abroad in the land.

One of our most faithful correspondents, J. H. McGary, of Independence, is out in a communication in the Buffalo Journal. Just whether he is joining the Repbblicans or A. Y. Eaton is coming into the Democratic fold has not yet been determined.

A recent number of the Buffalo Journal gave evidence that its editor had, at some time, given a little attention to the study of Obstetrics. Just why this fact showed itself so plainly at this time we are not prepared to say Perhaps he wants to join a new political party.

The Hutchinson Leader bears down on Fritz Moy, of Winsted, for keeping a place where a man was allowed to get drunk and fall down and strike his head on a spittoon and lie on the floor and die a "natural death" before morning, and intimates that if he don't care to be criticized he should shut up shop or keep it different. The juries found no indictments; but it was not a good way to die.

Buffalo has again been visited by fire. On Saturday morning Louis Krack's store, the Odd Fellows hall, and two saloons belonging to Matt Dedrick and Jas. Revor were burned. An incendary is supposed to have his habitation at the county seat. Where he operates so often and so successfully it looks as if the police force of Buffalo is no better than the Globe says St. Paul's is.

Reports say that diphtheria has made its appearance in Rockford township, and that a dozen or so of team loads of people were present for the purpose of attending a funeral. The state laws are very strict about quarantining infectious or contagious diseases, and the Chairman of the Supervisors in a township or the Health officer in the village should be notified wherever there is a suspicious case, and take prompt measures to keep the disease from spreading. People who do not obey the quarantine are liable to a fine.

NO END OF FUN.

The football season's come again,
Its ghastly work's begun!
They gouge each other's ears and eyes,
And break their ribs and shins and thighs,
And have no end of fun.

Our Thanks Giving Gift to Ever One of Our Readers.

"AN AMERICAN BEAUTY."

By special arrangement with the publishers, we are enabled to make every one of our readers a present of an exquisit oil panel-picture, 20 inches high, entitled, an "American Beauty," which has been admired by all who have seen it. This superb picture is from the brush of the same artist who painted the "Yard of Pansies" and "Yard of Roses." The reproduction is equal insevery respect to the original, from which it cannot be distinguished, and accompanying it are full directions for framing at home at a cost of a few cents, thus forming a beautiful ornament for the high narrow wall-spaces for which it is so difficult to obtain pictures of the proper shape. It is a suberb Thanksgiving gift. Send your name and address to the publisher, W. Jennings Demorest, 15 East 14th Street, New York, with three cents (either stamps or pennies) to pay for the packing, mailing, etc., and mention that you are a reader of the BUFFALO GAZETTE and you will receive by return mail one of these valuable works of art.

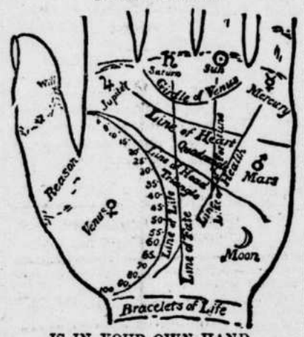
YOUR FUTURE



IS IN YOUR OWN HAND.

Palmistry assumes to tell what the lines in your hand indicate. It will amuse you, if nothing more. The above diagram almost explains itself. The length of the LINE OF LIFE indicates probable age to which you will live. Each BRACELET gives you thirty years. Well marked LINE OF HEAD denotes brain power; clear LINE OF FORTUNE, fame or riches. Both combined mean success in life; but you must keep up with modern ideas to win it. You will find plenty of these in Demorest's Family Magazine, so attractively presented that every member of the family is entertained. It is a dozen magazines in one. A CLEAR LINE OF HEART bespeaks tenderness; a straight LINE OF FATE, peaceful life; the reverse if crooked. A well-defined LINE OF HEALTH spares you doctors' bills; so will the health hints in Demorest's. No other magazine publishes so many stories to interest the home circle. You will be subject to extremes of high spirits or despondency if you have the GIRDLE OF VENUS well marked; keep up your spirits by having Demorest's Magazine to read. By subscribing to it for 1894 you will receive a gallery of exquisite works of art of great value, besides the superb premium picture, 17x22 inches, "I'm a Daisy!" which is almost a real baby, and equal to the original oil painting which cost $300; and you will have a magazine that cannot be equaled by any in the world for its beautiful illustrations and subject matter, that will keep you posted on all the topics of the day, and all the fads, and different items of interest about the household, besides furnishing interesting reading matter, both grave and gay, for the whole family; and while Demorest's is not a fashion magazine, its fashion plates are perfect, and you get with it, free of cost, all the patterns you wish to use during the year, and in any size you choose. Send in your subscription at once, only $2 00, and you will really get over $25 00 in value. Address the publisher, W. Jennings Demorest, 15 East 14th St., New York. If you are unacquainted with the Magazine, send for a specimen copy. A large QUADRANGLE means honesty; a large TRIANGLE, generosity; long FIRST DIVISION OF THUMB, strong will; LONG SECOND DIVISION, reasoning faculty. The MOUNT OF JUPITER betokens ambition; that of SATURN, prudence; the SUN, love of splendor; MARS, courage; MOON, imagination; VENUS, love of pleasure; and MERCURY, intelligence. Take our advice as above and you will be sure to possess the best and most valuable quality.

THE SONG OF THE "No. 9."

My dress is of fine polished oak,
As rich as the finest fur cloak,
And for handsome design
You just should see mine—
No. 9, No. 9.

I'm beloved by the poor and the rich,
For both I impartially stitch;
In the cabin I shine,
In the mansion I'm fine—
No. 9, No. 9.

I never get surly nor tired,
With zeal I always am fired;
To hard work I incline,
For rest I ne'er pine—
No. 9, No. 9.

I am easily purchased by all,
With instalments that monthly do fall;
And when I am thine,
Then life is benign—
No. 9, No. 9.

To the Paris Exposition I went,
Upon getting the Grand Prize intent:
I left all behind,
The Grand Prize was mine—
No. 9, No. 9.

At the Universal Exposition of 1889, at Paris, France, the best sewing machines of the world were in competition. Including those of America, were tested and passed upon by a jury composed of the best foreign mechanical experts, two of whom were the leading sewing machine manufacturers of France. This jury, after exhaustive examination and tests, adjudged that the Wheeler & Wilson machines were the highest of all, and awarded that company the highest prize offered—the GRAND PRIZE—giving other companies only gold, silver and bronze medals.

The French government, as a further recognition of superiority, decorated Mr. Nathaniel Wheeler, president of the company, with the Cross of the Legion of Honor—the most prized honor of France.

The No. 9, for family use, and the No. 12, for manufacturing uses, are the best in the world to-day.

And now, when you want a sewing machine, if you do not get the best it will be your own fault.

Ask your sewing machine dealer for the No. 9 Wheeler & Wilson machine. If he doesn't keep them, write to us for descriptive catalogue and terms. Agents wanted in all unoccupied territory. WHEELER & WILSON MFG. CO. Chicago, Ill

IT ALL WILL COME OUT RIGHT.

Whatever is a cruel wrong,
Whatever is unjust,
The honest years that speed along
Will trample in the dust.
In restless youth I railed at Fate
With all my puny might,
But now I know if I but wait
It all will come out right.

Though vice may don the judge's crown
And play the censor's part,
And fact be cowed by falsehood's frown
And nature ruled by art;
Though labor toils through blinding tears
And idle wealth is might,
I know the honest, earnest years
Will bring it out all right.

Though poor and loveless creeds may pass
For pure religion's gold,
Though ignorance may rule the mass,
While truth meets glances cold.
I know a law supreme, sublime,
Controls us with its might,
And in God's own appointed time
It all will come out right.
—Ella Wheeler Wilcox, in the Chaperone.

JOHN A. JOHNSON, one of the proprietors and able editors of the St. Peter Herald, is getting to be a much talked of man. He is President of the State Editorial Association, and now is being boomed for Congress in the 2d district, and has been mentioned for Governor. Mr. Johnson prides himself on his good Scandinavian blood, and if Knute Nelson is to run again on the Republican ticket would probably stand him an equal race so far as that qualification goes. Mr. Johnson has an army title also, but his pugulistic record is not so well before the public as is that of the present incumbent. He has worked himself up to his present position, is a rustler and would make a lively race for any position.

SUICIDES are of altogether too frefrequent occurrence in this country now-a-days. Life is held of too little consequents, by too many people. It is an awful thing to think that one has committed a murder, and that he must suffer for breaking one of God's laws. But when a person deliberately takes his own life, shortens by his own hand the number of days allotted him it is awful to think of meeting his Maker, and of rendering an account for the act which he did not even live to repent. Certainly people do not stop to count the cost; to think of the consequences or there would be fewer of such cases. The ignomy, the shame, the feeling of dread that permeates the entire family of those who commit these acts ought to have some weight in deterring them from their performance.

SENATOR WASHBURN'S Congsessional shoes will be to fill next winter and candidates are already coming to the front. It seems to be understood that either a Scandinavian or a Democrat will be the man. John Lind is spoken of as a possible candidate, being a Scandinavian, but the Norwegian and Swede difficulty in the old counties extends to this in a measure and there is apt to be a split on these lines and it will be some trouble for a man of either nationality to hold the entire Scandinavian vote, besides the Norwegians, who largely aided their countryman Kunte Nelson into his present position are naturally Democrats, and then, if, as is customary, except in few cases the present Governor wishes to succeed himself it would not do to give the leading places all to the Scandinavians or the race would be against the field combined when some Democrat would capture the prize.

THE mayor of Minneapolis, W. H. Eustis, is getting some fine roasts these times at the hands of most of the Divines, because of his failure to enforce the Sunday law concerning the closing of saloons. The mayor claimed he was enforcing the law in regard to selling to old drunkards and minors; then comes a minister and says a 13-year-old boy is acting bar-tender and selling intoxicating beverages to policemen. Other serious charges have been made against His Honor, most of which have been promptly denied. These accusations have their effect among readers of the dailies all over the state, and if untrue the mayor should take pains to see that they are refuted and that the parties who started them are punished to the full extent of the law. If they are true he would do as well to resign first as last. If the half that is said of the mayor is true he is not fit for the high office he fills. If he is innocent of all the accusations then his city must have an ignorant or a hard set of preachers, and other so-called respectable citizens. Time will decide.

THE Knights of Labor have exchanged their Powderly leader for a Sovereign, J. R., of Des Moines.

AUGUST WOLFF, so long identified with Die Wanderer, St. Paul, committed suicide on Saturday, by throwing himself under a moving engine in the Railroad yard. It is claimed he was disappointed and discouraged on account of a failure to obtain a political appointment.

It is only now and then that the Lord gets a chance to make a Christian out of a stingy man.—Scrap Book.

To let them tell it, men's failures are due to circumstances past human control; their successes to native ability.—Milwaukee Sentinel.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

(From our Regular Correspondent.)

WASHINGTON, D. C., Nov. 24, 1893.

The conservative and forbearing disposition of the administration in dealing with the various pases of the Hawaiian question has added to the good effect upon public opinion of the publication, early this week, of Commissioner Blount's report, upon which the policy of the administration was largely based. It has taken no official notice of the very unusual and injudicious action of Mr. Thourston, the minister here of the Provisional government of Hawaii, in writing and giving to the press an answer to Mr. Blount's report, containing language that would not have been tolerated from a foreign minister by any other government in the world. Had the administration upon the appearance in the newspapers of Mr. Thorston's defense sent that gentleman his passports no one would have had any right to complain; it would only have followed precedents set by every civilized government in the world, including our own—the offence for which Lord Sackville West, the then British minister, was sent his passports was trivial compared with what Mr. Thurston has done. It is not improbable that President Cleveland in ignoring the bad break of Mr. Thurston was influenced by the thought that the Hawaiian minister was perhaps only too anxious to pose as a martyr. But what ever the object on either side the fact remains that Mr. Thurston was guilty of an act that would have driven a foreign minister from any other country and that not the slightest official notice was taken of it by the administration, and this forbearance is generally recognized as altogether creditable to the administration.

As from the publication of Mr. Blount's report and Mr. Thurston's reply to it, there have been no new developments this week. No one outside of the cabinet and a few members of the Senate and House knows the exact nature of the instructions given to Minister Willis, and Congressmen, outside of a few of the most heedless, recognize the absurdity of attempting to express an intelligent opinion in the absence of that knowledge. When Congress meets everything connected with the Hawaiian matter will doubtless be made public. Then the public can and will pass judgment, and no member of the administration has and doubt of the nature to that judgment.

The democratic members of the House committee on Ways and Means are working from 10 a. m. to 11 p. m. everyday, in order to get the new tariff bill ready by next Monday, so as to give the republican members of the committee an opportunity to prepare their report by the time Congress meets. The republicans having made a miserable failure of their attempts to conjole the democratic members of the committee into retention of duties that are purely protective, have now now taken a new tack, but the result will be the same. They are now circulating reports that democratic Congressmen from whose districts petitions for this or that industry have been sent to the committee will, if that protection is not given by the new bill (and it certainly will not be, except in the few cases in which the duty imposed for revenue may incidentally give protection) vote with the republicans against the bill. After a most diligent search I have failed to find a single democrat who will acknowledge any contingency that would cause him to vote with the republicans against the bill, although there are a few democrats who would have been pleased had the petitions of their constitutents been granted, and who expect to lose their seats in Congress if they are not granted. It can be predicted with absolute certainty that fewer democrats in the House will vote against the Wilson tariff bill than there were republicans who voted against the McKinley bill.

Secrtary Carlisle is the recipent of congratulations from all sides on the able financial speech he delivered this week before the New York Chamber of Commerce, and many are of the opinion that it will have a highly beneficial effect upon the business of the country.

It is expected that President Cleveland's message to Congress will deal so fully with the financial policy of the administration. The message together with the new tariff bill will but those intentions before the public so plainly that there can be no missunderstanding and no doubt.

A Belt at Tanner.
THE NATIONALIZATION QUESTION.

EDITOR GAZETTE: In the controversy over the nationalization and other questions, the Tribune editor assumes a position analagous to that of the infidel who, while waging incessant warfare against the principles of Christianity is forced to confess that he has nothing to offer as a substitute.

In his issue of Nov. 16, we asked him to give us his ideas regarding certain points, and because of this he endeavors to make his readers believe that we are lost and desire him to set us aright. Nothing could be further from the truth. The thought that the editor of the Tribune with his "narrowing down" ideas, could formulate a platform of principles broad enough for us to stand on, was never entertained by us. He "respectfully declined" to give his ideas; then he admits that he hasn't any ideas. It must have required a super-human effort on the part of Mr. Tanner to "respectfully decline" to give his ideas when he hasn't any to give.

He practically admits the existence of certain gigantic evils, but for the life of him cannot see why anyone should seek to apply a remedy. The Roman and scores of other republics went down because there were so many citizens like Mr. Tanner. He believes that the functions of government should be cut down; that nearly if not quite all the branches of government should be placed in the hands of corporations. That is just where he and we differ. It would suit the plutocrats, undoubtedly; but the proletariat, what of them? England tried a passive policy of government for half a century but had finally to admit it a failure. So far as we can learn, not a civilized nation on earth that has tried a passive policy, has found it to be productive of good results. De Tocqueville, the great French historian, finds that the primary cause of the downfall of all nations has been the concentration of wealth. There has been in the U. S. during the last few years, a mighty rapid centralization of wealth without a parallel in the history of governments; a period dark and terrible for the common people; terrible, because contemporary with this concentration has been an enormous increase of pauperism. All this is directly traceble to vicious and notorious legislation enacted by bribed and banker legislators.

But in admitting that our National banks have purloined hundreds of millions from the pockets of the people, Mr. Tanner asks if they are not the direct creation of wise legislators. Certainly not, for the Congress that passed the national banking law contained 189 bankers out of the total membership of 379, and that in direct violation of a law prohibiting bankers from holding a seat in either House. Little wonder that such laws were enacted.

We deplored the fact that wheat should be kept down to 50 cents in the face of a shortage of at least one hundred million bushels, and millions going without their daily bread; but the Tribune thinks we are on the "wrong track" when we attempt to devise a plan for the amelioration of the farmer's lot, and says that nothing should be done. Mr. Tanner seems to think the farmer has no rights the "favored few" are bound to respect.

We believe that the abolishing of private banking institutions, the establishment of an effective, graduated income tax, and government ownership in the field of monopoly, to be the only practical solution of the great questions confronting the people today and we don't propose to attain these ends by confiscation either, as Mr. Tanner seems to think. He further says that we can't enforce the laws we now have. And why? Because corporations never scruple to disobey law when it suits their purpose, and that with impunity. The only practical way to control these redoubtable powers is to own them; for experience proves that we can as easily stop the gyrations of a cyclone with a straw as to stop the plundering of these powers by restrictive or inhibitory laws.

Those cities that have tried municipal ownership of the sources of municipal supply, have found it to be the only thorough, practical cure for corruption among city officials et. al., and not a single failure has, I believe, been reported.

Space forbids giving details on other points so we will conclude with the following: We challenge the editor of the Tribune to write one single article to show that the people can ever pay their debts (which approximate 20 billion of dollars) under present conditions.

We defy him to give the details of his plan and show how his policy will ameliorate the status of the common people, which is little better than that of serfs.

MINNEAPOLIS MENTIONINGS.

Our Honorable Mayor is having quite a tilt with the Ministers. He has some ideas in regard to city government that does not agree with the generally accepted idea of right. He seems inclined to divide up criminals into classes the upper ten of which must not be punished but must be made friends with, for what purpose the writer sayeth not. We have a gang of East side toughs the sons of well to-do parents who have been burglarizing houses for several years; some time since they were caught, brought up in municipal court, convicted and fined $75, but our worthy Mayor was not satisfied with this because it did not agree with his plans of city government; these were of the upper ten and their fines were cut down to twenty-five dollars. Some of our citizens became indignant and the boys were brought before the Grand Jury. I saw one of the officers of the work house the other day and he says it is full to overflowing, no doubt of the lower classes, some probably for stealing because they were hungry or cold; but they may expect no mercy at the hands of our Lord Mayor because they are not of the gild. Now our Mayor has a saloon policy, so he says and according to that policy he finds it necessary to divide the saloon men up into some four or more classes, the upper classes of which he thinks it necessary to be very friendly with. He says many of them are good men and good citizens and he is not going to force them to close their saloons on Sunday. I don't know the basis upon which he divides these saloons and saloon men up into classes but I suppose by the richness of their appointments, the handsome decorations, the pictures upon the walls, the diamonds that sparkle in the shirt fronts of the bartenders, etc. I say the pictures upon the walls; and what are the character of these pictures? Generally a portion of them nude women. Now what is the difference between these saloons and those who cannot afford such rich surroundings. I leave you to answer that question. Our Mayor says some of these upper class are nice gentlemen and good citizens. Nice gentlemen, let us see are they men the Mayor would invite into the house to sit in the parlor with his sister or mother or any of his lady friends, or are their place of business such that he would like to take his mother or sister with him to visit them. A man whom I consider a gentleman and a friend I am not ashamed to introduce to my wife, my mother and my sisters. Are they good citizens? To be a good citizen I think it it is necessary to obey the laws and live in subjection to the constitution and laws of our land and not only that but to aid in enforcing them if need be, but these men are openly defying the law every Sunday their saloons are open on Sunday. If the grocers of this city or any number of them should say I can make more money by keeping my store open on Sunday, for people must have something to eat, would our good Mayor call them gentlemen and good citizens, and yet our grocers trade in the necessaries of life while the saloon men handle that which is neither good nor necessary for body or soul and says it is necessary for him to sell it seven days in the week and our good Mayor thinks it necessary to aid him in so doing. Mr. Eustis, during Mayor Winstous' administration migh have been heard saying, O, Lord, make me mayor and I will show these wicked democrats how to close saloons on Sunday, and now we, no doubt, could we have access to his bed chamber, would hear him say, now I lay me down to sleep, I pray the Lord to increase my powers, make me law maker, judge and executive, that I can show the people of this city how to run a city and keep the saloons open on Sunday. It has been asked, "Are the saloon open on Sunday?" Well I should think they were. Last Sunday I chanced to walk by a saloon and found it full of men; a few weeks ago my wife and I boarded a street car to go down town to church, and we could not get there without being slobbered over by a man too drunk to sit up, and these are not exceptions. You can see drunken men staggering along the streets any Sunday you care to go down town. The ministers have had the courage to ask the Mayor to obey his oaths and enforce the laws. The Mayor has refused and says it does not agree with his policy, in other words, that he and his policy are bigger than the law. Whereupon the ministers denounced him from their pulpits in plain terms for which they should be congratulated by every good

WE HAVE Established Headquarters at

DELANO

And expect to be here for the next FOUR MONTHS. We sell the BEST RANGE in the World and took more premiums at the World's Fair than any other firm there when every stove firm in the land was represented. All we ask of you is to go and examine the dealers Range and then examine ours, and if you don't say we have the cheapest and best Range made, why don't deal with us. We expect the dealers to kick and the more they kick the better we like it. They do the kicking and we sell the Ranges. We have sold over one housand Ranges in this State this year and you can write and ask anyone using our goods about their merits, and we refer you to any Bank in St. Louis as to our standing.

STATISTICS of the world's fair recently published show that out of a total attendance of 28,000,000 only 156 cases of drunkenness were reported. This means less than one case of drunkenness a day while the fair lasted. It is a remarkable showing for the sobriety of the American people and one that every American can be proud of.

IT is said that a syndicate of rich Englishmen is preparing to reproduce the famous world's fair court of honor in connection with a new theater to be erected in London for the especial accommodation of "America," which scored such a success during the exposition. It is a big undertaking, but the enterprise is novel and may attract a paying patronage. The adoption of the court of honor idea is a great victory for American art and architecture.

The dogs are proud of their portrait gallery, and they despise all the low-bred curs of creation. How nice it is to be a queen's dog.

AT length the Dead sea is to be navigated, and two sailing-boats, one rather large and heavy, for cargo, and the other smaller and neater, for passengers, have just been conveyed from Jaffa to Jerusalem by rail, and thence to the Dead sea by road. The boats belong to the sultan, as does also the Dead sea, which forms part of the crown property, and it is Abdul-Hamid's intention to turn to good account the salt, bitumen and sulphur that abound in its waters and on its shore.

THE experiment of propelling boats through the Erie canal by means of electricity has proved successful. The boat was propelled at 4 miles an hour and made all the curves and locks unfalteringly. It will revolutionize the canal business and will lead to the construction of other water ways no doubt. It is asserted by electricians that enough electricity to propel all the traffic along the Erie from Buffalo to Albany can be furnished from the Niagara Tunnel Electric company. Think of transmitting the power of the falls hundred of miles for propelling boats.

WILSON INTERPRETS THE BILL.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 29.—After weeks of preparation, involving an exhaustive study of the subject from a democratic point of view, the tariff bill is at last completed and has been given to the public.

Mr. Wilson, the chairman of the committee, has prepared the following statement, which was given out with the bill:

The democratic members of the committee on ways and means have felt as none others could feel the momentous responsibility resting upon them and the surpassing magnitude, difficulty and delicacy of the duty assigned them of framing a tariff bill for a nation of 70,000,000 people. The bill they were called on to reform is a vast and labyrinthian system of class taxation the culmination of eighty years' control of the taxing power by a few great interests, gathering on to their train a host of petty tollgatherers. It was carefully framed to prevent as long as possible what its author called "any monkeying with the tariff," by which he meant any successful effort of the people to undo or to lessen the bounties which its beneficiaries were permitted to write therein in their own words and their own figures. It transferred to the free list proper and fruitful revenue articles, where most of the taxes paid by the people were received by their government, and greatly increased the rates of those articles where all or most of the taxes paid by the people went into private coffers. And it was burthened about by many defenses, chief among which are a swept and garnished treasury and a swollen and colossal scale of permanent expenditure.

Such are the conditions that confronted us at the threshold of the work. The committee has welcomed information and counsel from every trustworthy source, and while it does not expect its bill to escape just criticism in all of its details its does present it to the country as the result of months of patient, anxious toil and of an honest desire to discharge its duty, purged of all taint of local and personal favoritism or prejudice.

Its main features are two. First, the adoption whenever it seemed practicable of ad valorem instead of specific duties; secondly, the freeing from taxes of those great materials of industry that lie at the basis of production.

Specific rates of duty are objectionable for these reasons: They frequently conceal a rate of taxation too enormous to be submitted to if expressed in ad valorem terms, as the duty of 8 cents on 100 pounds on salt in bulk, which amounts to over 80 per cent. on a common necessary of life. They always bear heavily on the common article used by the masses and lightly on the expensive article consumed by the rich, as a tax of $30 on all houses would be little or nothing on the great mansion and very high on the humble home.

Contrary to common belief specific duties lead to greater frauds in administration, for counting and weighing at the custom-house are done by the cheapest and most easily corrupted labor, while ad valorem rates are assessed by the best paid and most responsible appraisers. The ad valorem system has worked well in practice, is essentially the fair system because it is a tax upon the actual value of the article, and was declared by Mr. Clay himself to be in theory and according to every sound principle of justice entitled to the preference, and vindicated by long trial.

The boldest innovation of the bill is its large free list of raw materials. Taxes upon production are double wrongs. They gather and accumulate on the consumer of the finished product. They hurt labor by narrowing the market for what it produces. Coal and iron are the foundations of modern industry. Material progress is measured by the amount of their consumption. No other country can supply them as abundantly or cheaply as we can. No possible competition can interfere with our own producers a few miles in the interior of the country. Remoteness from the sources of supply is in itself enough disadvantage to any section of the country, without further burdens in tariff taxes. Untaxed ores, coal, lumber, wool and other fibers must immensely stimulate production in certain parts of our country. The thin edge of American manufactures has entered every country. With release from taxes upon their materials there is no limit to the growth of our foreign trade. This will more than compensate the home producers of raw material, who, tariff or no tariff, control all the interior of the country, for any apprehended loss of markets anywhere along the seaboard. Its incalculable advantage to labor is apparent. In every great line of manufactures we can produce in six months to nine months enough for our home market. We can get rid of our surplus only by foreign trade. As long as we have taxes on the materials of industry we cannot build up that trade. Hence, the other alternative of trusts to keep down production to the home market. The workingman can see whether his interest is with a system that represses production and robs him of employment or with a system that gives natural and healthy play to production and emancipates him from trusts and like combinations of capital.

As to the details of the bill, I will briefly recapitulate the salient changes of the several schedules. In the chemical schedule we have transferred to the free list quite a number of articles used in manufactures, the most important of which is sulphuric acid, one of the corner-stones of all chemical industry. The duty on castor oil is reduced from 85 cents to 35 cents per gallon, and the duty on linseed oil, which was secretly raised to 32 cents by the conference committee on the McKinley bill after each house had openly voted for a lower duty, we put at 15 cents a gallon. Pig lead being reduced from 2 to 1 cent a pound lead paints are correspondingly reduced.

The McKinley bill increased the duty on opium prepared for smoking to $12 a pound in the vain hope of lessening its importation. The custom house officers on the Pacific coast declare that this increase of duty has simply placed in the hands of smugglers the bringing in of opium to the demoralization of the customs service and the loss of over half a million revenue. The duty proposed is believed to be collectable and will put the traffic under government control and supervision.

In the pottery schedule substantial reductions are made. Plain white ware is dropped from the high schedule in which it mysteriously crowded itself. Decorated ware is reduced from 60 to 45 per cent.; undecorated from 55 to 40.

In common window glass, where close combinations have kept up the prices to consumers under the shelter of duties averaging 100 per cent., a reduction of more than one-half has been made in all the larger sizes. There is no doubt that these rates will permit a very healthy growth of the industry here. In plate glass reductions are made, the largest sizes from 50 cents to 30 cents per square foot. Of silvered from 60 to 35 cents.

In the iron and steel schedule we begin with free ore. The discovery of immense deposits of Bessemer ores in the lake region and of foundry ores in Alabama has rapidly swept us to the leadership of the world in the production of iron and steel, and brought near at hand our undisputed supremacy in the great field of manufactures. The use of steam shovels reduces the cost of mining to a point where the wages paid "natural labor" are irrelevant. Pig iron we reduce from 6.72 per ton, which is from 50 to 90 per cent., to a uniform duty of 22½ per cent., a rate somewhat higher in proportion than the rest of the schedule because of cheap freight rates on foreign pig, it being a favorite freight on westward voyages. Steel rails we reduce from 13.44 per ton, now 75 per cent., to 25 per cent. As the pool which has kept up prices so many years in this country seems now disorganized, the other producers will soon need protection more against Mr. Carnegie at Pittsburgh and Mr. Stirling at Chicago than against foreign producers.

The residue of the schedules vary from 25 to 30 per cent., wood screws being out at the latter figure. Beams and girders are 35 per cent. because of the waste in cutting beams and the variety of lengths and sizes, and of the frequent necessity of changing the rolls in making beams and girders because of the irregular quantities and lengths and sizes of orders.

Tin plates are reduced to 40 per cent., a little more than one-half of the McKinley rate. This is a revenue duty and at the same time enough to permit any existing mills to live and flourish. Cheaper grades of pocket cutlery are 35 per cent. Higher grades 45. Table cutlery is put at 35 per cent. These are very substantial reductions from present rates, which, being specific, reach in some grades of pocket cutlery as high as 90 per cent. but with release of taxes on raw materials, especially on pearl and ivory for handles, seems ample. Both copper ores and pig copper are made free, we being large exporters of the latter and the duty serving only to enable the producers to sell higher to our people than to foreigners. Nickel is free. Lead ore has a small duty of 15 per cent. Pig lead 1 cent a pound. Silver lead ores are restored to the free list. Unmanufactured lumber is free. Manufactured is put at 20 per cent., with the proviso that if any export duties are charged on foreign lumber it shall be admitted only at the rates now existing.

Sugar has been a difficult subject to deal with. Raw sugar was transferred to the free list by the McKinley bill because nearly all the taxes paid on it went to the public treasury. A strong desire among some members of the committee was to put an ad valorem duty of 20 to 25 per cent. on it and abolish the bounty at once. After much consideration it was decided to reduce by one-half the duty on refined sugar and to repeal the bounty one-eighth each year, leaving raw sugar untaxed as at present.

In the tobacco schedule those rates were sought which would bring most revenue. The present taxes of $2 and $2.75 a pound on wrapping leaf have blotted out any small establishments and actually impaired revenue. We make the rates $1 and $1.25 per pound on wrapper leaf and 35 cents and 50 cents per pound on filler tobacco, unstemmed and stemmed in each. Manufactures of tobacco are put at 40 cents. Cigars are reduced from $4.50 per pound and 25 per cent. ad valorem to $3 per pound and 25 per cent., which is believed to be the most productive revenue rate and is higher than the law of 1883.

Live animals are put at 20 per cent. Barley is reduced from 30 cents a bushel to 20 per cent., which is about 12 cents.

Breadstuffs, of which we are immense exporters, are made free except when imported from countries putting duties on our like products, in which case the duty is 20 per cent.

Fresh vegetables, fruits, eggs and like food products are untaxed for the benefit of our own consumers, largely the working people of the cities. Salt in bulk is free; in packages the salt is free, but the covering dutiable at rates prescribed for like articles.

The tariff on spirits is put at double the internal revenue rates on like spirits and some slight reduction is made on still wines, malt liquors, ginger ale and like beverages in the interest of increased revenue. The duty on sparkling wines is likewise slightly reduced for the same reasons, that on champagne being put at $7 per dozen quarts as against $8 in the McKinley bill and $6 in the law of 1883.

In cotton manufactures substantial reductions are made, especially on cheap cloths and prints, and the existing system of taxing by count of threads in the square inch is retained.

Hemp and flax are made free; dressed line of hemp and flax, 1 cent and 1½ cent respectively. Burlaps and cotton and grain bagging are put at 15 per cent., but when imported for covering of articles to be exported are duty free.

Wool is made free. This takes the stilts from under woolen manufacturers and begets the hope that they may recover from the languishing condition in which they have been for a quarter of a century and that we may get woolen goods at reasonable rates instead of at duties that on the common grades frequently reach 100 per cent., and in cases two or three times that merciless figure. Cloths and dress goods are put at 40 per cent., clothing at 45 per cent., rates higher than the committee desired, but deemed temporarily necessary because our manufactures have so long been excluded from two-thirds of the wools of the world that they will have to learn the art of manufacturing at free wool. A sliding scale is therefore added by which the rates in the woolen schedule are to come down five points with the lapse of five years.

The above is a rapid summary of the chief changes made by the proposed bill, and will give a satisfactory idea. I believe, of its general structure. It is estimated that it will reduce revenue on the basis of importations of 1892 about $50,000,000, with an immensely larger decrease of tax binding to the American people. The administration law is reported with a few amendments, suggested by experience of its operation. That law was chiefly prepared by Mr. Hewitt when he was in congress and the changes proposed in our bill are to make it more effective, while at the same time softening some of the features added by the McKinley bill that would treat the business of importing as an outlawry, not entitled to the protection of government.

On and after the 1st of March, 1894, the following articles are to be added to the free list:

Bacon and hams, beef, mutton and pork and meats of all kinds, prepared or preserved, no specially provided for in this act.

Baryta.

All binding twine manufactured in whole or in part from thistle or tampico fiber, manilla sisal grass or sunn, of single ply and measuring not exceeding 6.0 feet to the pound.

Birds, stuffed, not suitable for millinery ornaments, and bird skins, prepared for preservation, but not further advanced in manufacture.

Blue vitriol, or sulphate of copper.

Bone char, suitable for use in decorating sugars.

Coal, bituminous and shale, and coal slack or cut; coke; coal tar, crude, and all preparations and products of coal tar, not colors or dyes, not specially provided for in this act.

Oxide of cobalt.

Copper imported in the form of ores; old copper, fit only for manufacture; clipping from new copper, and all composition metal of which copper is a component material of chief value not specially provided for in this act; regulus of copper and black or coarse copper and copper cement, copper in plates, bars, in gots, or pigs, and other forms, not manufactured, not specially provided for in this act.

Copperas, or sulphate of iron.

Cotton-ties of iron or steel cut to lengths, punched or not punched, with or without buckles, for belting cotton.

Diamonds, dust or bort, and jewels to be used in the manufacture of watches or clocks.

Yolks of eggs of birds, fish and insects.

Downs of all kinds, crude, not specially provided for in this act.

Fresh fish.

Furs, undressed.

Iodine.

Resublimated iron ore; also the dross or residuum from burnt pyrites and sulphur and pyrites or sulphuret of iron in its natural state.

Lard.

Lemon juice; lime juice and sour orange juice.

Mica, and metallic mineral substances in a crude state and metals unwrought, not specially provided for in this act.

Ochre and ochery earths; sienna and sienna earths; umber and umber earths, not specially provided for in this act.

Cotton seed oil, paintings in oil or water colors, and statuary, not otherwise provided for in this act.

Plows, tools and disc harrows, harvesters, reapers, drills, mowers, horse rakes, cultivators, threshing machines and cotton gins.

Plush, black, for making men's hats.

Quicksilver.

Salt.

Silk, partially manufactured from cocoons or from waste silk, and not farther advanced or manufactured than carded or combed silk.

Soap, all not otherwise specially provided for in this act.

Sulphate of soda, or salt cake, or nitre cake; sulphuric acid.

Tallow and oil grease, including that known commercially as De Gras, or brown wool grease.

Straw.

Burr stone, bound up into millstones; free stone, granite, sand stone, limestone and other building or monumental, except marble, manufactured or undressed, not specially provided for in this act.

All wearing apparel and other personal effects shall be admitted free of duty, without regard to their value, upon their identity being established under such rules and regulations as the secretary of the treasury may prescribe.

Timber, hewna nd sawed, and timber used for spars and in building wharves; timber squared or sided; sawed boards, plank, deals and other lumber; laths, pickets and palings; shingles; staves of wood of all kinds; wood unmanufactured; provided, that if any export duty is laid upon the above mentioned articles, or either of them, all said articles imported from said country shall be subject to duty as now provided by law.

Chair cane, or reeds, wrought or manufactured from rattans or reeds.

Woods, namely, cedar, lignumvitæ, lancewood, ebony, box, granadilla, mahogany, rosewood, satinwood and all forms of cabinet woods, in the log, rough or hewn.

Bamboo and rattan unmanufactured.

Briar root or briar wood and similar wood unmanufactured.

Reeds and sticks of partridge, hair wood, pimento, orange, myrtle and other woods in the rough, or not further manufactured than cut into lengths suitable for sticks for umbrellas, parasols, sun-shades, whips or walking canes.

All wool of the sheep, hair of the camel, goat, alpaca and other like animals, and all wool and hair on the skin. Nails, yarns, waste, card waste, burr waste, rags and flax, including all waste or rags, composed wholly or in part of wool.

MONTREAL SHAKEN.

Her Population Terrified by a Severe Earthquake Shock.

MONTREAL, Can., Nov. 29.—At 11:47 o'clock Monday morning this city and the surrounding country felt the most severe shock of earthquake that has visited this part of the continent for several years. Buildings rocked and trembled as if about to be thrown down by the percussion of some heavy explosion. At first came a heaving sensation like that of a ship over a heavy dead swell, the buildings creaked as if every joint and fastening was being tested by some awful and invisible force, then followed a dull, muffled, deep-toned sound like that of a subterranean explosion. The shock was felt from foundation to turret of the most substantially built edifice in the city, and then came the setting back, and for an instant it felt as if everything was going down, as if the bottom had fallen out of things generally and they were collapsing. There was a moment of suspense and the earthquake had passed.

The entire population fled into the streets. Women and children stood terror stricken and praying. At the same moment a fire alarm and ambulance call sounded and the clanging of bells and the wagons rushing through the streets added to the general consternation.

Along St. Francis Xavier, St. Paul, St. Sacrament, Hospital and St. John streets the offices, stores and factories poured out their hundreds and thousands in one wild rush to the streets. Young women in the offices and factories rushed out hatless and without wraps, and many with blanched faces were observed silently murmuring a prayer as they reached the streets and looked heavenward.

In the court of queen's bench, where Thomas Green was being tried for robbery, Judge Wurtelle, the jury, policemen and spectators fled in terror, Judge Dugas being seriously injured in the mad stampede. The prisoner escaped unmolested, but was subsequently arrested.

In the country district the same state of affairs prevailed. A number of the flimsy structures in which the inhabitants lived were blown down by the wind, which in many cases accompanied the earthquake, and the affrighted inhabitants rushed aimlessly about, often receiving injury. The earthquake was most felt along the section of the St. Lawrence river between Montreal and Quebec cities. A number of casualties have occurred in the country districts, but full reports from there have not been received. It will be found, however, that great loss will have been entailed on farmers.

NEW YORK, Nov. 28.—The earthquake shock was felt in Williamsburg, N. Y., at 12:15 p. m. Monday. The shock was also felt in buildings near the East river, and it was supposed to be caused by the concussion of a distant powder or dynamite explosion. The shock was felt in the eastern district of Brooklyn, especially along Bedford avenue.

BOSTON, Nov. 28.—A severe earthquake shock was felt throughout northern Vermont and New Hampshire at 11:45 Monday morning. At St. Johnsbury, Vt., the shock was especially severe. It was also felt at Greenfield, Mass.

POWDERLY'S RESIGNATION.

It Is Accepted and J. R. Sovereign Chosen Grand Master Workman.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 29.—At Monday afternoon's meeting of the Knights of Labor delegates Grand Master Workman Powderly's resignation was accepted by a practically unanimous vote after he had stated to the convention that he had tendered it in good faith and that his action was final. J. R. Sovereign, of Iowa, was then elected to succeed Mr. Powderly, the vote being: Sovereign, 23; James Campbell, of Pittsburgh, 8; T. B. McGuire, 1; Powderly, 2. The vacancies on the general executive board were filled by the election of C. A. French, of Boston, H. B. Martin, of Minneapolis, and J. I. Kenney, of Omaha, all anti-Powderly men.

Mr. Powderly being approached, remarked: "The king is dead; long live the king." He said that Sovereign was a good man and he was glad to see him his successor. Asked if he would remain in the order, he said: "Certainly, and I'll do all I can for it."

DES MOINES, Ia., Nov. 29.—Iowa's labor commissioner, J. R. Sovereign, who has been chosen as successor to Master Workman Powderly of the Knights of Labor, was seen in regard to the matter. He said he would accept the position and would endeavor to have the headquarters removed from Philadelphia to the west, probably Des Moines. Further than that he would not outline his policy.

Mr. Sovereign is serving his second term as labor commissioner under Gov. Boies. He has been for several years state master workman of the Iowa Knights of Labor. He is a stonecutter by trade, but has been in political and newspaper work for several years in the greenback and populist parties. He is popular among Iowa workingmen and has considerable influence in politics. He gathered the corn statistics from which Gov. Boies made his famous New York speech claiming that corn was raised in Iowa at a loss of sixty-seven cents an acre. Mr. Sovereign is the third man to hold the office of general master workman in the order since its organization in 1869, Mr. Stephens and Mr. Powderly being the other two.

Fought in the War of 1812.

JERSEYVILLE, Ill., Nov. 29. — David H. Ames died in this city aged 101 years. His remains will be taken to Oneida county, N. Y., where he was born May 1, 1792. He was a soldier in the war of 1812. His father lived to be 102 years old. He has six children living.

Death of Congressman O'Neill.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 29.—Congressman Charles O'Neill, "the father of the house," died at his home in this city aged 72 years. He served twenty-eight years in the national house of representatives.

Directum Beats Saladin.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 29.—The race between Saladin, the pacing king, with a record of 2:05¾, and Directum, the king of trotters, with a record of 2:05¼, for a steak of $9,500, took place on Monday. Saladin won the first heat in 2:10¼. The other three heats were won by Directum in 2:10¼, 2:14¼, 2:12.

No Red Hat for Satolli.

ROME, Nov. 29.—The vatican has formally denied the report that Mgr. Satolli is to be made a cardinal, and that his successor as the papal delegate to the United States has been named.

More Than Pleased

With Hood's Sarsaparilla—For Tetter and Blood Impurities

Stronger and Better in Every Way.

"I have been more than pleased with Hood's Sarsaparilla. I have suffered with tetter breaking out on my face and all over my body all my life. I never could find anything to do it good until I began to take Hood's Sarsaparilla. I have now used about eight bottles, and Oh, it has done me so much good that I have the utmost faith in it and recommend it to everyone. Besides purifying my blood, it has made me so much stronger and better I do not feel like the same person at all." ANNIE ARNER, Augusta, Ky.

"German Syrup"

My acquaintance with Boschee's German Syrup was made about fourteen years ago. I contracted a cold which resulted in a hoarseness and cough which disabled me from filling my pulpit for a number of Sabbaths. After trying a physician, without obtaining relief I saw the advertisement of your remedy and obtained a bottle. I received quick and permanent help. I never hesitate to tell my experience. Rev. W. THE YAKIMA COUNTRY.

JUST ACROSS THE COLUMBIA RIVER, ALONG THE LINE OF THE NORTHERN PACIFIC RAILROAD IN EASTERN WASHINGTON, IS A REMARKABLE VALLEY. ONLY A FEW YEARS SINCE IT WAS GIVEN OVER TO SAGE BRUSH AND JACK RABBITS. NOW IT IS ONE OF THE MOST FERTILE AND PRODUCTIVE VALLEYS IN THE WORLD. IRRIGATION HAS DONE IT. VAST SUMS HAVE BEEN SPENT UPON LONG LINES OF IRRIGATING CANALS, AND LARGE AREAS ARE NOW PLANTED IN SMALL FRUITS AND ORCHARD PATCHES, IN GRAIN FIELDS, AND ALFALFA PASTURES. THE YIELDS OBTAINED ARE SO GREAT THAT LITTLE FARMS OF 10 AND 20 ACRES ARE ABOUT AS MUCH AS ONE MAN CARES FOR OR NEEDS TO OWN. IF YOU THINK OF FINDING A NEW HOME, LOOK INTO THIS REGION, WHERE THE CLIMATE IS AS PLEASANT AS THE CROPS ARE GOOD.

BRADFIELD'S FEMALE REGULATOR

"CUGH!"

A young man with plenty of dough
Went out with his girl for a rough,
But the creek was so high,
His girl said: "Oh, migh,
I think we had better not kough."

But the young man replied with a cough
"That he never was given to skough,
And I could swear that the barque
Was safe for a larque,
And thought they had better be ough."

Then away through the water they ploughed,
Though the girl seemed considerably coughed
And said "that the motion
Was just like the otion,
Except that the waves weren't so loughed."

They came to an arch and went through,
Where they had a most beautiful vough
Of the great water tower
And they stayed there an hower—
(It was late or they might have stayed tough).

But at last, when they'd rowed quite enough
They tied up the boat by a blough,
And ran up the road
To the lady's aboad,
With a haste that made both of them pough.

THE WEST PASTURE.

How the Trouble It Caused Was Finally Settled.

The autumn day was closing in a glory of purple and gold; the last rays of the setting sun entered the window of the farmhouse, and, slanting across the row of shining milk pans, formed a halo of gold around the head of the farmer's daughter, Cecile Grey, as she stood with the full milk pail poised in her hands, and thought seriously, a perplexed pucker between her straight brows.

Pretty she was not, but her fair, calm face, looking placidly out from beneath her crown of really beautiful hair, the envy of all the village girls, was very attractive.

The farm laborers were coming from supper, the day was dying as the sun sank reluctantly behind the trees, and still Cecile stood there silently, buried in reverie, and unmindful of what was going on about her.

"A penny for your thoughts, Cecy," spoke out a manly voice.

And Jack Newton appeared at the outer door.

Cecy, turning, came out of her brown study.

"I was thinking of the picnic to-morrow, Jack. No one has asked me to go, and I wondered if I must stay at home after all. That momentous question so occupied my thoughts that I had forgotten my evening duties."

"Will you go with me, Cecile? It is on mother's account that I have not asked you before. But as I was strolling past, half inclined to give it all up, I saw you, and that settled my doubts as to what to do."

There was a tender light in the young man's eyes as he spoke, and the pretty pink color flushed into Cecile's cheek.

"Of course I will go, Jack. Why allow her dislike to spoil our pleasure? She will forgive me some day."

"So it is settled? You will come with me?"

"Yes, Jack."

Well pleased, the young man went on his way.

The cause of Mrs. Newton's dislike to Cecile was a trivial one.

When she was a little girl Cecile's father had given her the deed of a picturesque bit of land, called the west pasture, which lay between the Newton farm and that of Mr. Grey.

Two years before our story opens Mrs. Newton had made Cecile an offer for the land. It would complete her east pasture, she said, and fill in the corner, thus making her acres form almost a square.

She had set her heart on having the pasture, but Cecile loved the place, and would not sell it. Mrs. Newton tried by coaxing and liberal offers to gain her point, but the girl was determined. At last, flying into a passion, the elder lady rated the younger soundly for "a conceited minx, who thought herself too good for her place, and who would never get her Jack, for whom she had set her cap."

And, having thus relieved her mind, she went home.

For two years she had not entered the Grey farmhouse unless she knew the only daughter was absent. Good, motherly Mrs. Grey overlooked the feud, welcomed Jack cordially whenever he called, paid little neighborly visits to Mrs. Newton, and in every way tried to mend the breach which Jack's mother kept fresh by daily repinings.

Cecile, when Jack had gone, went about her duties with a light step and a lighter heart. When, at last, everything was done, she sought her pretty room, which was tastefully adorned by her own hands, and, sitting by the window, looked out over the hills and wondered if the morrow would bring the fair weather the night promised.

Meanwhile Mrs. Newton, her face red with anger, stood listening to Jack, who, with his bedroom lamp in his hand, had turned as he reached the door, and said: "I must be up early in the morning, mother, for I am going to the picnic. Cecile has promised to accompany me. I intend to ask her to be my wife," he went on, in some confusion. "She will make you a good daughter, mother; you know you have always longed for one."

"But not such a one as you want to give me," exclaimed Mrs. Newton. "No, Jack; I will never welcome her to this house! If it had been anyone else—but Cecile Grey, never!"

"Mother," said Jack, firmly, "why cannot you overcome this foolish prejudice? I shall marry Cecile if she will have me; better accept the inevitable." And he left the room.

Mrs. Newton was taken by surprise. After awhile she cooled down a little.

"After all," she thought, "if he does marry her that west pasture will come to us. But I will never give in, not even for that. Jack shall lose the farm if he marries Cecile Grey."

That night, Cecile, in her pretty white bed, dreamed of Jack. At first her dreams were peaceful, but as the night wore on they became disturbed, and at last she awoke with the strange feeling that her lover was in danger.

Mechanically she arose, and having donned wrapper and slippers went to the window. As she threw up the sash and leaned out across the sill, she saw that a cloudy sky had taken the place of the starry one she had gazed at earlier in the night.

The wind had risen, and blew in fitful gusts around the corners of the house.

A troubled thought of the pleasure she had anticipated came to Cecile, and then all at once, as a stronger gust of wind came to her, she smelled a faint odor of smoke.

Looking quickly at the barn and other buildings she could see nothing unusual. She raised her eyes and looked anxiously in the direction of Jack's house.

"What was that red glow spreading above the tree tops?" she wondered.

And then she realized that the Newton farmhouse was on fire.

Running downstairs she roused her father, then out of the door, and away through the darkness she sped in the direction of the burning building.

All was quiet when she reached the gate, which was locked. What should she do? She looked up at the high pickets with their cruelly sharp points, and then began to climb resolutely up. Balancing herself on the top she dropped to the ground. Her skirts caught on the sharp points, but she managed to wrench them free, and, never noticing how her hands were bleeding, made her way to the house.

The flames shot upward; the smoke rolled in huge columns toward the darkening sky; but still no sound came from the inmates of the burning building. Could she save them? Would her father never come?

Looking anxiously around, she saw an open window; she sprang through it and found that she was in the thickest of the smoke. What she did must be done quickly.

She snatched a woolen scarf she had thrown over her head, and, binding it around her mouth, prepared to fight her way to the foot of the stairs. Inch by inch she pressed forward, till, blinded by the smoke, she struck her foot against the lower step. With a little scream of joy she flew up the stairs, and along the wide hall to Jack's room.

Jack was just awaking from a troubled sleep. Hearing Cecile's voice, he instantly sprang up, comprehending the danger almost before she could tell him of it.

"Mother sleeps downstairs in the little room on the right," he said, in answer to her question. "Wait, Cecile."

He frantically searched for his clothing, but Cecile was away again battling with the smoke, which almost overpowered her. The flames were licking their way toward Mrs. Newton's room. Cecile saw this, and breathed a prayer for help. She fairly flew down the stairs, and reached the door just as one cruel tongue of fire darted across the top of it.

She found Mrs. Newton in a heavy stupor, and all her efforts to rouse her were in vain. She could not wait for Jack, so she wrapped the heavy form in a blanket, and how, she knew not, managed to drag her into the hall. Then Jack joined her. He promptly relieved her of her burden, and in an instant had led the way to safety.

Mr. Grey and his men, having but just reached the scene, were preparing to fight the fire, and after taking in this fact, Cecile's courage and strength gave way, and she slipped down at Jack's feet.

Mrs. Grey now came hurrying up, and together she and Jack half-dragged, half-carried the two helpless ones to her home. A doctor was sent for, and a simple application of restoratives aroused Mrs. Newton, who listened with tears to the story of Cecile's heroism. Turning to Jack she said, simply and humbly: "I misjudged her. Forgive me."

Jack's face brightened, but he continued his restless walk before the door of the room where Cecile lay.

Just as the morning dawned she opened her eyes and asked: "Is Jack safe?"

Then she fell asleep with a happy smile on her lips. She had burned her hands and arms; her beautiful hair was singed badly, and her strength had been terribly taxed; but in a month she had recovered sufficiently to take a short drive, and Jack took her to see the ruins.

Every building on the place had been burned to the ground.

"I am glad of it," said Jack. "I intend to build a new house, to which I shall be proud to take my wife. Will you come, Cecile?"

"What will your mother say?" she asked with a touch of playfulness, while her eyes gave him the answer he craved.

"She is more than anxious to welcome you as a daughter."

So it was settled; and Mrs. Newton, as she looks at her daughter Cecile's hands, says: "They are the most beautiful hands in the world to me, if they are scarred and blackened!"

And the feud of the west pasture is at an end.

Jack and his wife are very happy. They are talking of another picnic to take the place of the one planned a year ago, and it is to be held in the west pasture.—Drake's Magazine.

What Could Have Ailed Her?

The human body is a very delicate and highly complex organization, and it is not surprising that it sometimes breaks down for no easily ascertainable reason. A farmer met the village doctor, according to an exchange, and said:

"If you happen to be out our way any time, I wish you'd stop and see my wife. She don't seem to be feeling very well."

"What ails her? What are some of her symptoms?"

"I dunno. This morning, after she'd milked the cows and fed the pigs and got breakfast for the men and washed the dishes and built a fire under the boiler in the washhouse and done a few little odd jobs round the house, she complained of feeling tired-like. I shouldn't wonder if her blood was poor, and I guess she needs a dose of medicine."—Youth's Companion.

Who Was Tired?

They are telling a good story in Washington on Mr. Stewart as a revenge for his interminable speeches. Before the night sessions began, the senate had adjourned and several of them were getting their hats in the cloak-room, Mr. Stewart among them, when one of his fellow senators said:

"Stewart, you remind me of a clergyman."

Mr. Stewart naturally stared, and then laughed and said: "How, pray?"

"Yes, you are like a certain minister who was telling a friend that he had preached two hours and a half. 'Were you not very tired?' said the friend, sympathetically. 'Na, na, I was as fresh as a rose; but you should have seen the congregation.'"—Buffalo Commercial.

—Capillary Attraction.—No other explanation than that her hair attracted him could be given by a Newark young man who was caught while trying to scissor a tress from the head of a girl who was looking in a store window. A new phase of capillary attraction.—Philadelphia Ledger.

A Lonely Universe.

Aunt Samantha is visiting at a house in Buffalo. She is an old maid and very devout, always concluding her prayers with the Gloria.

"Why does she say such funny things in her prayers?" asked the little daughter of the house.

"Why, what does she say?" replied the fond mamma.

"I don't remember all she says, but she always ends with 'World without men, ah me.'"—Buffalo Express.

Professional Amenities.

Physician (to lawyer)—Where are you going in such a hurry, Brown?

Lawyer Brown—I am going to Jones'.

Physician—Well, wait for me. I am going to Jones', too.

Lawyer Brown—Can't do it. Jones wants to make his will, and I must get there before you or I'll be too late.—Boston Globe.

THE SEARCH LIGHT.

Delectation.

Consternation.

Two Reasons.

The Inter Ocean prints what purports to be a midnight dialogue between two soldiers who lay side by side under their blankets:

"I say, Tom," said one, "what brought you into the army?"

"Oh, well," said Tom, "I hadn't any wife, and I loved war, so I enlisted. What brought you here, Jack?"

"Why, you see, I had a wife, and I loved peace."

The Boy Found It.

Doctor—Did you take that prescription around to Mr. Ailing?

Boy—Yes, sir.

"I forgot the exact number of his residence. Did you find it?"

"I told everybody along the street that I had one of your prescriptions for Mr. Ailing and they all told me to look for a house with crape on the door."—Good News.

Everybody Satisfied.

Waiter—That gentleman has ordered quail on toast and we have none left. What shall I say to him?

Restaurant Keeper—Tell him that we have some left but you wouldn't care to offer it to him. That will give him the impression that you wish to serve him well and at the same time it will keep up the reputation of the house.—Boston Globe.

Rank Stupidity.

Mrs. Keene—My servant girl was telling me this morning that your servant girl is the stupidest she ever met in her life.

Mrs. Easy—How does she make that out?

Mrs. K.—She finds that your girl has been with you three months and doesn't yet know any of your family secrets.—N. Y. Press.

It Worked.

Fond Parent (on suburban train)—Does mother's little Tessie want a nice banana?

Tessie—Bet I do!

Fond Parent—Then cry, pet, real hard. There's a dear little girl on the other side of the aisle with a paper sack full of them, and she'll give you one to quiet you.—Chicago Tribune.

Too Late.

Featherstone—I have called on Miss Palisade a number of times lately, but I have invariably found her not at home.

Ringway—You don't get there early enough. You should call before I do.—Judge.

Whence Come Many Strange Things.

Mrs. Hickes—What a pretty blonde Miss King-Chester is! But she's an anomaly to me. I know the family well. All the Kings were brunettes, and the Chesters were all dark, too. Where can she get her light hair from?

Miss Wickes—From Paris.—Vogue.

The Dream Came True.

I always believe in dreams, I do,
For I know of times the dreams came true.
Why, it was only the other night
I dreamt of a fire and saw the light.
It worried me much, and I twisted and tossed;
Then overslept—half a day was lost.
But my dream came true, though undesired.
When I came to the office I was fired.

Fortunate.

Willis—Jones is a lucky fellow. His wife made him a present of a box of cigars the other day.

Wallace—Where does the lucky part come in?

Willis—Why, the very next day the doctor told him he must stop smoking.—Truth.

Against Orders.

He—Could you not learn to love me, if you do not now?

She—My physician has forbidden me to indulge in mental exertion of any sort.—Once a Week.

Marital Felicities.

The Husband (during the spat)—You're always making bargains! Was there ever a time when you didn't?

The Wife—Yes, sir. On my wedding day.—Chicago Record.

No Murder in His Heart.

Judge—Why did you strike the darky on the head?

Prisoner—Oi didn't want to kill him, yer honor.—Brooklyn Life.

He Overdid It.

Beggem (to himself)—I've got around that rich old great-aunt of mine at last. She's interested in benevolent schemes, and I'm helping her night and day to search out worthy objects. To-day she said I'd have cause for rejoicing when her will was read.

His Great-Aunt (to herself)—I had no idea my grand-nephew was so good. It worries him almost sick to see so much misery in the world. How delighted he will be to find that all my money is to go to the support of the poor friendless orphans!—N. Y. Weekly.

Enfant Terrible.

Little Hans (sees Prof. B., a botanist, asleep on a bench)—Tell me, mamma, who is that?

Mamma—That is Prof. B., a botanist. He spends his time searching for objects of nature.

Slight pause. Suddenly the professor begins to snore.

Little Hans—Mamma, is he searching now?—Schalk.

Wasn't Sure of Charlie.

Fannie—I am dreadful nervous. Mr. Charlie Bondclipper is going to call on papa this afternoon to ask for my hand.

Jennie—Are you afraid your father will refuse?

"No, father is all right."

"Then what are you nervous about?"

"I'm afraid Charlie will not show up."—Texas Siftings.

In This Case It Failed to Work.

Burglar (rousing the sleeping head of the family)—Don't move or I'll shoot! Whar's your money hid?

Head of the Family (struck by a bright thought)—It's in the pocket of my wife's dress.

Burglar—That's all right. I'll just take the dress. Thanks.—Chicago Tribune.

Where He Got It.

"I can't understand, Bobby," said his father, "why you should quarrel so much with Tommy White. Your mother tells me that you quarrel with him most of the time."

"I can't help it, pa," replied Bobby, thoughtfully; "I guess I must get my disposition from you or ma."—Texas Siftings.

A Ready Pupil.

"I am afraid of waking baby, for poor Robert has walked the floor every night with him for the last three weeks."

"How dreadful! And has the baby learned to talk yet?"

"No. But he has learned to swear."—Life.

A Compromise.

Reuben—Mamma, will you give me a cent to buy a nice big green apple?

Mamma—No, Reuben; green apples are very dangerous.

Reuben—Then, mamma, give me the cent, please, and I will buy a red one.—Harper's Young People.

The Broad Brim.

"Is there no hope for me, Miss Edythe? Can I never hope to be closer, nearer to you than I am now?" said he.

"No," replied she, softly; "no, Mr. Smith, not unless you take off your hat."

And he did.—Truth.

Hard Luck.

Laura—How was it that you lost your breach of promise suit against Jack Archer?

Clara—Well, perhaps it was because they found out I was suing two other men at the same time.—Brooklyn Life.

The Solution.

"Bridget, what was that loud noise I heard in your room last night? Did something fall?"

"Not that I knows on, ma'am. Maybe it's meself ye heard fall asleep. Ye knows I'm a heavy sleeper."—Truth.

IN A MANNER OF SPEAKING.

Mrs. Newlywed—Am I the dearest thing on earth to you?

Mr. Newlywed—Er—yes; you're the most expensive thing on earth to me.—Truth.

Too Perfect.

Maud—So you would be my husband, Harold. Let me ask you first, do you disipate?

Harold—No, dearest.

Maud—Ever drink?

Harold—No.

Maud—Smoke?

Harold—No.

Maud—Stay out late?

Harold—Never.

Maud—Flirt?

Harold—Never in my life.

Maud—Then, Harold, it can never be. I wish to marry a mere man when I do marry.—Chicago Record.

An Eye to Improved Methods.

Father (to the seven-year-old miss beside him, cutting the whip sharply through the air)—See, Mary, how I make the horse go faster without striking him at all.

Mary (in an eager tone of happy discovery)—Papa, why don't you spank us children in that way?—Life.

Really Sorry for Him.

Indignant Patron—I sent you a bundle of brand new collars last week, and when they came back they were all frayed and ragged.

The Laundryman (sympathetically)—Too bad! It beats all what cheap goods some furnishing stores turn out, don't it?—Chicago Record.

No Doubt About It.

Miss Willis—I suppose Mr. Brown is a happy man since his uncle died and left him a fortune.

Miss Wallace—He must be. He says it broke his wife of saying she wished she hadn't married him.—Brooklyn Life.

Familiar with the Subject.

Teacher—Why can't you learn to calculate interest as nicely as Tommy Traddles?

Dull Boy—I ain't had so much experience as he has. Our house ain't mortgaged.—Good News.

IT LOOKED SUSPICIOUS.

Why a Traveling Man Gave Up Playing Poker With Strangers.

"I don't play cards with strangers," said a quiet-looking man on the Pullman in response to an invitation from the drummer to join them in a little game of poker. The drummer flushed up and was about to say something.

"Hold on," remarked the quiet man, "and I'll explain. Sit down here a minute or two and let me tell you."

The drummer, being an obliging person, sat down.

"About five years," began the quiet man, "I was out in the west country at a wild town, and one night, being fond of cards and a pretty fair player, I asked four or five cowboys at the tavern where I was stopping to play cards with me. I didn't know them and they didn't know me, but they took it for granted I was all right, and they went to my room, where I had two or three decks of cards. We started the game at a quarter the ante with a $2 limit, and it wasn't long until I was winning nicely; for, as I said before, I was a good player. After some time we took another deck of cards, and, as usual, I had a good hand. My winnings had made my new-found acquaintances rather suspicious, but as I was perfectly honest I didn't pay much attention to that. I remember distinctly I had an ace of diamonds in my hand, and when it came around to show down I knew the pot was mine, but just as I laid down my hand the man opposite me whipped out his revolver and jabbed it into my face, and on the instant out came all the other men's guns, and I was scared almost to death. I couldn't say a word, for I thought my time had come, but nobody shot.

"'Look here!' ejaculated the man who had first pulled his gun, applying several disagreeable epithets in addition, and he took an ace of diamonds out of his hand. This restored my consciousness somewhat, and after waiting until each man had expressed his opinion of me and the final decision had been reached that I was to give up all I had won and probably be shot later I got in a word.

"'Gentlemen,' I said 'appearances are against me, but I am honest. I don't know how that extra ace got in the pack, but if you will look in my valise there you will find a pack exactly like this one lying loose in it, and the cards must have got mixed in there. I'm sure I didn't do it.' One of the men took the cards out of the valise and ran them over, and the ace was missing. That much was in my favor, but it did not restore confidence.

"'Send down stairs,' I said next, 'to the clerk and have him come up. He was playing here this afternoon.'

"Then they sent for the clerk, and he said that he and a party of friends had played with those cards during the afternoon, and, further, that they had used two packs to do some tricks with. He also stood bond for my honesty, and after an hour or so of terrific strain on me my friends concluded I was all right. Then to establish a good fellowship firmly I insisted on their taking their money back. They set up the drinks all around and I left them at last with a solemn vow that when I played poker again I must know everybody in the game and everybody must know me. Don't you think one experience like that is enough for an honest man of quiet temperament to go through?"—Detroit Free Press.

OUR NATIONAL NUT.

If We Must Have a National Flower Why Not a National Nut?

If we must have a national flower, why may we not have a national nut? Much that is claimed for the beauty and sentiment of the flower may be said in favor of the nut also, with the added value of the latter's utility and commercial importance. And if we may possess a national nut, will not the ubiquitous peanut be the first, the universal, the only choice? Is it not always with us?—knowing no market season and restricted to no commercial locality, appealing to childish palates in the Christmas taffy, assisting in manifestations of patriotism when fresh roasted on the Fourth of July, or salted and daintily served on golden shells at the luncheons of the "four hundred!" Perish the mortal who regards the peanut as too vulgar for refined nature's daily food. Such a one is heartlessly stifling childish memories of peanut feasts and peanut dolls, and deserves to dwell in a land—if such can be found—that knoweth the peanut not.

It is true that hundreds, and even thousands, of Italian counts emigrate to America, and then pile up Italian fortunes from their profits on the sale of the hot, odorous and unctuous nuts; but it is untrue that these aliens are the only class benefitted. The cultivation of the nut is a home industry that is becoming the main source of revenue to the farmers in certain districts of the south and southwest that have been left behind in the march of material progress. This is the practical side. In asthetics, the dried and varnished branches of the vines with the pendant pods form curios equaling in value and interest those sprays of cotton balls that are universal souvenirs of southern travel. Unlike the cotton plant, the peanut vine is a rare object in parlor decoration; and a wide field stretches before the daring innovation. The nuts are easily gilded, and have the same artistic rank as clothes-pins, flat-irons, or sauce-pans. After carefully weighing all these reasons, will not a verdict be rendered for the peanut as our "national nut?"

A KNIFE

in the hand of a Surgeon gives you a feeling of horror and dread. There is no longer necessity for its use in many diseases formerly regarded as incurable without cutting.

The Triumph of Conservative Surgery is well illustrated by the fact that

RUPTURE or Breach, is now radically cured without the knife and without pain. Clumsy, chafing trusses can be thrown away! They never cure but often induce inflammation, strangulation and death.

TUMORS Ovarian, Fibroid (Uterine) and many others, are now removed without the perils of cutting operations.

PILE TUMORS, however large, Fistula and other diseases of the lower bowel, are permanently cured without pain or resort to the knife.

STONE in the Bladder, no matter how large, is crushed, pulverized, washed out and perfectly removed without cutting.

STRICTURE of Urinary Passage is also removed without cutting in hundreds of cases. For pamphlet, references and all particulars, send 10 cents (in stamps) to World's Dispensary Medical Association, No. 663 Main Street, Buffalo, N. Y.

THE ARTIST'S CORNER.

GREEK sculptors often used eyes of glass or crystal in the faces of their statues.

THE oldest existing statue is one of wood, admirably modeled, colored and with eyes of crystal. It is of a man named Ra-em-ke, an Egyptian, and dating from about B. C. 4000.

THE early representations of Christ in painting were purposely devoid of all attraction; in the eighth century Adrian I. decreed that Christ should be represented as beautiful as possible.

IN the vatican at Rome there is a marble statue with natural eyelashes, the only one with this peculiarity in the world. It represents Ariadne sleeping on the island of Naxos at the moment she was deserted by Theseus.

IN modeling the horse for his equestrian statue of Gen. Grant, for the Union League club, of Brooklyn, the sculptor, William Ordway Partridge, has had casts made from a living charger kept at his country home in Milton, Mass., where he is at work.

The Coup d'Etat of 1851.

When the sun rose on France, December 2d, 1851, it saw a constitutional republic; when it set, absolute monarchy held Paris and the nation in a grip that was not relaxed for twenty years. Trading upon the reputation of "mon oncle," and aided by political adventurers who loved power better than country, Louis Napoleon made himself master of France. He dreamed of founding a new dynasty, and thought the Empire was built on a rock. Less than twenty years after he was a defeated exile, his only refuge in "perfidious Albion." And yet this change of twenty years was only the crushing of an individual who had dared to rear his head nearer the stars than the Destinies intended for him. In twenty years the Republic on whose borders he meditated conquest in 1863, had grown from twenty to forty millions of people, had fought a great civil war, and was filling up, by aid of thousands of miles of railroad, the great West, with a population and a promise of growth which Napoleon's dreams never could equal. To understand this great West, travel by the Burlington Route through the ten states it links together. Tickets can be had of any railroad agent, or write to W. J. C. Kenyon, Gen. Pass. Agent, St. Paul, Minn.

KNOWLEDGE

Brings comfort and improvement and tends to personal enjoyment when rightly used. The many, who live better than others and enjoy life more, with less expenditure, by more promptly adapting the world's best products to the needs of physical being, will attest the value to health of the pure liquid laxative principles embraced in the remedy, Syrup of Figs.

Its excellence is due to its presenting in the form most acceptable and pleasant to the taste, the refreshing and truly beneficial properties of a perfect laxative; effectually cleansing the system, dispelling colds, headaches and fevers and permanently curing constipation. It has given satisfaction to millions and met with the approval of the medical profession, because it acts on the Kidneys, Liver and Bowels without weakening them and it is perfectly free from every objectionable substance.

Syrup of Figs is for sale by all druggists in 50c and $1 bottles, but it is manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co. only, whose name is printed on every package, also the name, Syrup of Figs, and being well informed, you will not accept any substitute if offered.

The eves drip over the sidewalk and almost every afternoon while the roof is covered with snow the water will come down and freeze on the sidewalk. The property is owned by parties amply able to prevent this. An eves trough along the west side of the building with provision for carrying the water to the outside of the sidewalk into the gutter that should be there would, more than likely, save the village many dollars, some trouble, and prevent much swearing and evil thoughts by those who travel over the now almost impassible piece of walk. If our village committee on sidewalks will attend to the matter at once, also to preparing several broken boards in other places they will have the thanks of many citizens.

County Cullings.

Woodland has a belt that is proving rather broad and considerably gritty for the Waverly Tanner to handle. Broaden out your machinery brother, and strengthen the weak places and tell the young man plainly what he wants to know.

Sammy Longfellow and Den Holler have been arrested for taking things from the house of Mrs. Remmington. They will be held at Buffalo next month before Judge Russel.—Wright County Times.

Lawyer Sexton—may his shadow never grow less—while the great debate regarding the repeal measure was going on in the U. S. senate, sent Senator Stewart a question from John B. Gough on the "rights of a minority." Yesterday he received from the senator a neat and appropriate autograph letter of thanks for his in the question and words of cheer for those who are waging the silver fight.—Cokato Commoner.

Some of our county papers have been quoting from the Mille Lac County Times that we need not fear being obliged to vote for A. Y. Eaton for Congress on the Democratic ticket. The Times, evidently, is not so well acquainted with A. Y. as we are here at home. Although he is a Republican State Senator he got there on the Democratic ticket, and knowing these facts we fail to see, if the same combinations can be worked in a little bigger circle, why the Hon. A. Y. Eaton may not be the Democratic nominee to represent the Congressional district extending from Delano to Duluth. It is well enouth to be on the look out in time at all events. We had just as soon see the Republican Senator become our Republican Congressman if we are to have one as any one we know of. But would much prefer a good Democrat on a straight Democratic ticket.

The Republican editors of Wright county don't seem to harmonize for some reason or another. Each seems to be of the opinion that "every tub should stand on its own bottom" and that no ooportunity is allowed to escape, for each to twit, hector or find fault with the other is well known to accuse each other of lying, receiving bribes and almost everything else that is disagreeable or disgraceful in an editor, is a common thing, of almost weekly occurrence. If people believe these organs, these mouth-pieces of the party, these would-be moulders of public opinion, they believe very hard things to swallow and uphold. If each editor is as bad as his neighbor makes him out, they are a very hard lot, a despicable crowd, and their organs are unfit to be read by a civilized public. If any of them or all of them are lying it is about time the public had made up its mind to that effect and taken proper action in the matter. It looks as if at least some of them are in a dilemma.

List of Patents.

Nelson, St. Paul, Bailing press; I. G. Richardson, Minneapolis, wall desk, A. E. Voen, Brainerd, shot gun wad; J. Wannberg & O. Liedstrom, Fertile, automatic wagon brake.

Personals.

C. H. Kerrick has got back from South Dak.

Ignatius Gutzwiller, Jr. spent Tuesday in his room, being one of the sick.

A. F. Corey, who is teaching near Cokato, came home for Thanksgiving.

Chris Smith and family and Katie Cramer, of the Flour City, came up for Thanksgiving.

Miss Hattie Rausch, of Howard Lake came down on Thanksgiving day for a visit with old Delano friends.

One of Carver county's portly Legislators, of Watertown, was Boylan around Delano on Thanksgiving day.

John McGary, of Independence was in town Wednesday looking for a chance to purchase a pair of bob-sleighs.

Miss Jennie Young, of Ashland, Wis., spent Thanksgiving day with Delano friends. She has been at Morris the past three weeks.

Mrs. M. C. Johnson and daughter Kittie left Tuesday morning for St. Cloud, to spend the holidays with her son Willis E. and family.

Mesdames Miranda Chance and Minerva Mulford spent several days in Minneapolis this week guests of their brother Mr. Webb.

Charley Cunningham, who is working at his trade in the Flour city came home on Saturday evening and visited relatives and friends over Sunday.

Rev. and Mrs. J. R. Davies, of Brooklyn Center, visited Delano on Tuesday. Mr. D. informed us that the prospects for a revival on his charge are good.

Ebenezer Brandon and wife contemplate visiting Washington soon. Mrs. B. favors holding the farm here until they see how they like that country. A wise plan.

Dr. Dunn, of Minneapolis, passed through town on Thursday, on his way to Waverly, to operate for the removal of a tumor for Mrs. Hutz, housekeeper for Rev. Guillot

Mr. Levi Lamson, of Minneapolis, our County Auditor's father, formerly from the Land of wooden nut-megs and now hustler for the Penny-Press made us a pleasant visit Tuesday.

Messrs John Knight, Dave Gorman, C. H. Dart, J. S. Shields, H. S. McMonagle, J. M. Learn and J. D. Hayford, of Litchfield, as pall-bearers accompanied the funeral of L. H. Rawson to Rockford on Tuesday.

Harry Halgren, P. E. (which means Physician in Embryo,) of the State University, tarried in our village Tuesday night on his way home to assist in dissecting the family Thanksgiving turkey. Harry is authority on Anatomy; especially of such subjects.

citizen. I wish more men had the courage to stand up and denounce a wrong when they see it. Every man who keeps his saloon open on Sunday commits a crime and in the eyes of the law is a criminal and the man who uses his position to aid or protect them in their crime is doubly criminal because he violates his oath of office to enforce the law and is an abetor of criminals.

AJAX

An Internantional Congress.

The effects of experimental legislation were never more clearly felt than today. The motives of our legislators have not been high enough and the channel of public thought broad enough to result in universal prosperity. These hard times have produced a great deal of intelligent thinking among the classes and masses. The ruling law of supply and demand was written for us.

The long political sleep and dream of public happiness has been broken by a chill, and as the characters of great men are firmly moulded by the rough hands of adversity, so does adversity teach nations just where the leak is in the great ship of State.

Nations seem very much allied to individuals. They have their selfish interests and motives. There are national hermits, for instance China. For hundreds of years shut up herself, has given a race so debased and so licentious they are unfit for hell itself. As war is the growth of jealousies, and ignorance, and barbarism, so is the preparation for war the work of superstition and jealousy.

The expense of all war preparation is the breach of all peace.

The march of time brings us forward when we may contemplate a Supreme Court of Nations where national disputes, forever arising, may be forever peacfully ending. In our own Republic when our Ship of State is repaired every four years, when the people have taken out its Republican ribs and put in Democratic ones instead, when they say we must hire a new Captain for the long voyage, when the financial storm has burst, then has Ship of State plunged and lurched and then has the Democratic ribs creaked and bent, while the captain tugged manfully at the helm.—

H. E. CRANDALL.

INDEPENDENCE INCIDENTS.

MR. EDITOR: All things continue as they were from the beginning, that is beginning of hard times. The repeal bill and McKinley election has brought no material change in the financial condition of the country, if there is any change its only imaginary. The hard times and the stringency of the money market have all been assessed to the party now in power (democrats) Many who preach this doctrine have no political scripture for it, but try to make themselves believe it for a purpose, and to create an effect.

In last weeks issue of the GAZETTE there was an article from some lone scribe who took an exception to something I had previously said in the GAZETTE in regard to bonds. Single gold standard etc. As to his first paragraph, I had no intention of calling everybody robbers, thieves, etc., but must say, I believe a large per cent of our leading politicians are dishonest, and that is one cause of so much trouble in our national affairs.

"Woe unto ye Scribes and Pharysees, hypocrits, for ye devour widows houses and for a pretence make long prayers."

We believe it was right and proper to repeal the purchasing clause of the Sherman act, and yet that was not what was killing the country. There was, and is, enthroned behind all this fuss and squabble about the silver purchasing clause something of more vital importance to the monied class, bankers, bond-holders, etc. It seems to me any one who has read up and kept pace with the political proceadings of this country for the past 30 years can't help but see things are not as they should be.

My friend says in his argument it is a right thing to have a single gold standard. Then it is right to let one class rob another. For 80 years silver was at a parity with gold, and the country was never more prosperous. In 1873 a Republican Congress demonetized silver, when it was worth a premium of 3 per cent. Up to 1874 there was more gold produced in this country than there was silver but since then silver has taken the lead. Now if silver was the scarcer metal they would want a single silver standard and demonatize gold, for the scarcer metal can be easily controlled by the money power. It seems that my friend looks through a glass darkly.

Suppose this country establishes the single gold standard, and that is what England and Wall street want. It will be all right for the man who makes a business of loaning money, but how will it be with the man who must mortgage his farm for a loan. All obligations of any great amount will be made payable in gold, the money lender will tell you gold is scarce, and you will be forced to pay a premium in order to get the money to pay your obligation. In this way the pockets of the monied will be filled and yours will be emptied. Now all this is just what England and Wall street want.

In regard to government bonds. If I am right, I think all of them run out in 1909, and why the bankers and money lenders want Congress to issue $200,000,000 or $300,000,000 more government bonds, it is to prepetuate the National banking system whereby this country may be furnished with a corporation cerrency. Suppose my friend wants to start a National bank. He would buy with greenbacks $100,000 worth of government bonds They would give him back $90,000 to do a banking business on, leaving 10 per cent on deposit. He would draw interest on the full $100,000 payable in gold, and yet have use of $90,000. For issuing his bank currency they charge him one per cent. Now, my friend, do not the people of the United States pay the interest on these bonds? What would you call this, a filching machine or an honest deal. All this is in consequence of our government having adopted the bond and national banking system instead of asserting its rights of sovereignty and issuing full legal tender Treasury notes as the money of the Government.

So our National banking system is based upon the debt of the country. Government bonds and England are a large share holder of our Government bonds.

And so the bank of England and Wall street and the money lenders want to perpetuate the National banking business of this country for their own aggrandizement.

Now if we adopt the single gold standard, and England should make a draw on this country for her bonds and stocks, which would be payable in gold, where would the poor of this country be? If this would not create a Lazarous house in this country will some one please tell me what would? How many today in this fair land of ours, boasted America, are pinched from cold and hunger, their intellect blighted and their body deformed for want of proper food and clothing? What we want is equal rights to all and special privileges to none.

While we hear so much about gold and the single gold standard, I am reminded of the Golden Calf Aaron made in the wilderness for the children of Isarel to worship. It remins us that our people are becoming idol worshipers. But when Moses came down from the mount his wrath being kindled at what they had done, ground the golden calf into powder and strewed it upon the water, and made them drink of it and swallow their idol god that they ignorantly worshiped. Repealing the silver purchasing clause and electing McKinley Governor of Ohio will not save this country, we want legislation for the masses and not for the classes. The banking bussness first originated in Italy, but the Jews have become the money lenders of the world. Gallileans love honor and the Jews money.

In 1873 silver was demonetized and in 1878 there was a bill brought up in Congress to restore the silver dollar of 412½ grains to its original place. President Hays vetoed the bill, but Congress finally passed it over his head. This was right. We read some where in Holy writ "The Lord has chosen the weak things of this world to confound the wise." Also "Out of the mouths of babes and sucklings, hast thou ordained strength because of thine enemies."

It would seem the plow boy knows more of the needs of this country than do some of our political leaders.

Give us gold, silver and Treasury currency, for the money of this country and the people will prosper.

TRUTH AND FASHION—AN ALLEGORY.

Truth, one day, confronting Fashion, said,
"Why dress in finery from foot to head?
Look upon me!—I nothing wear at all,
And, trust me, the convenience is not small."
"Yes," replied Fashion, "but your nakedness
Involves you in some scrapes, you must confess;
Whoe'er you visit, be he rich or poor,
In that scant costume shows you to the door."

Taken Up.

HOW A PUZZLE WAS SOLVED.

When you want a certain article, you want the best make of that article, don't you?

But how to determine which make is best is what puzzles you, isn't it?

And when the puzzle is solved for you, by authority which cannot be questioned, you are pleased, aren't you?

And you would like to hear of one puzzle that has been solved for the people of the whole world, wouldn't you?

Well, we will tell you about that very puzzle, and its solution.

At the Universal Exposition of 1889 at Paris, France, the best sewing machines of the world, including those of America, were in competition. They were passed upon by a jury composed of the best foreign mechanical experts, two of whom were the leading sewing machine manufacturers of France.

This jury, after exhaustive examination and tests, adjudged that the Wheeler & Wilson machines were the best of all, and awarded that company the highest prize offered, the GRAND PRIZE, giving other companies only gold, silver and bronze medals.

The French Government, as a further recognition of superiority, decorated Mr. Nathaniel Wheeler, president of the company, with the Cross of the Legion of Honor, the most prized honor of France.

That is how the puzzle of the best sewing machine in the world was fully solved by the most competent authority in the world in favor of the No. 9 and No. 12 Wheeler & Wilson machines.

The No. 9, for family use, and the No. 12, for manufacturing uses, are the best in the world to-day.

And now, when you want a sewing machine, if you do not get the best, it will be your own fault.

Ask your sewing machine dealer for the No. 9 Wheeler & Wilson machine, and if he does not keep them, write to us for descriptive catalogue, prices and terms.

A MASTER BUILDER.

The Truth is a builder that buildeth slow.
Yet builds exceedingly strong;
Each seeming inconsequent, trivial part
Is tried with a test of a master's art;
With the delicate touch of an artist's hand
The lightest and tinniest grain of sand
Is arranged in its place in that edifice grand
Whose architect never goes wrong.

The Truth is a builder that few may know,
The work is so wonderously still;
Noiselessly, ceaselessly delving the earth,
Selecting, inspecting each object of worth,
Exploring the depts of the sea and the air,
Or the reims of the infinite everywhere,
Treasure of value beyond compare
Is gatherered with consummate skill.

The Truth is a builder that buildeth slow,
Yet the edifice stands for aye;
With glittering records of warrior's deeds,
Bewildering rules of philosophers' creeds,
The dogmas of schools and political schemes,
Fanatical follies, enthusiasts' dreams,
And all of the rubbish with which the world teams,
As stubble has vanished away.

The Truth is a builder that few may know,
And yet all the world may see:
For tribute is levied at every one's door,
The weak and the humble each add to the store.

And in the great future how great the surprise
If we, as the shadows escape from our eyes,
Find the simple have often done more than the wise
In building that home for the free.

THE Minneapolis Menagerie seems liable to contain a Scheig and Floyd. But it is a Minneapolis Menagrie with the Menage left out, just the same.

JOHN SHERMAN, of Ohio, is right on deck whenever there is a colored woman around. Eliza Pinkerton, of Louisiana, Queen Lilioguonia, of Hawaii.

READ President Cleveland's message to Congress on the inside of this paper and see for yourself if he does not view the different subjects in about the right light.

Congressman Hall's speech on the repeal of the Sherman silver bill is being sent out from State Democratic Headquarters. It is interesting and to the point, as his speeches usually are.

YON YONSON, of the St. Peter Herald, says wait awhile before placing me so high on the pedestal of fame as the Governorship of this great State. Only another sympton of his fitness if not now, in the future.

THAT city editor who the other day intimated that Capt. John Smith married Pocahontas through pure gratefulnes, because she saved his life, had better interview a few of the news boys or school children on the subject.

IT looks at this distance as if those in Congress who are opposed to the Tariff Reformation, for any reason, if only to be on the opposite side from Grover Cleveland, intended to try by keeping up a hubbub about some other subject to stave off action on the question from time to time until they can compass the defeat of the bill altogether. Tariff reform is what you are there for. Attend to your business and you will satisfy your constituency.

IN case some Democrats oppose the new Wilson Tariff bill on account of its effecting some local interests there will doubtless be enough Republicans who feel as did Congressman Neidringhouse who wanted borax on the free list because he used it in his business, Mark Dunnell, of Minnesota, who wanted tariff on crockery reduced, or Mr. Pillsbury, of Minneapolis, who a few years ago thought he paid enough tariff on grain bags to run all the factories in the country, or something to that effect, to help out the Democrats who stand by their convictions to pass the bill. We do not like such narrow minded views, but some times, one set of this kind offsets the other and prevents a straight party measure from being passed by straight party votes and satisfies some people better.

PRESIDENT CLEVELAND strikes the key note in his Message when he says, "The local interests affected by the proposed reform, are so numerous and so varied that if all are insisted upon the legislation embodying the reform must inevitably fail." If legislators form the different sections of the country can see no farther than the interests of a few influential men in their districts or perhaps no further than their own pocket books extend, and vote against a bill which in its entirety they admit is good, simply because some one or two articles in their district is going to be put on an equilibrum with those of the entire world, placed on the free list, of course the bill must fail of passage. But if true to their beliefs and the doctrines of the party that sent them to Washington they vote for a tariff bill that will aid the nation, regardless of local interests they will begin to loom up among Statesmen. To measure with men.

Quarantine.

Quarantine laws have been made for the control of contagious and infectious diseases. These are not, as some seem to think, for the purpose of making trouble to those in whose houses these diseases happen to be. Neither should neighbors regard those whose houses are quarantined as so many savage beasts, to be shuned as so many tigers or lions. It often happens that people are placed under strict quarantine when they have little, or no, money in the house, and if they have money they are not allowed to send it out to buy necessaries, or any thing else. They often have but little provisions on hand and can not well get what they want, at all times. Though they have a man to run errands for them they do not always feel like asking him to buy goods for them on credit. Even if they have plenty of goods in the house, and several members of the family are in bed, perhaps in a few small rooms the chances for cooking are not good. The patients do not like the smell of food being cooked; the friends are worn out with watching with the sick and are not in a condition to cook; and at the very time when both patients and nurses should be regularly supplied with good nourishing food, properly cooked, they all suffer for the want of it. If neighbors would at this time club together and contribute a little of their abundance of properly cooked, good, nourishing food for a few meals, they might often aid in restoring to health the sick, and perhaps prevent many worn out nurses from succumbing to the dread diseases they are called on to care for. Any family is liable to disease and to be quaranined. There is nothing disgraceful about it, though it may be disagreeable to those required to seclude themselves for a few weeks from society and business. It is the only way of stopping epidemics of these diseases for which it is used, and even with the strictest attention to details sometimes it does not succeed. Only those who have had experience know what it is to be quarantined and there are enough of these now in every community, to appreciate the situation and to know what would be of the most service tothe afflicted, and by apprising others of the facts their assistance can be easily obtained to render aid where it is timely and of a vast benefit to the recipiants, and possibly to the entire community, by aiding in cutting short the epidemic. Don't carry in a lot of rich cakes or poorly cooked articles but plain, nourishing food, cooked properly, so that it will not injure the patients. It is well to consult the attending physician as to what is best suited for eatables. Most sick people will eat a little from a neighbors table when they are tired of home fare, even though it be of the best.

From California.

Your correspondent arrived here on the 19 inst, after a tedious journey of five days from St. Paul, passing through various temperatures and climates which seemed to go by contraries. Through Missouri and Kansas (Santa Fe Route) the journey was accompanied with bright sunshine and balmy breezes. A great disappointment was experienced next morning on waking up in Colorado in not finding a renewal of the previous days weather as anticipated from the general reputation of Colorado as a sunny clime finding instead an overcast sky and a chilly air wafting snow flakes across the treeless plains. At Trinadad and on the mountains immediately beyond there were spots of snow several inches deep, and passing on through New Mexico and Arizona the heavens continued to be overcast, with short intervals of sunshine alternating with flurries of snow and after passing Flagstaff, Arizona on the fourth day of the journey the train passed throrgh a mountain tract covered with about ten inches of snow on an elevation of about 6,000 feet, so that a cool atmosphere with patches of snow in sight continued until the Valley of San Bernardino was entered where a warmer temperatur with sunshine was met. Acording to signal service report the train had passed through a cold wave, at least that is the term we apply to such weather in Minneasota. From San Bernado to this place warm sunny weather prevailed which has continued to the present despite the fact that the time for the rainy season of California is at hand. Flowers are in bloom, the peculiar trees of this state are covered with a green foliage and ripening fruits amongst which are oranges, figs and other kinds.

Los Angeles has the appearance of a growing city and on a first observation it would seem to compare favorably with the Twin Cities of Minnesota, according to its population, supposed to be from 50,000 to 100,000. There are many Minnesotians here. Visitors from Minnesota will find Minnesota Head Quarters at the office of K. P. Cullen & Co., 237 First street. These are former St. Paul people, Mr Cullen is a brother of Hon. O. O. Cullen, of St. Paul, and his partner is Mr. Mc Evoy a former express agent who ran on the Main Line of the St. P. & P. R, R. during its existence making daily trips through Delano in those days and doubtless many citizens of your town will recollect him. These gentlemen have not forgotten their Minneasota associations. They give a cordial welcome and are free to extend courtesies to all visitors from the North Star State.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

(From our Regular Correspondent.)

WASHINGTON, D. C., Dec. 1, 1893.

President Cleveland did not eat his Thanksgiving day dinner at the White House, although the steward had obtained a forty pound turkey for the occasion. He and Mrs. Cleveland dined with Postmaster General and Mrs. Bissell, as did Secretary and Mrs. Carlisle, although it was an innovation for the President and his wife to dine with a member of the cabinet, except at a regular cabinet dinner.

The new tariff bill is the principal topic of conversation among Congressmen, now quite plentiful in Washington, and becoming more so upon the arrival of every train. There is much less "kicking" among democrats than the members of the committee expected, and very much less than existed among republicans after the publication of the McKinley bill. The fact is generally recognized by democrats that the Wilson bill is one that will in the end be generally beneficial to the entire country, although like most great reforms it will necessarily carry temporary hardship to some individuals, and that is really where the great strength of the bill lies; it is a tariff bill for the many, not for the few. The democrats who framed it are true believers in the doctrine of the greatest good to the greatest number. The republicans who in disparagement of the bill said it was built upon the lines of the Walker tariff of 1846 could hardly have given the bill greater praise, as the Walker tariff was one of the best the country ever had, and the people of all classes were never more prosperous than while it was in existence.

President Cleveland has congratulated the democrats of the Ways and Means committee upon the statesmanlike manner in which they prepared the tariff bill in several instances members voting to put articles on the free list, such as iron ore, coal and silver lead ore, that their constituents would have preferred having kept on the dutiable list and in his message to Congress he will officially commend their work and urge that the bill be speedily passed.

The democrats of the committee on Ways and Means are now at work upon the internal revenue bill which will furnish the revenue that will be lost by reforming the tariff. It is estimated that this loss will be some where between $50,000,000 and $50,000,000 a year. The democrats of the committee have but one thought in preparing this bill, and that is, to impose the taxes in such a manner that they will bear the lightest upon those who have to work for their living, and as they are all men of wide experience and great ability they will doubtless report a satisfactory bill.

Postmaster General Bissell has not announced whether he considers it proper and advisable to accept the bid submitted by the Bureau of Engraving and Printing for printing the postage stamps that will be required next year, but the other fellows are getting frightened and are getting such of the local papers as are opened to such subsidized matter with so-called arguments against the government printing its own postage stamps. These arguments which are but a repetition of those brought forward, (when the people began to discuss the question of the government printing its own money) by the agents of the various bank note companies which had grown rich by printing government currency. They are simply absurd, and if there are no legal obstacles it is probable that General Bissell will accept the bid of the Bureau of Printing and Engraving, which is $169,000 below that of the lowest private bidder. Even if the work could not be done any cheaper it is more fitting that the postage stamps should be printed by the government.

The peremtory removal of Mr. Geo. D. Johnson, of Louisiana, the only democratic member of the Civil Service Commission, by President Cleveland was surprising and has been the basis of no end of gossip. No official reason has been given out for the removal and it is not at all probable that any will be given out, and it comes from good authority that the cause of Mr. Johnson's removal was not discreditable to him, as a man or a democrat. He will be succeeded by Prof. J. R. Proctor, of Kentucky, and Commissioner Lyman whose removal has been, I am told, fully determined upon, by a democrat. There is ample cause for Lyman's removal, in the report of a congressional committee to President Harrison, and he probably owes his retention in office this long, as many other republicans do, to the fact that President Cleveland has been constantly overwhelmed with more important duties than the election of successors to minor officials. But unless all signs are misleading, the most of the republicans will go before the flowers bloom again.

MINNEAPOLIS MENTIONINGS.

MINNEAPOLIS, Dec. 4.

In an editorial in the Minneapolis Times of Nov. 28, entitled, "The Letter of the Law," the editor champions the cause of Mayor Eustis and offers what seems flimsy proofs from so strong a paper of the justness of his position. He says: "The law provides for the closing of saloons on Sunday. Therefore, they must be shut up and the law enforced to its very letter, without regard to the inevitable effect of such enforcement upon either the moral or material interests of the city." The morals about an open saloon, at least such as I have seen, are, to say the least, of a very questionable character, hence, a closed saloon could not hurt the morals of the city because the general idea is that the stopping of what is bad makes things better. If our Health Officer finds a glandered horse which is liable to spread infection in the community in which he is found his duty is to at once get rid of it without regard to the value of the horse. The only material interests of the city that the closing of the saloon on Sunday could effect would be to cut down the sales of the saloon keeper and make richer his customers. Again "The Mayor whose business it is to interpret and administer the law for the best interests of the whole community, is to be allowed no discretion whatever."

Is it the mayor's business to interpret the law? If so, what is the power of the Judiciary? My understanding is that the Judiciary interprets the law, but granting that the mayor has the power to interpret the law. Is it not true that the interpretation must be somewhat in the line of the object of the law? Now our legislature discussed and passed an act saying the saloons must be closed on Sunday, the Governor signed it and it became a law. Is the refusal of the mayor to execute that law an interpretation of the law? Is it not rather a denying the law? Our Legislature and Governor say that is it for the best interests of the community that the saloons be closed on Sunday. Our mayor says it is not, all laws interpreted in this way would mean the exact opposite of what they state. The editor quotes from Blackstone as follows: "The public weal is the highest law." This is unquestionably true, but who is to be the judge of what is the public weal? The body of men who makes the laws or the executive officer who executes them? Who does Blackstone say? Who does the judges on the bench say? The mayor insists that in this case he is administering the law with this principal in view: "How can a man adminster a law by not administering it."

Thanksgiving day has come and gone and was pretty generally observed. It has left some pleasant memories and to some glad hearts. A few generous acts came to my notice and no doubt many others occured which ought to make the giver's Thanksgiving much more happy as well as the receiver's. Mr. Way, of the Minneapolis Furniture Co. gave a handsome turkey to each one of his employees, giving in all 27 turkeys. The Minneapolis Journal deserves a good deal of praise for the establishing of the annual dinner to the news boys. Their Thanksgiving dinner at the West House on last Thursday will be an occasion in their lives never forgotten. Little acts of generosity like these show that everybody is not entirely selfish. That within the heart of man there is a desire for the happiness of his fellow man. Many poor people of this city will be clothed and cared for by the churches during the winter, many that are sick will be treated and cared for by the free dispensaries, and with all this yet there will be some suffer because of their pride. One of the pleasant events of Thanksgiving eve was an entertainment given at the College of Physicians and Surgeons by the students of that institution. There was music, recitations, dancing and a bountiful repast. Everybody was well pleased and voted the students of that college to be gentlemen and scholars.

THE extra session of congress cost Uncle Sam about $3,300,000.

THERE are now 530 lines of electric street railroads in this country, using 7,500 miles of track and 17,000 cars, and capitalized at $135,000,000. This is an enterprise, that has all developed within a single decade.

THE term "boodler" has received a judicial definition in Montreal, where, in confirming the judgment of a lower court that awarded $500 damages to a plaintiff who had been called a boodler by the defendant, the court of review says "boodlers means the very meanest class of thieves."

LIGHT blue-eyed men rank highest in the experts on target shooting of the Colorado national guard, followed in their order by dark blue, slate blue, light brown, dark brown and black In the colored troops light blue eyes again stand at the top. Tall men shoot more accurately than short men.

BOSTON is to mark the historic scenes of the throwing overboard of the tea into Boston harbor by a bronze tablet. The tablet measures five feet by three, and is a bas-relief representing a full rigged ship, from which men are throwing overboard boxes of tea. Tea chests and tea leaves form the border.

THIS season's orange crop in Florida is much above the average in quantity, being estimated at 5,000,000 boxes, and is much earlier than usual. While during the whole of last season some 58,000 boxes were shipped through Savannah to New York, more than 83,000 boxes have already been shipped there this year.

THE movement against child labor is making progress in various states, and particularly in Massachusetts. The past year the police found only 253 children under fourteen years of age at work in Bay state factories in violation of law, a decrease from the previous year, when seven times as many were found.

IRVING BLOUNT, who has entered the Brazilian service as one of the officers of El Cid, was formerly a cadet at the Naval academy. He was appointed a cadet from Indiana on September 6, 1887, passed the requisite academic course, performed service at sea prior to final graduation and resigned on June 30 last.

A GREAT London merchant is said to use the phonograph every day to save the time in which he drives to his office. The instrument is put in his carriage and on the way into the city he talks instructions into it. At his office the phonograph is handed over to the head clerk, who makes it repeat what it has just learned.

EIGHT cars loaded with human hair arrived in Paris recently, consigned to dealers in that merchandise. The hair came from India and China, whence thousands of pounds are annually sent to England and France. This traffic, a foreign medical journal says, is the cause of the introduction of many of the diseases to Europe.

THE smokeless powder is not proving such an unadulterated success in Europe as was looked for. It is said that at least 500 Italian steel field pieces have been ruined by the use of this new explosive. If field pieces are thus destroyed in ordinary practice with the smokeless, the guns would hardly do for war. The party using the old-fashioned gunpowder would have all the advantage.

SIR BENJAMIN RICHARDSON, the eminent London physician, has expressed the opinion that bicycling is very injurious. He says that while riding the machine the spine of the rider becomes almost an arch; the chest bone is then affected by the unnatural pressure, circulation is impaired, and no doubt the lungs are interfered with, too. In fact, there is hardly any possible evil effect it does not produce.

AS A result of the modern discovery and investigation of microbes, it has been found that next to air in motion flies are the most active agents in the spread of those animalcules that constantly threaten the lives of the human family. There is the authority of a celebrated Russian physician named Sawtschenko, who has literally been delving into flies, that during a siege of Asiatic cholera no agent is so active in the spread of the dread malady as are flies.

THE respiration apparatus invented by Prof. Voit, of Germany, has been received by the Yale college medical school. Its purpose is to measure the oxygen absorbed by the body and the carbonic acid and water given off. From the data thus obtained, the decomposition of the body can be determined, and the decomposition caused by the digestion of the various kinds of food compared. It is hoped that the experiment will result in the selection of diets that will prolong the lives of those suffering from consumption and other diseases.

AN Italian artist of some note in his own country, who came over to see the World's fair, and who made a study of American pictures and landscape while in the eastern states, has gone home full of surprise at the American painters who look to Europe for subjects. He told a New York man that he was coming back to America next spring to paint American landscape. There was nothing on the Mediterranean, he said, that impressed him as much as the bold rocks, windy moors and tangled woods of Cape Ann, and our clean, white country villages he pronounced to be charming.

TO UNDERSTAND the way to rest, says the American Analyst, is of more importance than to know how to work. The former it takes years to learn. It is simply a change of scenes and activities. Loafing may not be resting. Sleeping is not always resting. Sitting down for days with nothing to do is not restful. A change is needed to bring into play a different set of faculties and to turn the life into a new channel. The man who works hard finds his best rest in playing hard. The man who is burdened with care finds relief in something that is active, yet free from responsibility.

NATIONAL AFFAIRS.

President Cleveland's Annual Message to Congress.

Hawaiian Affairs to Be the Subject of a Special Message.

Effect of the Repeal of the Silver Purchasing Clause.

A Reform of the Tariff Policy an Absolute Necessity.

A LENGTHY DOCUMENT.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 4. — President Cleveland transmitted his message to congress to-day. He begins by saying:

The constitutional duty which requires the president from time to time to give to the congress information of the state of the union, and recommend to their consideration such measures as he shall judge necessary and expedient, is fittingly entered upon by commending to the congress a careful examination of the detailed statements and well supported recommendations contained in the reports of the heads of departments, who are chiefly charged with the executive work of the government.

Peaceful Foreign Relations.

While our foreign relations have not at all times during the past year been entirely free from perplexity, no embarrassing situations remain that will not yield to the spirit of fairness and love of justice, which, joined with consistent firmness, characterize a truly American foreign policy.

Chinese Registration.

The legislation of last year, known as the Geary law, requiring the registration of all Chinese laborers entitled to residence in the United States, and the deportation of all not complying with the provisions of the act within the time prescribed, met with much opposition from Chinamen in this country. Acting upon the advice of eminent counsel that the law was unconstitutional, the great mass of Chinese laborers, pending judicial inquiry as to its validity, in good faith declined to apply for the certificates required by its provisions. A test case upon pro eedding by habeas corpus was brought before the supreme court, and on May 15, 1893, a decision was made by that tribunal sustaining the law. It is believed that under the recent amendment of the act extending the time for registration the Chinese laborers thereto entitled who desire to reside in this country will now avail themselves of the renewed privilege thus afforded of establishing by lawful procedure their right to remain, and that thereby the necessity of enforced deportation may to a great degree be avoided.

The French Republic.

Our relations with the French republic continue to be intimate and cordial. I sincerely hope that the extradition treaty with that country, as amended by the senate, will soon be operative.

Germany.

While occasional questions, affecting our naturalized citizens returning to the land of their birth, have arisen in our intercourse with Germany, our relations with that country continue satisfactory.

Great Britain.

The questions affecting our relations with Great Britain have been treated in a spirit of friendliness. Negotiations are in progress between the two governments with a view to such concurrent action as will make the award and regulations agreed upon by the Behring seas tribunal of arbitration practically effective; and it is not doubted that Great Britain will cooperate freely with this country for the accomplishment of that purpose. The dispute growing out of the discriminating tolls imposed in the Welland canal, upon cargoes of cereals bound to and from the lake ports of the United States, was adjusted by the substitution of a more equitable schedule of charges, and my predecessor thereupon suspended his proclamation imposing discriminating tolls upon British transit through our canals. A request for additions to the list of extraditable offenses covered by the existing treaty between the two countries is under consideration.

Honduras.

It is confidently anticipated that a satisfactory adjustment will soon be reached of the questions arising out of the seizure and use of American vessels by insurgents in Honduras and the subsequent denial by the successful government of commercial privileges to those vessels on that account.

Mexico.

Our relations with Mexico continue to be of that close and friendly nature which should always characterize the intercourse of two neighboring republics. The work of relocating the monuments marking the boundary between the countries from Paso del Norte to the Pacific is now nearly completed. The commission recently organized under the convention of 1889 and 1891 it is expected will speedily settle disputes growing out of the shifting currents of the Rio Grande river east of El Paso.

Nicaragua and Guatemala.

Nicaragua has recently passed through two revolutions, the party at first successful having in turn been displaced by the action of a newly-appointed minister, by his timely good offices, aided in a peaceful adjustment of the controversy involved in the first conflict. The large American interests established in that country in connection with the Nicaragua canal were not molested. The canal company has, unfortunately, become financially seriously embarrassed, but a generous treatment has been extended to it by the government of Nicaragua. The United States are especially interested in the successful achievement of the vast undertaking this company has in charge. That it should be accomplished under distinctively American auspices, and its enjoyment assured, not only to the vessels of this country as a channel of communication between our Atlantic and Pacific seaboards, but to the vessels of the world in the interests of civilization, is a proposition which, in my judgment, does not admit of question.

Guatemala has also been visited by the political vicissitudes which have afflicted her Central American neighbors, but the dissolution of her legislature and the proclamation of a dictatorship have been unattended with civil war.

Extradition with Norway and Russia.

An extradition treaty with Norway has recently been proclaimed and exchanged.

The extradition treaty with Russia, signed in March, 1887, and amended and confirmed by the senate in February last, was duly proclaimed last June.

Relations with Spain.

More than fifteen years ago this government preferred a claim against Spain in behalf of one of our citizens, for property seized and confiscated in Cuba. In 1886 the claim was adjusted, Spain agreeing to pay, unconditionally, as a fair indemnity, $1,500,000. An earnest note was recently addressed to the Spanish government insisting upon prompt fulfillment of its long-neglected obligation. Other claims preferred by the United States against Spain, in behalf of American citizens for property confiscated in Cuba, have been pending for many years.

The reproduced caravel, Santa Maria, built by Spain and sent to the Columbian exposition, has been presented to the United States in token of amity and in commemoration of the event it was designed to celebrate. I recommend that, in accepting this gift, congress make grateful recognition of the sincere friendship which prompted it.

The Outrages in Turkey.

Important matters have demanded attention in our relations with the Ottoman porte. The firing and partial destruction by an unrestrained mob, of one of the school buildings of Anatolia college, established by citizens of the United States at Marsovan, and the apparent indifference of the Turkish government to the outrage, notwithstanding the complicity of some of its officials, called for earnest remonstrance, which was followed by promises of reparation and punishment of the offenders. Indemnity for the injury to the buildings has already been paid, permission to rebuild given, registration of the school property in the name of the American owners secured, and efficient protection guaranteed.

Will Protect Armenians.

The right to exclude any or all classes of aliens is an attribute of sovereignty. It is a right asserted and, to a limited extent, enforced by the United States with the sanction of our highest court. There being no naturalization treaty between the United States and Turkey, our minister at Constantinople has been instructed that, while recognizing the right of that government to enforce its declared policy against naturalized Armenians, he is expected to protect them from unnecessary harshness of treatment.

Relations with Venezuela.

In view of the impaired financial resources of Venezuela, consequent upon the recent revolution there, a modified arrangement for the satisfaction of the awards of the late mixsory claims commission, in progressive installments, has been assented to and payments are being regularly made thereunder. The boundary dispute between Venezuela and British Guiana is yet unadjusted. A restoration of diplomatic intercourse between the republic and Great Britain and reference of the question to impartial arbitration, would be a most gratifying consummation. The ratification by Venezuela of the convention, or the arbitration of the long deferred claim of the Venezuelan transportation company, is awaited.

The Hawaiian Affair.

It is hardly necessary for me to state that the questions arising from our relations with Hawaii have caused serious embarrassment. Just prior to the installation of the present administration the existing government of Hawaii had been suddenly overthrown, and a treaty of annexation had been negotiated between the provisional government of the islands and the United States and submitted to the senate for ratification. This treaty I withdrew for examination, and dispatched Hon. James H. Blount, of Georgia, to Honolulu as a special commissioner to make an impartial investigation of the circumstances attending the change of government, and of all the conditions bearing upon the subject of the treaty. After a thorough and exhaustive examination Mr Blount submitted to me his report, showing beyond all question that the constitutional government of Hawaii had been subverted with the active aid of our representative to that government, and through the intimidation caused by the presence of an armed naval force of the United States which was landed for that purpose at the instance of our minister. Upon the facts developed it seemed to me the only honorable course for our government to pursue was to undo the wrong that had been done by those representing us and restore as far as practicable the status existing at the time of our forcible intervention. With a view of accomplishing this result within the constitutional limits of executive power, and recognizing all our obligations and responsibilities growing out of any changed conditions brought by our unjustifiable interference, our present minister at Honolulu has received appropriate instructions to that end.

A Special Message Forthcoming.

Thus far no information of the accomplishment of any definite results has been received from him. Additional advices are soon expected. When received they will be promptly sent to the congress, together with all other information at hand, accompanied by a special executive message fully detailing all the facts necessary to a complete understanding of the case, and presenting a history of all the material events leading up to the present situation.

Favorable to Arbitration.

By a concurrent resolution, passed by the senate February 14, 1890, and by the house of representatives on the 3d of April following, the president was requested to "invite, from time to time, as fit occasions may arise, negotiations with any government with which the United States has or may have diplomatic relations, to the end that any differences or disputes arising between the two governments which cannot be adjusted by diplomatic agency may be referred to arbitration and be peaceably adjusted by such means." April 18, 1890, the international American conference of Washington by resolution expressed the wish that all controversies between the republics of America and the nations of Europe might be settled by arbitration, and recommended that the government of each nation represented in that conference should communicate this wish to all friendly powers.

A favorable response has been received from Great Britain in the shape of a resolution adopted in parliament July 16 last, cordially sympathizing with the purpose in view, and expressing the hope that her majesty's government will lend ready cooperation to the government of the United States upon the basis of the concurrent resolution above quoted. It affords me signal pleasure to lay this parliamentary resolution before the congress, and to express my sincere gratification that the sentiment of two great and kindred nations is thus authoritatively manifest in favor of the rational and peaceable settlement of international quarrels by honorable resort to arbitration.

Financial Statement.

The secretary of the treasury reports that the receipts of the government from all sources during the fiscal year ending June 30, 1893, amounted to $461,716,561 94 and its expenditures to $459,374,674.29. There was collected from customs $2,5,3,5,016.73 and from internal revenue $161,027,623.93. Our dutiable imports amounted to $451,856,711, an increase of $57,443,907 over the preceding year, and importations free of duty amounted to $444,544,211, a decrease from the preceding year of $13,455,447. Internal revenue receipts exceeded those of the preceding year by $7,147,445.35.

The total tax collected on distilled spirits was $94,720,200 55; on manufactured tobacco, $31,889,711.74, and on fermented liquor, $32,548,983.07. We exported merchandise during the year amounting to $847,665,194, a decrease of $182,612,954, from the preceding year. The amount of gold exported was larger than any previous year in the history of the government, amounting to $108,680,844, and exceeding the amount exported during the preceding year by $58,485,517.

The sum paid from the treasury for sugar bounty was $9,375,130.88, an increase over the preceding year of $2,033,053 05.

Estimates.

It is estimated upon the basis of present revenue laws that the receipts of the government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1894, will be $431,121,355.38 and its expenditures $458,121,355.38, resulting in a deficiency of $28,000,0.0.

Our Circulation.

On the first day of November, 1893, the amount of money of all kinds in circulation, or not included in treasury holdings, was $1,718,544,-982, an increase of $7,506,632.58. There was also estimating our population at 67,426,000 at the time mentioned the per capita circulation was $25.49. On the same date there was in the treasury gold bullion amounting to $96,657,273 and silver bullion which was purchased at a cost of $126,261,551.

Silver Bullion Purchases.

The purchases of silver under the law of July 14, 1890, during the last fiscal year, aggregated 54,068,182.59 fine ounces, which cost $45,531,-374.53. The total amount of silver purchased from the time that law became operative until the repeal of its purchasing clause, on the 1st day of November, 1893, was $108,674,-500.46 fine ounces, which cost $155,930,-940.84. Between the 1st day of March, 1873, and the 1st day of November, 1893, the government purchased, under all laws, 543,-063,717 fine ounces of silver at a cost of $516,622,-948. The silver dollars that have been coined under the act of July 14, 1890, number 36,087,285. The seigniorage arising from such coinage was $6,977,098.39, leaving on hand in the mints 149,-659,760 fine ounces of silver, which cost $1.6,738,-218.

Coinage Statistics.

Our total coinage of all metals during the last fiscal year consisted of 97,281,875 pieces, valued at $43,685,178.80, of which there was $30,038,140 in gold coin, $5,343,715 in silver dollars, $7,217,230.90 in subsidiary silver coins and $1,086,102.90 in minor coins. During the calendar year 1892 the production of precious metals in the United States was estimated to be 1,596,375 fine ounces of gold of the commercial and coinage value of $33,009,000 and 58,000,000 mine ounces of silver of the bullion or market value of $50,-790,000 and of the coinage value of $74,989,980. It is estimated that on the 1st day of July, 1893, the metallic stock of money in the United States, consisting of coin and bullion, amounted to $1,213,359,169, of which $597,697,685 was gold and $615,861,484 was silver.

New and Suspended Banks.

One hundred and nineteen national banks were organized during the year ending October 31, 1893, with a capital of $11,230,000. Forty-six went into voluntary liquidation and 158 suspended. Sixty-five of the suspended banks were insolvent, eighty-six resumed business and seven remained in the hands of bank examiners, with prospects of speedy resumption.

Of the new banks organized forty-four were located in the eastern states, forty-one west of the Mississippi river and thirty-four in the central and southern states. The total number of national banks in existence on the 31st day of October, 1893, was 3,796, having an aggregate capital of $695,538,120. Net increase in the circulation of these banks during the year was $30,988,372.

Repeal of the Silver Purchasing Clause.

The recent repeal of the provisions of law requiring the purchase of silver bullion by the government as a feature of our monetary scheme has made an entire change in the complexion of our currency affairs. I do not doubt that the ultimate result of this action will be most salutary and far reaching. In the nature of things, however, it is impossible to know at this time precisely what conditions will be brought about by the change, or what, if any, supplementary legislation may, in the light of such conditions, appear to be essential or expedient.

Confident of the Future.

Of course, after the recent financial perturbation, time is necessary for the reestablishment of business confidence. When, however, through this restored confidence the money which has been frightened into hoarding places is returned to trade and enterprise, a survey of the situation will probably disclose a safe path leading to a permanently sound currency, abundantly sufficient to meet every requirement of our increasing population and business. In the pursuit of this object we should resolutely turn away from alluring and temporary expedients, determined to be content with nothing less than a lasting and comprehensive financial plan. In these circumstances I am convinced that a reasonable delay in dealing with this subject, instead of being injurious, will increase the probability of wise action.

The Monetary Conference.

The monetary conference which assembled at Brussels upon our invitation was adjourned to the 30th day of November in the present year. The considerations just stated and the fact that a definite proposition from us seemed to be expected upon the reassembling of the conference led me to express a willingness to have the meeting still further postponed. It seems to me that it would be wise to give general authority to the president to invite other nations to such a conference at any time when there should be a fair prospect of accomplishing an international agreement on the subject of coinage.

Recommendation Regarding Bonds.

I desire also to earnestly suggest the wisdom of amending the existing statutes in regard to the issuance of government bonds. The authority now vested in the secretary of the treasury to issue bonds is not as clear as it should be, and the bonds authorized are disadvantageous to the government both as to the time of their maturity and rate of interest.

The War Department.

The secretary of war reports that the strength of the army on the 30th day of September last was 25,778 enlisted men and 2,144 officers. The total expenditure of the department for the year ending June 30, 1893, amounted to $51,966,674.94. Of this sum, $4,962,561.95 was for salaries and contingent expenses; $23,-377,828.35 for the support of the military establishment; $6,077,033.18 for miscellaneous objects, and $20,518,631.41 for public works. This latter sum includes $15,396,876.46 for river and harbor improvements and $3,356,141.30 for fortifications and other works of defense.

The Military Schools.

The reports of the Military academy at West Point and the several schools for special instructions of officers show marked advance in education of the army and a commendable ambition among its officers to excel in the military profession and to fit themselves for the highest service to the country.

The Judiciary Department.

The report of the attorney general contains the usual summary of the affairs and proceedings of the department of justice for the past year, together with certain recommendations as to needed legislation on various subjects. I cannot too heartily indorse the proposition that the fee system as applicable to the compensation of United States attorneys, marshals, clerks of federal courts and United States commissioners, should be abolished with as little delay as possible. It is clearly in the interest of the community that the business of the courts, both civil and criminal, shall be as small and as inexpensively transacted as the ends of justice will allow.

Postal Affairs.

The report of the postmaster general contains a detailed statement of the operations of the post office department during the last fiscal year and much interesting information touching this important branch of the public service.

Enormous Deficiency.

At a date when better times were anticipated it was estimated by his predecessor that the deficiency on the 30th day of June, 1893, would be but a little over $1,500,000. It amounted, however, to more than $5,000,000. At the same time, and under the influence of like anticipations, estimates were made for the current fiscal year ending June 30, 1894, which exhibited a surplus of revenue over expenditures of $872,-245 71; but now, in view of the actual receipts and expenditures during that part of the current fiscal year already expired, the present postmaster general estimates that at its close instead of a surplus there will be a deficiency of nearly $8,000,000.

The Free Delivery System.

Forty-two free delivery offices were added during the year to those already existing, making a total of 610 cities and towns provided with free delivery on June 30, 1893. Ninety-three other cities and owns are now entitled to this service under the law, but it has not been accorded them on account of insufficient funds to meet the expense of its establishment.

Money Order Business.

There were 6,401 additions to the domestic money order offices during the last fiscal year, being the largest increase in any year since the inauguration of the system. The total number of these offices at the close of the year was 18,434. There were 13,309,735 money orders issued from these offices, being an increase over the preceding year of 1,240,293 and the value of these orders amounted to $127,576,-433.65, an increase of $7,506,632.58. There were also issued during the year postal notes amounting to $12,903,076.73. During the year 195 international money-order offices were added to those already provided, making a total of 2,407 in operation on June 30 1893.

The Railway Service.

The railway mail service not only adds to the promptness of mail delivery at all offices, but it is the especial instrumentality which puts the smaller and way places in the service on an equality in that regard with the larger and terminal offices. This branch of the postal service has therefore received much attention from the postmaster general, and, though it is gratifying to know that it is in a condition of high efficiency and great usefulness, I am led to agree with the postmaster general, that there is room for its further improvement.

Value of Civil Service Reform.

There are now connected with the post office establishment 28,34 employes who are in the classified service. The head of this great department gives conclusive evidence of the value of civil service reform when, after an experience that renders his judgment on the subject absolutely reliable, he expresses the opinion that without the benefit of this system it would be impossible to conduct the vast business intrusted to him.

I desire to commend as especially worthy of prompt attention the suggestions of the postmaster general relating to a more sensible and business-like organization and a better distribution of responsibility in his department.

The Navy.

The report of the secretary of the navy contains a history of the operations of his department during the past year, and exhibits a most gratifying condition of the personnel of our navy. He presents a satisfactory account of the progress which has been made in the construction of vessels and makes a number of recommendations to which attention is especially invited.

Cruisers Kept Busy.

During the past six months the demands for cruising vessels have been many and urgent. There have been revolutions calling for vessels to protect American interests in Nicaragua, Guatemala, Costa Rica, Honduras, Argentina and Brazil, while the condition of affairs in Honolulu has required the constant presence of one or more ships. With all these calls upon our navy, it became necessary, in order to make up a sufficient fleet to patrol the Behring sea under the modus vivendi agreed upon with Great Britain, to detail to that service one vessel from the fish commission and three from the revenue marine.

Progress in the construction of new vessels has not been as rapid as was anticipated. There has been delay in the completion of our armored vessels, but for the most part they have been such as are constantly occurring even in countries having the largest experience in naval ship building. The most serious delays, however, have been in the work upon armored ships. The trouble has been the failure of contractors to deliver armor as agreed. The difficulties seem now, however, to have been all overcome, and armor is being delivered with satisfactory promptness.

Our Reorganized Navy.

As a result of the experience acquired by ship builders and designers and material men, it is believed that the dates when vessels will be completed can now be estimated with reasonable accuracy. Great guns, rapid fire guns, torpedoes and powder are being promptly supplied.

A Note of Warning.

Since 1883 congress has at each session authorized the building of one or more vessels, and the secretary of the navy presents as earnest plea for the continuance of this plan. He recommends the authorization of at least one battleship and six torpedo boats. While I am heartily in favor of consistently pursuing the policy we have inaugurated of building up a thorough and efficient navy I cannot refrain from the suggestion that the congress should carefully take into account the number of unfinished vessels on our hands and the present condition of our treasury in considering the propriety of an appropriation at this time to begin new work.

The method of employing mechanical labor at navy yards through boards of labor, and making efficiency the sole test by which laborers are employed and continued, is producing the best results, and the secretary is earnestly devoting himself to its development. Attention is invited to the statements of his report in regard to the workings of the system.

The Pension Rolls.

The secretary of the interior has the supervision of so many important subjects that his report is of especial value and interest. On the 30th day of June, 1893, there were on the pension rolls 965,012 names, an increase of 89,941 over the number on the rolls June 30, 1892. Of these there were 167 widows and daughters of revolutionary soldiers, 86 survivors of the war of 1812, 5,425 widows of soldiers of that war, 21,-518 survivors and widows of the Mexican war, 3,332 survivors and widows of Indian wars, 28 army nurses and 474,645 survivors and widows and children of deceased soldiers and sailors of the war of the rebellion. The latter number represents those pensioned on account of disabilities or death resulting from army and navy service. The number of persons remaining on the rolls June 30, 1893, who were pensioned under the act of June 27, 1890, which allows pensions on account of death and disability not chargeable to army service, was 459,155.

The number added to the rolls during the year was 123,634 and the number dropped was 33,690. The first payments on pensions allowed during the year amounted to $33,766,-549.98. This includes arrears, or the accumulation between the time from which the allowance of the pension dates and the time of actually granting the certificate.

Pensions for Disabilities.

Although the law of 1890 permits pensions for disabilities not related to military service, yet as a requisite to its benefits a disability must exist incapacitating applicants "from the performance of manual labor to such a degree as to render them unable to earn a support." The execution of this law in its early stages does not seem to have been in accord with its true intention, but toward the close of the last administration an authoritative construction was given to the statute and since that time this construction has been followed. This has had the effect of limiting the operation of the law to its intended purpose. The discovery having been made that many names had been put upon the pension roll by means of wholesale and gigantic frauds, the commissioner suspended payments upon a number of pensions which seemed to be fraudulent or unauthorized pending a complete examination, giving notice to the pensioners in order that they might have an opportunity to establish, if possible, the justice of their claims notwithstanding apparent invalidity.

Frauds Should Be Exposed.

This, I understand, is the practice which has for a long time prevailed in the pension bureau, but after entering upon these recent investigations the commissioner modified this rule so as not to allow, until after complete examination, interference with the payment of a pension apparently not altogether void, but which merely had been fixed at a rate higher than authorized by law. I am unable to understand why frauds in the pension rolls should not be exposed and corrected with thoroughness and vigor. Every name fraudulently put upon these rolls is a wicked imposition upon the kindly sentiment in which pensions have their origin. Every fraudulent pensioner has become a bad citizen; every false oath in support of a pension has made perjury more common, and false and undeserving pensioners rob the people not only of their money but of the patriotic sentiment which the survivors of war, fought for the preservation of the union, ought to inspire. Thousands of neighborhoods have their well-known fraudulent pensioners, and recent developments by the bureau establish appalling conspiracies to accomplish pension frauds. By no means the least wrong done is to brave and deserving pensioners, who certainly ought not to be condemned for such association. Those who attempt in the line of duty to rectify these wrongs should not be accused of enmity or indifference to the claims of honest veterans.

Enormous Expenditures.

The sum expended on account of pensions for the year ending June 30, 1893, was $156,740,467.14. The commissioner estimates that $165,0.0,000 will be required to pay pensions during the year ending June 30, 1894.

Indian Affairs.

The condition of the Indians and their ultimate fate are subjects which are related to a sacred duty of the government and which strongly appeal to the sense of justice and the sympathy of our people.

Our Indians number about 248,000. Most of them are located on 161 reservations, containing 86,118,531 acres of land. About 11,000 of these Indians have, to a large degree, adopted civilized customs. Lands in severalty have been allotted to many of them. Such allotments have been made to 10,000 individuals during the last fiscal year, embracing about 1,000,000 acres. The number of Indian government schools open during the year was 195, an increase of twelve over the preceding year. Of this total 170 were on reservations, of which seventy-three were boarding schools and ninety-seven were day schools. Twenty boarding schools and five day schools supported by the government were not located on reservations. The total number of Indian children enrolled during the year as attendants of all schools was 21,138, an increase of 1,231 over the enrollment for the previous year.

What Is Best for the Indian.

I am sure that secular education and moral and religious teaching must be important factors in an effort to save the Indian and lead him to civilization. I believe, too, that the relinquishment of tribal relations and the holding of land in severalty may, in favorable conditions, aid this consummation. It seems to me, however, that allotment of land in severalty ought to be made with great care and circumspection. If hastily done before the Indian knows its meaning, while yet he has little or no idea of tilling a farm and no conception of thrift, there is great danger that a reservation life in tribal relations may be exchanged for the pauperism of civilization, instead of its independence and elevation. The solution of the Indian problem depends very largely upon good administration. The personal fitness of agents and their adaptability to the peculiar duty of caring for their wards are of the utmost importance.

Danger of Abuses.

The law providing that, except in especial cases, army officers shall be detailed as Indian agents, it is hoped will prove a successful experiment. There is danger of great abuses creeping into the prosecution of claims for Indian depredations, and I recommend that every possible safeguard be provided against the enforcement of unjust and fictitious claims of this description. The appropriations on account of the Indian bureau for the year ending June 30, 1894, amount to $7,954,962.99, a decrease as compared with the year preceding it of $387,131.95.

Private Control of Public Lands.

The vast area of land which, but a short time ago, constituted the public domain is rapidly falling into private hands. It is certain that in the transfer the beneficent intention of the government to supply from its domain homes to the industrious and worthy homeseekers is often frustrated. Though the speculator, who stands with extortionate purpose between the land office and those who, with their families, are invited by the government to settle on the public lands, is a despicable character who ought not to be tolerated, yet it is difficult to thwart his schemes.

Opening of the Strip.

The recent opening to settlement of the lands in the Cherokee outlet, embracing an area of 6,5 0,0 0 acres, notwithstanding the utmost care in framing the regulations governing the selection of locations and notwithstanding the presence of United States troops, furnished an exhibition, though perhaps in a modified degree, of the mad scramble, the violence and the fraudulent occupation which have accompanied previous openings of public land. I concur with the secretary in the belief that these outrageous incidents cannot be entirely prevented without a change in the laws on the subject, and I hope his recommendations in that direction will be favorably considered.

Preserve the Forests.

I especially commend to the attention of the congress the statements contained in the secretary's report concerning forestry. The time has come when efficient measures should be taken for the preservation of our forests from indiscriminate and unnecessary destruction. The report of the secretary of agriculture will be found exceedingly interesting, especially to that large part of our citizens intimately concerned in agricultural occupations. On the 7th of March, 1893, there were upon its payrolls 2,440 employes. This number has been reduced to 1,850 persons. In view of a depleted public treasury and the imperative demand of the people for economy in the administration of their government, the secretary has entered upon the task of rigidly reducing expenditures by the elimination from the payrolls of all persons not needed for an efficient conduct of the affairs of the department.

Cutting Down Expenses.

During the first quarter of the present year the expenses of the department aggregated $345,876.76, as against $402 012 42 for the corresponding period of the fiscal year ending June 30, 1893. The secretary makes apparent his intention to continue this rate of reduction by submitting estimates for the next fiscal year less by $994,280 than those for the present year.

Among the heads of divisions in this department the changes have been exceedingly few. Three vacancies occurring from death and resignations have been filled by the promotion of assistants in the same divisions. These promotions of experienced and faithful assistants have not only been in the interest of official work, but have suggested to those in the department who look for retention and promotion that merit and devotion to duty are their best reliance.

The amount appropriated for the bureau of animal industry for the current fiscal year is $890 000; the estimate for the ensuing year is $700,000.

Contagious Diseases of Animals.

The regulations of 1892 concerning Texas fever have been enforced during the past year, and the largest stock yards of the country above have been kept free from infection. Occasional local outbreaks have been largely such as could have been effectually guarded against by the owners of the affected cattle. While contagious pleuro-pneumonia in cattle has been eradicated, animal tuberculosis, a disease widespread and more dangerous to human life than pleuro-pneumonia, is still prevalent. Investigations have been made during the past year as to the means of its communication and the method of its correct diagnosis. Much progress has been made in this direction by the studies of the division of animal pathology, but work ought to be extended in cooperation with local authorities until the danger to human life arising from this cause is reduced to a minimum.

The number of animals arrived from Canada during the year and inspected by bureau officers was 462,092, and the number from other foreign Atlantic countries was 1,297. No contagious diseases were found among the reported animals. The total number of inspections of cattle for export during the past fiscal year was 611,542.

Falling Off in Exports.

The exports show a falling off of about 25 per cent. from the preceding year, the decrease occurring entirely in the last half of the year. This suggests that the falling off may have been largely due to an increase in the price of American export cattle. During the year ending June 30, 1893, exports of inspected pork aggregated 20,677,410 pounds, as against 38,152,874 pounds for the preceding year. The falling off in this export was not confined, however, to inspected pork, the total quantity exported in 1892 being 665,490,616 pounds, while in 1893 it was only 527,388,69 pounds.

I join the secretary in recommending that hereafter each applicant for the position of inspector or assistant inspector in the bureau of animal industry be required, as a condition precedent to his appointment, to exhibit to the United States civil service commission his diploma from an established, regular and reputable veterinary college, and that he be supplemented by such an examination in veterinary science as the commission may prescribe.

Exports of Agricultural Products.

The exports of agricultural products from the United States for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1892, attained the enormous figure of $860,000,000, both in round numbers, being 78.7 per cent of our total exports. In the last fiscal year this aggregate was greatly reduced, but nevertheless reached $615,000,000, being 75.1 per cent. of all American commodities exported.

A review of our agricultural exports with special reference to their destination will show that in almost every line the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland absorbs by far the largest proportion. Of cattle, the total exports aggregated in value for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1893, $23,000,000, of which Great Britain took considerably over $25,000,000. Of beef products of all kinds our total exports were $28,000,000, of which Great Britain took $24,000,-000.

Of pork products the total exports were $84,-000,000, of which Great Britain took $58,000,000. In breadstuffs, cotton and minor products like proportions sent to the same destination are shown.

Service of Great Value.

The work of the statistical division of the department of agriculture deals with all that relates to the economies of farming. The main purpose of its monthly reports is to keep the farmers informed as fully as possible of all matters having any influence upon the world's markets, in which the products find sale. Its publications relate especially to the commercial side of farming. It is therefore of profound importance and vital concern to the farmers of the United States, who represent nearly one-half of our population, and also of direct interest to the whole country that the work of this division be efficiently performed and that the information it has gathered be promptly diffused.

It is a matter of congratulation to know that the secretary will not spare any effort to make this part of his work thoroughly useful. In the year 1888 the congress appropriated $1,000 to be taken from the patent office funds for the purpose of collecting and distributing rare and improved varieties of seeds and for prosecuting agricultural investigations and procuring agricultural statistics. From this small beginning the seed division of the department of agriculture has grown to its present unwieldy and unjustifiably extravagant proportions.

During the last fiscal year the cost of seeds purchased was $86,548.61. The remainder of an appropriation of $135,000 was expended in putting them up and distributing them. It surely never could have entered the minds of those who first sanctioned appropriations of public money for the purchase of new and improved varieties of seeds for gratuitous distribution that from this would grow large appropriations for the purpose of distribution by members of congress of ordinary seeds, bulbs and cuttings, which are common in all the states and territories and everywhere easily obtained at low prices.

Wasteful Distribution of Seeds.

In each state and territory an agricultural experiment station has been established. These stations, by their very character and name, are the proper agencies to experiment with and test new varieties of seeds; and yet this indiscriminate and wasteful distribution of legislation and legislators continues, answering no purpose unless it be to remind constituents that their representatives are willing to remember them with gratuities at public cost.

Under the sanction of existing legislation, there was sent out from the agricultural department during the last fiscal year enough of cabbage seed to plant 19,200 acres of land, a sufficient quantity of beans to plant 4,000 acres, beet seed enough to plant 2,500 acres, sweet corn enough to plant 7,800 acres, sufficient cucumber seed to cover 2,205 acres with vines, and enough muskmelon and watermelon seeds to plant 2,675 acres. The total quantity of flower and vegetable seeds thus distributed was contained in more than 9,000,000 packages and they were sufficient, if planted, to cover 89,595 acres of land.

Should Be Abolished.

In view of these facts this enormous expenditure without legitimate returns of benefit ought to be abolished. Anticipating a consummation so manifestly in the interests of good administration more than $100,000 has been stricken from the estimate made to cover this object for the year ending June 30, 1895, and the secretary recommends that the remaining $35,000 of the estimate be confined strictly to the purchase of new and improved varieties of seeds, and that these be distributed throughout experiment stations. Thus the seed will be tested, and after the test has been completed by the experiment stations, the propagation of the useful varieties and the rejection of the valueless may safely be left to the common sense of the people.

Workings of the Civil Service Law.

The continued intelligent execution of the civil service law and the increasing approval of the people of its operation are most gratifying. The recent extension of its limitations and regulations to the employes at free delivery post offices, which has been honestly and promptly accomplished by the commission, with the hearty cooperation of the postmaster general, is an immensely important advance in the usefulness of the system. I am, if possible, more than ever convinced of the incalculable benefits conferred by the civil service law, not only in its effect upon the public service, but also, what is even more important, in its effect in elevating the tone of political life generally.

Popular Love of Right and Justice.

The course of civil service reform in this country instructively and interestingly illustrates how strong a hold a movement gains upon our people which has underlying it a sentiment of justice and right, and which at the same time promises better administration of their government. The law embodying this reform found its way to our statute book more from fear of the popular sentiment existing in its favor than from any love for the reform itself on the part of legislators; and it has lived and grown and flourished in spite of the covert as well as open hostility of spoilsmen and notwithstanding the querulous impracticability of many self-constituted guardians. Beneath all the vagaries and sublimated theories which are attributed to it there underlies this reform a sturdy common-sense principle not only suited to this mundane sphere, but whose application our people are more and more recognizing to be absolutely essential to the most successful operation of their government, if not to its perpetuity.

An Inconsistency Pointed Out.

It seems to me to be entirely inconsistent with the character of this reform,

BAMBOOZLING GRANDMA.

"There never was a grandma half so good!"
He whispered while beside her chair he stood,
And laid his rosy cheek
With manner very meek,
Against her dear old face in loving mood.

"There never was a nicer grandma born;
I know some little boys must be forlorn,
Because they've none like you.
I wonder what I'd do
Without a grandma's kisses night and morn?"

There was never a dearer grandma, there!"
He kissed her, and he smoothed her snow-white hair;
Then fixed her ruffled cap,
And nestled in her lap,
While grandma, smiling, rocked her old arm-chair.

"When I'm a man what things to you I'll bring:
A horse and carriage and a watch and ring.
All grandmas are so nice
(Just here he kissed her twice).
And grandmas give a good boy everything."

Before his dear old grandma could reply
This boy looked up, and, with a roguish eye,
Then whispered in her ear
That nobody might hear:
"Say, grandma, have you any more mince pie?"

A HUNTER'S YARN.

The White Deer of San Carlos—An Arizona Mystery.

The white deer of San Carlos are one of the many wonders of Arizona. There are many hunters who deny their existence, but there are many others who say positively that they have seen them. All the Indians in the part of the country where the deer are said to live tell of them, and many can be found who say they have seen them. But the Indians don't want to see them, because they have a religious belief that they belong to the Great White Spirit, and that if an Indian should kill one of them he would be cursed forever. The place in which the deer live is one of the wildest spots in the country to-day. It is in the San Carlos Indian reservation, and is almost inaccessible. Its exact distance from any settlement is not known, but the nearest place to any whisky and tobacco is the Mammoth gold camp.

About a month ago one of the boys from the Rilito mine went out hunting. He was gone several days, and when he came back was very much excited. His horse was worn out and had evidently been driven very hard for several hours. The man said that he had seen the white deer and never wanted to see them again. He couldn't tell why he was afraid of them, as nothing had happened to him of an injurious nature. He told how he saw the herd grazing on a grassy ridge that reached across the bottom of a beautiful valley. It was not at all like any other valley he had seen in the territory, but was watered by a dozen streams, and trees and grass grew luxuriantly. The deer were grazing calmly, and he thought he saw a chance to get one, so he found a place to rest his rifle and took a dead aim at a big buck. The instant his rifle cracked the entire herd vanished like magic, leaving behind them nothing but a thin veil of white mist. He jumped on his horse and started for camp, never stopping until he reached it.

His story was so remarkable that two of the other boys, Joe Franklin and Henry Roberts, wanted him to go with them to the place and make an investigation. But the man who saw the deer had seen all he wanted.

Franklin and Roberts got particular directions, but did not start until the next morning, but were up very early, and by sunrise had gone over the range that divides the semi-civilization from the howling wilderness of wild beasts and murderous Apaches. It took them a day and a half to get to the locality. They traveled through a country where death seemed to be lurking behind every stone and clump of bushes. By day they passed several bleaching skeletons and deserted huts that told the tale of some adventurous man's effort to make a home in this desolate spot.

By taking turns all through the night Franklin and Roberts both did well, and when morning came and the ghostly forms stealthily gliding through the darkness had given place to cactus, sand and rocks, both men were as fresh as if they had slept in a bed in San Francisco. When the sun came up the horses slept while the men were getting breakfast. A start was soon made, and by noon the men knew that the valley could not be far away, although they saw no signs of it. The country was wild and rugged and vegetation was very limited. There was no sign of water, nor did they see any place where water could come from. They knew by certain things they were told to look for that they had followed the directions closely. But where was the valley? It could not be ahead of them, and must be to one side, as the sand gradually sloped that way. Before starting down Franklin proposed that he climb to the top of a ridge a few hundred feet to the right and see if he could see the tops of the green trees. It was a long, hard climb, and as he ascended he saw no sign of the refreshing green. He felt sure that they must have made some mistake or that the other man lied, but concluded he would go to the top just to see what there was. When he reached the summit there was no patch of green—nothing but desert hills, and far off in the distance an Apache village.

He was about to go back when he concluded to cross over the ridge and see what was on the other side. Making his way through the scrub, mesquite and cactus, he soon came to an open space, and there before him was the valley he had been looking for. It was carpeted with green grass, and on the other side a range of mountains rose, the tops of which were covered with snow that was constantly melting and forming silver streams that tumbled into the valley below.

To one accustomed to the glare and dust of Arizona deserts the spot was like a glimpse of paradise, and Franklin rubbed his eyes to make sure he was not dreaming. He was satisfied that the spot had been found, so he went back to the top of the ridge and signaled to Roberts to come up and bring the horses—an act Roberts was not very slow in performing. Both agreed that the spot had been found, and the next was to find the deer. But first they would rest awhile and get something to eat. It really was like paradise when they had found a cool, shady spot and built a fire. The blue smoke curled upward among the trees, where it was caught by the gentle wind and carried across the valley. Dinner had been cooked and disposed of, and both men stretched themselves out comfortably, intending each minute to get up and go and look for the deer. But while they were making up their minds about it Roberts suddenly had his attention attracted by something moving on a low ridge of hill a short distance ahead. He looked several times and then called Franklin's attention to the matter. Sure enough there were the white deer. There were at least two dozen of them, and they were beautiful creatures, formed exactly like all others, except that their legs were a little heavier. They were snow-white and in such a position that the sun, which was now getting low, struck them with a gleam of opalescent light that brought them into strong relief against the rugged mountains in the background.

It was a pretty good shot to make, but both men felt that they were equal to it, and arranged the sights on their rifles with great care. Both shot at once, and the same instant the entire flock disappeared. Roberts ran to the ridge and looked over on the other side, but could see no sign of the deer. They had vanished into thin air, and he felt a peculiar fear that made him get back to the fire and his friend as quickly as possible. It was very mysterious and night was coming on.

In the morning they went back to the camp of the afternoon before and waited. But it was not long before they saw the deer on the hilltop grazing peacefully.

Both men were reluctant about shooting, but when they pulled their triggers there was exactly the same result as on the evening before.

They reached the top of the ridge and plainly saw the footprints of the animals. The ridge went up from the floor of the valley in a gentle, gradual slope, but when the top was reached it stopped abruptly and a bluff several feet high went down on the other side. It was now evident that the deer must have been on the edge of this bluff, and the instant the shots were fired jumped over the side and so disappeared.

The men followed the way it seemed the deer must have gone. They jumped down the bluff, and there saw a clump of brush and the white mist arising from it. Both were almost afraid to go near the brush, but at that moment a rattling in it made both men raise their rifles. The next moment they saw a wounded white deer jump out and attempt to run. They fired and it fell dead. There was nothing supernatural about that, and the dust that arose from the bushes explained the cause of the white mist that had been seen rising over the hill. Looking down into the bushes, Roberts said that the brush grew on a bank and directly below it was a deep hole, which investigation showed to be a cave that went deep underground. The tracks and broken brush showed that the deer had gone in there, and so disappeared from the face of the earth.

Both men now thought they had all the game they could carry off and started inside, but had gone but a few steps when they were called to a halt, and found that a tall old man, only about half dressed and surrounded by the herd of white deer, had a bead on them with a pair of large-bore revolvers. They stopped.

"What do you want here?" asked the voice behind the revolvers.

Both men were too frightened on account of the surprise, and had dropped their rifles on the ground.

"Sit down there," said the voice again, and Franklin and Roberts did as they were told.

They had no disposition to argue the point with the man, as he kept them covered all the time. He then commenced to ask them all sorts of questions, and the deer stood by as if they comprehended it all. The old man's harangue lasted for a long time, but finally he said he was certain they were the two men who had killed two of the deer the night before, and now he would have to kill them. But he wouldn't shoot. No; that would be too good for those who had dared to kill the pets of the Great White Spirit. But what would he do? That was a question that troubled him deeply. He walked up and down, while the deer followed him closely, and would occasionally bury his face in his hands.

At last he seemed to forget the two men and began to murmur some inarticulate words. Both of his captives now began to see a way out of the fix, as it became apparent the man was a sort of maniac.

Watching their chance, they grabbed their rifles when his back was turned, and when he faced them he found himself gazing into the muzzles of a couple of Winchesters. The poor creature howled in agony and begged for his life. The men took his revolvers and then attempted to find out who he was. But he would not say much, except that he had been there for many years and was a servant of the great white spirit.

Franklin and Roberts were standing with their backs to the entrance and had lowered their rifles now that the only man was unarmed. Their questioning was becoming tiresome when suddenly the old man made a move with his arms, and before the hunters could realize what had happened the entire herd of deer had jumped toward them and knocked them down and began running out of the cave, tramping on them as if they were so much dirt. It all happened so quickly and the shock was so great they were stunned for a moment.

When the tramping ceased the men jumped up and found they were alone in the cave. Both were considerably bruised, but managed to get to the entrance in time to see the herd vanishing over a hill a few hundred yards away. Whether the old man was with them or not they couldn't tell. They still had his revolvers, but he had disappeared. He must have gone with the deer, as he was not in the back part of the cave. They couldn't find him anywhere around, and what became of him they never knew.

The hunters felt that their expedition had not amounted to much, as they had killed only one of the animals to take back. But when they went to get it they found that it had been thrown into a fissure forty or fifty feet deep in the hillside. The sides of this were covered with cactus, so that it would have been almost impossible to have got it even had they had ropes.

They came to the conclusion that the old man must have thrown it down and then concealed himself in some other cave near by.

But they could find out nothing, and started home empty-handed, trying to console themselves that they had at least seen the white deer of San Carlos.—San Francisco Call.

COUNTRY STORE STORIES.

The Last Was Too Much and the Speaker Was Left Alone.

They were sitting on empty boxes and on the counter. The floor was littered with carefully peeled shavings, and around each man was a circle of dark spots. The red canned goods label and patent medicine bottles stared down on the group. The man with the County Clare whiskers shifted his cud of tobacco and said, to no one in particular, "Went fishin' to-day."

Everyone kept on whittling, and the jaws moved rythmically, but no one apparently paid any attention to his remark. What was the use of wasting words; they knew the story was coming.

"Went fishin'," he repeated. "Had purty good luck."

Still no one helped him out.

After a minute he said: "Yes, I had what you might call or'nary luck. Caught forty-seven pick'rel, and they weighed nigh onto one hundred pounds."

He shifted his cud back and picked up a fresh stick with the air of a man who has done his duty.

The tick of the clock was the only noise heard in the store, except for an occasional spat, as the dark circles became better defined. But everyone knew Seth Jones was going to speak. He always prefaced his remarks by shifting one leg over the other and cutting the end of his stick short off.

"Don't hev t' fish t' ketch pick'rel," he said, slowly.

"How's that, Seth?" asked a newcomer, who didn't know the customs of the place.

Seth looked surprised and pained at the interruption, but he continued: "I was fishin' t'other day, and the pick'rel were so durned thick that one on 'em jumped plum into the boat."

He looked at the first speaker pityingly and prepared a fresh chew.

The man with the gray beard and child-like gray eyes walked over to the sugar barrel and helped himself. Then he said: "Never got but one pick'rel, and speared him."

He waited until he was sure the newcomer was not going to interrupt him, and then went on: "I was spearin' t'other night on the creek, an' right ahead saw a bullhead 's long's——" and he measured off a foot or two on the counter. "I made a drive at him hard, for he was swimmin' fast. I hit him plum in the middle, but I didn't get him."

Seth Jones moved uneasily on his box, and the others involuntarily stopped whittling.

"No, sir," the speaker went on. "But when I pulled my spear up I had the biggest pick'rel I ever see. He must hev weighed somethin' less 'n a ton. Y' see," he added, "my spear was so sharp it cut that bullhead right in two an' the pick'rel happened to be swimmin' under him."

He walked back to his seat on the counter, and for several minutes no one said a word.

But Hi Walker was thinking. He showed it plainly, and the rest waited for him to speak.

"Did y' ever ketch two fish on one hook?" he asked, finally.

No one answered, and he went on: "I never did but once. I was out with that city dude as was up here the summer Seth Jones' gray mare died o' lockjaw, an' we hadn't had any luck to speak on all day long. But just afore it was pitch dark he got on a big bass as it turned out t' be. I thought he would bust his whipper-snapper pole sure, but finally he got him up t' the boat an' told me t' put the net under him. I felt around in the dark, und purty soon I see two of the biggest fish as ever grew in Snaky Lake. I lifted 'em into the boat after a bit, an' I thought the dude would jump out 'n it he was so tickled. Fact, he had only one hook an' there were the two fish."

"I reckon that second fish must hev been swimmin' along side o' t'other an' I just scooped him in," the speaker added, and then he said he must be going.

A dark-haired man with black eyes and a coat that was new only two years ago had been sitting in a corner without entering into the conversation. "You fellers hev told some pretty fair fish yarns," he said, "an' you're welcome to all the fish you can ketch. But when it comes to huntin', I know a thing or two."

No one had ever heard Bill Perkins tell a story, and they listened half in suspense, partly in doubt.

"Th' other fall I was down shootin' on the flats," he said. "Three big, black duck flew by me, an' I let 'em have the right barrel. Two on 'em dropped, and I pulled t'other trigger but the cap snapped. I threw the gun down to fix it, when bang! it went off an' durned near knocked me down. I looked around for the other duck, but couldn't see him nowhere, but when I went to pick up the first two I found him in the grass. When that gun went off it knocked him down as clean as a whistle."

And they all filed out and left him alone with his conscience.—Buffalo Courier.

Her Dream Came True.

A bashful youth of some twenty summers was paying his addresses to a young lady who had long since despaired of bringing things to a crisis. One night he called and they sat in the gloaming, their hearts pulsating with the tender passion. After settling the merits of the weather the girl looked shyly into the face of her timid lover and exclaimed:

"I dreamed of you last night, John."

"Did you? Why now!"

"Yes, I dreamed that you kissed me."

"Why, now, what did you dream your mother said?"

"O, I dreamed that she was away from home."

A light dawned upon the young man's intellect. A singular sound broke the surrounding stillness and in less than a month they will be married.—Memphis Commercial.

Simple in Practice.

The observatory method of determining time is very simple in principle. The observer turns to his catalogue of stars and chooses one for his observation, the catalogue giving him the time, to the hundredth of a second, at which that star will be on his meridian. He then turns to the telescope, and at the instant the star crosses the meridian records the time indicated by his clock. The catalogue gives the true time of passage, and unless the clock gives the same it is in error.—Popular Astronomy.

FIRESIDE FRAGMENTS.

—Spots on the wood of furniture may often be removed by rubbing vigorously with turpentine and sweet oil, and then renewing the polish by brisk rubbing.

—White Sponge Cake.—Whites of three eggs, one and one-half cupfuls of sugar, one cupful of hot water, two and one-half cupfuls of flour. Season to taste.—Housekeeper.

—Confederate Chicken Pie.—Boil fowl tender. Put layer of seasoned chicken in a dish with plenty of butter; then a layer of cold, boiled rice. Repeat till dish is full, with rice on top. Set in oven till very hot, then serve.—Good Housekeeping.

—Pumpkin Pie.—Press one quart of stewed pumpkin through a fine colander; add to it two quarts of milk, two cups of sugar, seven eggs beaten very light, and a teaspoonful each of butter, ginger and cinnamon. Stir thoroughly together and fill plates that have previously been lined with a rich pie-crust.—Ladies' Home Journal.

—Boiled Bread and Apple Pudding.—Peel and chop six large apples, mix with them one cup of fine bread crumbs and the beaten yolks of three eggs. Add one teaspoonful of mixed cinnamon and nutmeg, a pinch of salt and the whipped whites of three eggs. Beat all together for a minute, turn into a greased mold and boil three hours.—Home Queen.

—Cream for Layer Cake.—One pint of milk, two eggs, two tablespoons level full of corn starch, one small cup of sugar, and essence to taste. Wet the corn starch with a little milk, let the rest of the milk boil, stir all together and cook until done. Frost the top with the white of an egg beaten to a stiff froth, and nine teaspoonfuls of pulverized sugar. The cream should not be put between the layers of the cake until it is almost cold.—Ohio Farmer.

—Mock Turtle Soup.—An excellent substitute for turtle soup is made as follows: One pint of beans to one gallon of water, boil until the beans are soft, then strain; add a small onion, a little summer savory, a piece of butter the size of two eggs, one teaspoonful of cream or a pint of milk. When boiled, toast two slices of bread and cut in small squares. Slice four hard boiled eggs and place in the soup tureen with the pieces of toast. When ready to serve pour the soup over them and send at once to the table.—Farm, Field and Fireside.

—Venison Steaks.—Nice steaks may be cut from the loin or the haunch and may be broiled the same as beefsteak. Cook longer over a clear, hot fire than for beefsteak, turning frequently. When done, lay on a hot platter, season with salt and pepper, butter generously, turn a hot plate over them and let them stand five minutes before serving. Venison should never be roasted unless fat. The shoulder is a roasting piece and does not need paper and paste. It should always be served on hot plates, as it chills quickly. It is best perfectly fresh, but in cold cold weather it can be kept some time by washing with milk and water and drying perfectly; then rubbing every part with well powdered and mixed ginger and pepper.

FASHION NOTES.

What the Women of Style Are Wearing During the Fall Season.

Following the English fashion straw hats will be worn until holidays. Some of the newest of these have the brims faced with fancy braid in contrasting color, one specially handsome model being of black Milan with facing of lace braid in the natural color of straw. The trimming is of loops of the braid glossy wings and aigrettes in black.

While round waists are still fashionable, there are many basque bodices of various styles. One model is shown with no black seams, but this is desirable only as a novelty, as the effect is by no means pleasing, save in exceptional cases. The style and figure must match to be harmonious.

Enormous quantities of narrow velvet ribbon are used for dress trimmings. Row upon row of this material is seen on cloth and other wool fabric. A white broadcloth has the lower part of the skirt almost covered with velvet ribbon, set on in an open arabesque pattern.

French lace and various imitation laces are much liked. Old-time black laces of various sorts are being hunted up among the family heirlooms. Black Chantilly, guipure and Brussels lace are the height of fashion. The finer and older, the more the lace is approved.

A fabric that may be described as moire velvet is one of the new importations. The smooth surface of the pile is slightly stamped to produce this effect, which is extremely pretty, making the surface into fine watered lines, very dressy and elegant.

Black lace is used in enormous quantities. Ruchings, collarettes, plaitings, shoulder ruffles, bertha flounces, wide or narrow bretelles, and, indeed, every imaginable way of disposing this material seems to be approved.

The fancy for changeables is running riot. It has reached all classes of dress goods, even mohairs and all grades of suitings.—N. Y. Ledger.

THE SHAH'S HIGHWAY.

A Word Picture of the Avenue of Approach to a Great Capital.

The shah's highway, considered as an agreeable promenade, or merely as a necessary avenue of approach to a great capital, cannot be considered as a shining success. Straight away in front of us, as far as the eye can reach, it stretches over a level plain, and up a slight rise, bounded on one side by the arrow-straight line of iron telegraph poles. The sky is slightly overcast; a fierce wind blows in our faces, bringing dense clouds of dust, which rise at times to a great height in the distance, often taking the form of waterspouts or of towering columns of smoke; once enveloped in one of these traveling dust storms, there is nothing to do but to hold our heads down, and with eyes tightly shut ride through it, emerging on the other side white-bearded and powdered like millers. Sometimes we try to avoid these encounters by riding over the rough and broken ground on one side. There are many wrecks by the way of what were once stout ships of the desert, as well as the last remnants of horses, mules and donkeys, lying where they gave up the struggle for life. The only birds in this dreary landscape are the ravens, which hunt in couples and fly up from the road croaking hoarsely as we approach. There is not even a hard bank of earth or a stone large enough to sit upon when it is time for lunch, and one can only squat ignominiously in the dust.—Edwin Lord Weeks, in Harper's Magazine.

IS YOUR FACE ON?

To Put It On Should Be a Before-Breakfast Duty.

I once heard a woman say that she would as soon think of leaving her room in the morning before putting on her dress as before putting on her face, remarks a correspondent of an exchange. When one stops to reflect on the dejected, acrid, or glum countenances that confront one at breakfast tables, does it not seem a thousand pities that more women are not alive to the positive indecency of appearing at the breakfast board in what may be called facial dishabille? Hardly any one but considers her morning toilet complete when she has done with tub and dumbbells, "fixed" her hair, and put on her dress; yet she should never venture beyond the threshold of her bedroom until she has coaxed a smooth and smiling reflection into her looking glass.

To this, regardless of the mood that may possess, we must first, to use a Delsaltean term, "devitalize" the face; that is, cast out the unlovely expression in possession by encouraging a sensation of droop throughout the features, so that cheeks, lips, chin and lids may sag heavily while the mind is, as far as possible, a blank. After "sozzling" in this state of relaxation for a few minutes, let us summon up a pleasant mental picture, and then allow a little smile, rippling over the face from opening eyes and parting lips, to gradually bring the features into place and expression. If one is afflicted with obstinate facial dejection or asperity this operation should be repeated several times. I have known it to work in most unpromising cases.

It is a lamentable fact that attractive coloring and a satiny texture of skin mean infinitely more to the ordinary run of women than do the stories their faces are weaving from "moods and tenses" and thought habits. And how short-sighted this preference is! These poor women completely forget that as the years go by the facial architecture alone will remain intact—that the tints must somewhat fade. The face is a fair temple, of which we are the builders. I think Emerson said this in a prettier and better phrase.—Chicago Journal.

FLOWERS, SHRUBS AND TREES.

SPIKES of pampas grass should be cut as soon as they are fully expended, if they are wanted for winter use for decorating the house.

OLD-FASHIONED hollyhocks have sprung into favor for decorative purposes since Mrs. W. K. Vanderbilt used them at the grand fete given at her marble house.

A HYBRID has been procured between Azalea mollis and A. viscosa which preserves the agreeable fragrance of our native plant with the bright colors of its Asiatic parent. A new race of sweet-scented azaleas would be a desirable addition to garden plants.

NO OTHER shrub equals the hydrangea paniculata grandiflora for making a display in August. The large heads of white flowers last for a long time, and when they fade it is to a light pink color which is still attractive, if not so much so as when white. Further than this, the heads may be cut later and used in their dried state as ornaments for the house, placed in vases.

The Age of Steam.

Ideas sometimes slumber for ages without fruition—like the grains of wheat found in the wrappings of Egyptian mummies. Two thousand years ago, one Hero, a philosopher of Alexandria, Egypt, made a steam turbine and a hot air engine. Their development went no farther than curious mechanical toys. It remained for men living seventeen hundred years later to see that the idea was applicable to doing the world's work. In fact, none tried to make human labor anything more than "main strength and awkwardness," until the seventeenth century. The first treatise on steam was published in 1601. In 1678 the first engine having a cylinder and piston was built. About that time some one operated an engine by successive explosions of gunpowder in the cylinder—the crude idea of our present gas engines. The great impulse to the steam engine was given in 1763, when James Watt invented the steam jacket to keep the cylinder always hot, and then the separate condensing chamber for the waste product. Think of it—only a century that the steam engine has been a practical worker—and now no part of the world but is reached by the steamer or the locomotive. Ten millions of people are served, ten great states are traversed, by the lines of the Burlington system, and but for the steam engine they would not have been. The moral is, to buy railroad tickets from the agents of the Burlington Route, or to write to W. J. C. Kenyon, Gen. Pass. Agent, St. Paul, Minn.

PALOUSE, BIG BEND, CHELAN.

These are the names of three great agricultural districts in eastern Washington, reached by the Northern Pacific Railroad.

THE FIRST lies south of Spokane and is a remarkable grain producing region, and one where fruits and vegetables attain great perfection. It is a noted country in the North-west.

THE SECOND is a very peculiar section, west of Spokane, so called because it is hemmed in on the west by a great bend of the Columbia River. It LOOKS good for nothing—the crops are MARVELS in appearance and yield. It is coming forward rapidly and land is cheap.

THE CHELAN REGION is west of the Big Bend, and on the other side of the Columbia River. It is proving to be a fruit country, equal to any on the Pacific Coast. It is in the midst of some of the finest scenery of the west.

"August Flower"

"For two years I suffered terribly with stomach trouble, and was for all that time under treatment by a physician. He finally, after trying everything, said my stomach was worn out, and that I would have to cease eating solid food. On the recommendation of a friend I procured a bottle of August Flower. It seemed to do me good at once. I gained strength and flesh rapidly. I feel now like a new man, and consider that August Flower has cured me." Jas. E. Dederick, Saugerties, N.Y.

KENNEDY'S MEDICAL DISCOVERY.

DONALD KENNEDY, OF ROXBURY, MASS.,

Has discovered in one of our common pasture weeds a remedy that cures every kind of Humor, from the worst Scrofula down to a common Pimple.

He has tried it in over eleven hundred cases, and never failed except in two cases (both thunder humor). He has now in his possession over two hundred certificates of its value, all within twenty miles of Boston.

A benefit is always experienced from the first bottle, and a perfect cure is warranted when the right quantity is taken.

When the lungs are affected it causes shooting pains, like needles passing through them; the same with the Liver or Bowels. This is caused by the ducts being stopped, and always disappears in a week after taking it.

If the stomach is foul or bilious it will cause squeamish feelings at first.

No change of diet ever necessary. Eat the best you can get, and enough of it. Dose, one tablespoonful in water at bedtime. Read the Label. Send for Book.

DELANO DIARY

—Brick $8 per 1000 at John Coolen's.

—To-morrow will be fairday in Delano.

—Attend the M. E. fair at the city hall this evening.

—The three blacksmith shops seem to be running at their full capacity; even after supper.

--Dr. J. J. Chaffee will preach at the M. E. church next Wednesday evening at 7:30. Let everybody come.

--Some farmers sold beef by the quarter in Delano on Wednesday for 5 cents for hind and 3 cents for four quarters.

--The G. N. has changed the time on the morning train east. It now leaves Delano at 5:18 a. m. A little early these cold mornings.

-If you want to get the highest prices for your Hogs, Veal, Poultry, Hides and Furs of all kinds bring them to L. W. Terry, at the Cargill Elevator. 2t

—On Monday Drs. Cady, of Buffalo, and Shrader, of this place, amputated three toes for I. Gutzwiller, Jr., on account of gangrene from a small ulcer.

—Read Hon. B. F. Christlieb's letter from California, in another column. He appears from this to be enjoying these cold frosty days in a balmy country.

—On Monday evening quite a thaw occurred. Some rain fell during the night, but by morning old winter was again on hand, as crisp and sprightly as ever.

--Wood is being hauled to town in abundance now, a little better sleighing would doubtless flush the market. Good hard maple and iron wood brings $3. Other kinds in proportion.

---Rev. William Wilkinson, who is to lecture here for the benefit of the school on Tuesday evening, was Chaplin in the House of Representatives the term before the last. He is worth hearing.

--The Juvenile Aid Society met on Saturday last and completed their work, which will be exhibited at the M. E. Fair to-night. The little folks have been very faithful in their work, and we hope success will crown their efforts.

—On Tuesday evening, Dec. 12, Rev Wm. Wilkinson, of Minneapolis, will deliver for the benefit of the school library, a lecture entitled, "Rome as I Saw It in 1891." Admission 20 cents. Seats reserved without extra charge at Wittman's.

--The ladies of the M. E. church will give a supper and entertainment on Friday evening, Dec. 8th, in the city hall. The supper will be followed by a sale of fancy and useful articles. Supper will be served at six o'clock; Tickets 25 cents, children 15 cents. The following programme has been provided:

--The Public Health for October was received this week. Two cases of small pox are reported from the town of Featherston, Goodhue county. The first case, that of a 11 years old boy who had been to the World's Fair and traveled in the east, and who was not vaccinated. The attending physician called it chicken-pox for four days, until Secretary Hewett was called and pronounced it confluent small pox. His unvaccinated sister was the other patient. Others escaped. This is another proof that every child should be vacinated unless there is a valid reason for not being. Especially when traveling. The epidemic of diphtheria in Red Wing, the home of Secretary Hewett, has about spent itself. Since July 27, 172 cases have been reported, 22 have died up to Nov. 22 when the report was made, and at which time 35 families were isolated, still on account of having had cases or having been exposed, there being but 6 active cases at that time.

DULUTH, Minn., Oct. 5, 1893.

REV. AND DEAR MR WILKINSON:

I gladly avail myself of the opportunity you give me of writing in your favor. As all who know you can testify you are an honorable man and a lover of right. While others preach a "gospel of hate," you are always on the side of justice to all, even to a Roman Catholic, and in these days that is very much. I am yours very sincerely, JAMES MCGOLRICH,
Bishop of Duluth.

Dame Rumor This Week Has Said

That woodpiles grow small uncommonly fast during the night, in some parts of town.

That people who were well, were sick, and that those who were sick were dead. Dame Rumor ought not be in too big a hurry to tell things, and tell them right.

That the Eagle force, without their chief, had to withstand the combined tongue lashings of a pair of people who felt injured by a publication in last week's issue.

LATER—That it was only one person but several trips.

That after a couple have spent the most of their lives together until they have passed the alloted time for man to live, and on borrowed time, are tottering down the shady side of life, the head of the house, "with one foot in the gravah and the other all butah," might be content to spend his last hours at his own home rather than at his neighbors.

Personals.

John Sturman is expected home this week.

Mrs. H.C. Budd, of Maple Plain is on the sick list this week.

J. K. Dick and Dell Young were in Minneapolis this week.

Oscar Ball has been confined to the house this week by sickness.

James Quinn, of Quinn's crossing, has been on the sick list for a week past.

Mrs. Staples and family, of Howard, spent part of the week with her mother in Delano.

F. Q. Lindsley, was seen at a resonably early hour on Sunday heading for Hanover.

Mrs. J. C. Hitz and family came up on Friday last and spent the week with Delano friends.

Harry Haines has recovered from his late indisposition and is again at his post in the telegraph office.

Riley Sturman was seen early Monday morning headed for Buffalo, where he spent the week courting.

Mrs. Jerome Teichnor visited her father's family Saturday night and was quarintined with the rest of the family.

Among passengers returning from the cities yesterday evening were Leon Frazee, John Brasie and Mrs. Cora Peters.

Messrs. H. S. and Clark Angel, of Litchfield, passed through town on Tuesday on their way to attend the funeral of their aunt, Mrs. Fuller, of Rockford.

Rev. J. W. Powell, Jr., of Fair Haven, came to Delano on Thursday for a visit with his parents and to participate in the M. E. entertainment this evening.

Rome as I Saw It in 1891.

This lecture tells of Rome in its earliest days, of its rise to the mightest power in the Ancient political world, and of its overthrow, by forces which we can clearly understand and define, of its Catacombs, Churches and Public Buildings, Imperial Palace of the Cæsars, the Coliseum, the Arch of Constantine and that of Titus, the Pantheon of the Church of St. Peter, with its high altar at which the Pope only says mass, the Vatican Art and Sculpture Galleries, the Roman Catholic and the Protestant Cemetaries, the Grave of Pope Pius the 9th, and much beside the perennial interest. This lecture is greatly praised by more than one eminent man who has spent long years in the Eternal City.

County Cullings.

District court is in session this week at Buffalo, with Judge Russell on the bench.

Congressman Baldwin, of the Sixth Minnesota district, is expected to prove to his constituents that he still believes in Democratic principles by supporting the Willson Tariff bill, which is now before Congress.

McKinley has been re-elected Governor of Ohio. Possibly that Soup House effusion from the Chairman of the Wright County Republican Committee had something to do with it, after all. But we have not yet heard of the Governor sending its Author a call to duty in his state. Still there is time yet.

We are informed that it costs the people of the United States each year, to be born, $25.000,000; to be married, $300,000,000; and to be burried, $75,000,000; while to get drunk the people pay $900,000.000. 'Tis also said that bill for drunks is larger than the bill for all the bread and meat consumed by the same people.—Journal of Materia Medica.

The Wiley Senator, at Buffalo, thinks we object to more of the "goose" tribe coming into the Democratic party. According to tradition when a goose gets its head through the fence it thinks its hid. The Senator got his through two years ago last fall, and probably thinks he's the sturdiest gander of the flock by this time.

Among Our Exchanges.

One of the New York newspapers lately gave prominence to a most imaginative article on disease of the vermiform appendix. The writer took the position that operations for that disease were done with unnecessary frequency, and cited a case in which an individual affected with it had declined surgical interference and had untimately "coughed up" his appendix —Journal of Materia Medica.

One of the meanest and most reprehensible things we know of is the circulation of false reports charging persons with being members of the A. P. A. This is especially wicked when aimed at men who are in business. It is not to be expected that people will patronize in a business way a tradesman who wants to deprive them of the rights and privileges of citizenship, and even of their daily employment. Any person who starts and circulates false rumors intended to injure a man's reputation and business is worse than a thief. It is simply outrageous. We hope there will be less of this kind of thing in Brainerd in the future than in the past.—Brainerd Journal.

To Conciliate Poles.

BERLIN, Dec. 1.—The governor of Posen has informed Archbishop Stablewsky that the Polish language may be used again in the elementry schools after Easter. This concession to the Polish national feeling is part of the emperior's policy of conciliation. It is regarded with great dissatisfaction by the Germans in East Prussia.—Minneapolis Times.

No More Football.

Prof. S. N. Greer, of the Central High school, is disgusted with football and if he can prevent it the young men of the institution will not indulge in the game next year. According to the principal's way of thinking the game resembles a prize fight in its brutality. He says it is growing worse every year, and he proposes to prevent the organization of a foot ball team in the school for next season.—Minneapolis Times.

Little by Little.

If you are gaining little by little every day, be content. Are your expenses less than your income, so that, though it be little, you are yet constantly accumulating, and growing richer every day? Be content, so far as concerns money, you are doing well.

Are you gaining knowledge every? Though it be little by little, the aggregate of the accumulation, where no day is permitted to pass without adding something to the stock, will be surprising to yourself.

Solomon did not become the wisest man in the world in a minute. Little by little—never ommitting to learn something, even for a single day—always reading, always studying a little between the time of rising in the morning and the time of lying down at night; this is the way to accumulate a full storehouse of knowledge.

Finally, are you daily improving in character? Be not discouraged because it is little by little. The best men fall far short of what they themselves would wish to be. It is something, it is much, if you keep your resolutions better to day than you did yesterday, better this year than you did last year. Strive to be perfect, but do not become disheartened so long as you are approaching nearer and nearer to the high standard at which you aim.

Little by little fortunes are accumulated; little by little, knowledge is gained; little by little, character and reputation are achieved.—National Weekly.

Thomas Jefferson.

Thomas Jefferson, our third President, traces his pedigree far back into English and Scotch houses of fame. The American record of the family begins with his grandfather, who owned some land in Chesterfield Co., Va. His father, Peter Jefferson, was a model frontiersman, tall and of extraordinary strength; hellth and vigor of mind. Peter was a fine surveyor, and was employed by the government to draw the boundary line between Virginia and North Carolina. He married the beautiful Jane Randolph, and died when Thomas was only 14, but not before he had greatly fashioned the boy's character.

The youth of Thomas Jefferson was a happy one. He finished his education at William and Mary College, was skilled in many sports, a good dancer, a fair musician and full of vitality. He had a fondness for mathematics, and studied law with the Chancellor of Virginia, George Wythe. In 1772 he married Mrs. Martha Shelton, a wealthy widow, and the daughter of the famous John Waylee, at whose death, the following year, the young people came into great property. Jefferson was not an orator, but he had the power of putting great principles into strong, luminous words, in which points few men have rivalled him; and when it became necessary to declare the right of independence Jefferson had the highest vote. The draft he prepared was taken into debate on the 2d of July, 1774, and on the evening of the ever-memorable Fourth it was signed by every member of the committee but Mr. Dickenson. In the spring of 1801 he took his seat as President, and after eight years of faithful service he retired forever to private life. The subject of education was the dearest form of patriotism his latest years know, and he was really the father of the University of Virginia. The great events marking Jefferson's presidency were the purchasing of Louisiana from the French, the expedition of Louis and Clark to survey the western territory, the brilliant acts of our navy in conflict with the Barbary powers, and the trial of Aaron Burr. He died on the same day as John Adams, July, 4, 1826, while the nation was celebrating the 15th anniversary of the Declaration of Independence which he had written.—Detroit Free Press.

LIFE'S INCONSISTENCIES.

THE AVERAGE MAN.

He vows his wife's extravagance
Alarms him and annoys;
Then "sets them up" at every chance
For crowds of thirsty boys.

THE AVERAGE WOMAN.

She says: "I thoroughly despise
Miss Smith—what, is she here?"
Then greets her with a kiss and cries:
"So glad to see you dear!"

THE PREACHER.

He preaches Christian charity
As far above all cost,
But all who don't with him agree
Evermore are lost!

THE POET.

He sings the sunshine hues of red,
The joys of early dawn,
And yet he never leaves his bed
'Till twelve o'clock each morn.

THE PHILANTHROPIST.

He sends forth missioners to go
To many a foreign land,
But heedth not the vice and woe
On Bleeker street or Grand.

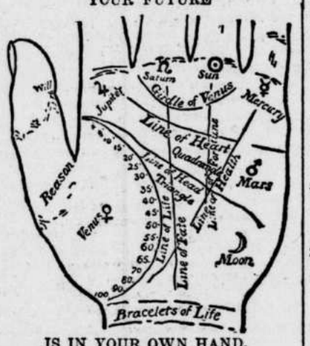
YOUR FUTURE



IS IN YOUR OWN HAND.

Palmistry assumes to tell what the lines in your hand indicate. It will amuse you, if nothing more. The above diagram almost explains itself. The length of the LINE OF LIFE indicates probable age to which you will live. Each BRACELET gives you thirty years. We marked LINE OF HEAD denotes brain power; clear LINE OF FORTUNE, fame or riches. Both combined mean success in life; but you must keep up with modern ideas to win it. You will find plenty of these in Demorest's Family Magazine, so attractively presented that every member of the family is entertained. It is a doz n magazines in one. A CLEAR LINE OF HEART bespeaks tenderness; a straight LINE OF FATE, peaceful life; the reverse if crooked. A well-defined LINE OF HEALTH spares you doctors' bills; so will the health hints in Demorest's. No other magazine publishes so many stories to interest the home circle. You will be subject to extremes of high spirits or despondency if you have the GIRDLE OF VENUS well marked keep up your spirits by having Demorest's Magazine to read. By subscribing to it for 1894 you will receive a gallery of exquisite works of art of great value, besides the superb premium picture, 17x21 inches, "I'm a Daisy!" which is almost a real baby, and equal to the original oil painting which cost $3 00; and you will have a magazine that cannot be equaled by any in the world for its beautiful illustrations and subject matter, that will keep you posted on all the topics of the day, and all the fads, and different items of interest about the household, besides furnishing interesting reading matter, both grave and gay, for the whole family; and while Demorest's is not a fashion magazine, its fashion pages are perfect, and you get with it, free of cost, all the pattern you wish to use during the year, and in any size you choose. Send in your subscription at once, only $2.00, and you will really get over $25 00 in value. Address the publisher, W. Jennings Demorest, 15 East 14th St., New York. If you are unacquainted with the Magazine, send for a specimen copy. A large QUADRANGLE means honesty; a large TRIANGLE, generosity; large FIRST DIVISION OF THUMB, strong will; LONG SECOND DIVISION, reasoning faculty. The MOUNT OF JUPITER betokens ambition; that of SATURN, prudence; the SUN, love of splendor; MARS, courage; MOON, imagination; VENUS, love of pleasure; and MERCURY, intelligence. Take our advice as above and you will be sure to possess the last and most valuable quality.

THE SONG OF THE "No. 9."

My dress is of fine polished oak,
As rich as the finest fur cloak,
And for handsome design
You just should see mine—
No. 9, No. 9.

I'm beloved by the poor and the rich,
For both I impartially stitch;
In the cabin I shine,
In the mansion I'm fine—
No. 9, No. 9.

I never get surly nor tired,
With zeal I always am fired;
To hard work I incline,
For rest I ne'er pine—
No. 9, No. 9.

I am easily purchased by all,
With instalments that monthly do fall;
And when I am thine,
Then life is benign—
No. 9, No. 9.

To the Paris Exposition I went,
Upon getting the Grand Prize intent:
I left all behind,
The Grand Prize was mine—
No. 9, No. 9.

At the Universal Exposition of 1889, at Paris, France, the best sewing machines of the world, including those of America, were in competition. They were passed upon by a jury composed of the best foreign mechanical experts, two of whom were the leading sewing machine manufacturers of France. This jury, after exhaustive examination and tests, adjudged that the Wheeler & Wilson machines were the best of all, and awarded that company the highest prize offered—the GRAND PRIZE—giving other companies only gold, silver and bronze medals.

The French government, as a further recognition of superiority, decorated Mr. Nathaniel Wheeler, president of the company, with the Cross of the Legion of Honor—the most prized honor of France.

The No. 9, for family use, and the No. 12, for manufacturing uses, are the best in the world to-day.

And now, when you want a sewing machine, if you do not get the best it will be your own fault. Ask your sewing machine dealer for the No 1 Wheeler & Wilson machine. If he doesn't keep them, write to us for descriptive catalogue and terms. Agents wanted in all unoccupied territory. WHEELER & WILSON MFG. CO. Chicago, Ill

SCHEIG AND FLOYD have got home from their little trip to England. Scheig pled guilty and the Floyd boys are to stand trial.

THE more the Hawaiian annexation scheme comes to light the more it looks like a scheme of the enterprising Yankee to obtain wealth by securing a bounty on sugar raised in those islands.

THE youngest journal to come to our exchange table is the first number of the School Mirror published by members of the High school of Litchfield. It is a source of pleasure and profit to the school, if not financially, in other ways

SABBATH breaking and other wicked things are receiving a great deal of attention at the hands of ministers, aldermen and other law abiding citizens in our neighboring cities. That is right, agitate the thing until the right prevails.

THE Mankato Review came to us this week with a boom edition setting forth the advantages and improvements of that city. The paper is a credit to the city and another evidence of the enterprise of the veteran editor, John C. Wise, and sons.

AND now Senator David B. Hill, of York State, and a few Republican leaders are taking up the time of Congress quarreling over the election laws instead of pushing the tariff bill along as rapidly as possible. Anything to keep the brakes well down on that particular bill seems to be the main object of some individuals. Tariff is a tax all the same.

THE pine land suit has been decided in favor of the State and against C. A. Smith & Co. Republican papers appear to be giving the honor to Gov. Nelson, Judge Searle and Bob Dunn. What has become of the committee appointed by the legislature, I. Donnelly, A. Y. Eaton and company, and who were to find out about the crookedness in these matters.

THE income tax don't appear to take very well with Democrats. It looks like class legislation, and if as some one has suggested most of the big incomes come from "protected industries" the way to get at them is to not legislate in their favor and it will not be necessary to legislate against them. Free and equal rights to all and licenses and privileges to none goes better.

CERTAINLY no nation ever possessed the heterogenious quality existing in ours. We have citizens among us from every clime. Men who have forsaken their own native lands to become members of this great and grand free republic. Men of all religious and beliefs and those professing to have none. All known secrete societies and those who think the world would be better off without any. Men who want a strong government and those who say the best governed people are those who are governed the least. And out of this class comes one of the best governments of the age.

IF the authorities at Washington would take the bounty off of sugar we think they would take the sweets of annexation from the mouths of the Hawaiian annexation howlers.

JUEGE CHARLES E. FLANDRAU, of St. Paul, seems to have the inside track for the nomination for Governor, on the Democratic ticket, next fall. The Judge would make a lively run and hold down the Executive Chair as well as any man in the State.

How It Should Be.

When a political party comes together to place in nomination a man to fill an important place it should be careful to select, in every instance, so far as possible a representative man; a man who is well known to hold dear the principles on which that party is founded. Who will honestly uphold these principles at all times, even though he stand alone in doing so among the delegates assembled. If it be the Prohibition party, a Prohibitionist should be nominated. It is not the question what religious belief he holds to, but, Is he a Prohibitionist? If the convention is of the Populistic persuasion the question then is, Is he a populist? Not is he a German; an Englishman or a Scandinavian? If the Republicans have come together to nominate a ticket they should not say, Is he a Pressbyterian or a Catholic? Does he belong to the Hibernean rifles or the A. P. A. but, Is he a Republican? In a Democratic convention the question should be, Is he an honest, tried Democrat? Will he support the principles he believes? Not is he a Protestant or a Catholic? Is he a Mason or a Methodist? Is he Dutch, Irish, French or other foreign blood, so long as he is capable, honest and believes in the principles of the party, cuts no particular figure. None of the religious or other societies should govern a man in his choice of the best man for the place. But it is too plain a fact, though all societies profess to have no control of the politics of its members, that he allows this fact that they are brothers in a society or a church, or a member of the same nation to outweigh their political principles, and to cause him to vote for a man on the opposition ticket. This is wrong. If you are a member of some society you want your best representative men to hold the position of trust and honor. You don't ask them what church or what nation or anything else they belong to so long as they are representative members of the societ that is holding the election.

FROM CALIFORNIA.

Basking in Sunshine--Meets Minnesotians.

LOS ANGELES, Cal. Dec. 7.

MR. EDITOR:—I trust that your readers will overlook my frequent references to California weather as it is not my intention to commiserate my Minnesota friends on the zero weather that they have been experiencing of late when I am basking in California's warm sunshine, or rather suffering with its heat when too far from a shady retreat, refering to the weather only as an interesting comparison. While the latter part of November was cool enough generally to compel people in walking or taking a ride in a vehicle to wear light overcoats or wraps, December has set in with much warmer weather, the mercury ascending every day to about 88 degrees and dropping to about 50 or 60 degrees during nights. In warm weather almost any temperature can be found in this city. If too warm in the sunshine the pedestrian will find it cooler on the shady side of the street where sometimes it is almost too cool, necessitating the use of a light overcoat which the pedestrian seems to have mostly hanging on his arm. With all the fine weather I notice many coughing and expectorating, apparantly suffering with colds, which creates a doubt in the strangers mind as to whether this is a good place for breast troubles as is claimed for it. Many residents insist however, to have been benefited by the climate of Los Angeles.

On December first, I visited your former towns-people, Mr. and Mrs. F. A. Atwater, at Clearwater, a settlement situated between this city and the ocean, about 16 miles distant. I found them in the enjoyment of good health and spirits. Near them are situated their two sons, one a physician and the other a dentist, and also a married daughter They are entertaining at present their son-in-law and daughter, Dr. and Mrs. Kingsbury and family, of Sidney, Australia. I was informed that Miss Iza Kerr is in this country at present, having been a guest at times of the Atwater's.

This city has a number of railroads of the various kinds; standard and narrow-guage and street railways, electric, cable and horse, all radiating in various directions and connecting with numerous towns in southern California and merging into through lines in different parts of the Union. The street railways, while they give good service are not furnished with so elaborate and handsome cars as Tom Lowry's lines in the Twin Cities of Minnesota. This city and county have their city hall and court house seperate. They are fine buildings constructed of red stone in a modern style of arctitecture, resembling the St. Paul city hall and court house.

There are populists here as well as elsewhere. A few days ago I witnessed a populist county convention, several of our ex-Minnesotians being delegates. It was a large and spirited assembly, advocating a radical coruse for their party to pursue in carrying out populist ideas. B. F. C.

Hennepin County's Superintendency.

Leon D. Brown, the well known general manager of the Twin City School Supply Co., Minneapolis, is mentioned very frequently by Hennepin county people now-a-days as a possible candidate for superintendent of schools to succeed James A. Lewis. Mr. Brown's supply store in the Boston Block has long been a popular headquarters for teachers and school officers of the county who appear to hold the genial manager in very high esteem. Mr. Brown is a democrat to the core, and his standing as an educator and a gentleman is said to be such that there cannot be the least doubt that he will be nominated if he will consent to stand for the office. The country has claimed the nominee for school superintendent heretofore but there has always been such a dearth of good material to select candidates from in the rural districts that the county has never had but three good superintendents—Pribble, Smith and McConnell. The latter two were city men. Pribble is now almost an octogenarian and thought too old to make the race for the first place. McConnell will in all probability receive the Republican nomination six months hense. He is a very strong man, and it is not at all improbable that Mr. Brown will promise the second place to Pribble and avail himself, as Lewis did of the old man's strength in the north. But there is a strong public confidence that there will be no broken promise this time, as Mr. Brown, happily, is popularly considered to be an hohorable man. X.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

(From our Regular Correspondent.)

WASHINGTON, D. C., Dec. 8, 1893.

Secretary Carlisle has not yet completed his annual report and does not expect to finish it before next week. It will probably be one of the longest and most comprehensive papers of its kind ever submitted to Congress, owing to the bad condition in which the republicans left the finances of the country. The absence of this report, although not the only reason, was one of the principal reasons for the delay in getting the new tariff bill before the House. It would have been sufficient of itself, and it is necessary for the report to be in the hands of members before they take up the tariff.

Chairman Wilson's present intention is to report the tariff bill to the House next Wednesday, and he hopes to be able to make public its twin measure, the internal revenue bill, at about the same time. The last named bill would have been ready before this had not the revised estimates of the officials of the Treasury department shown that the deficiency in revenue caused by the reductions in duties and extention of the free list made by the new tariff bill would be in the neighborhood of $60,000,000, which was some $25,000,000 more than has been estimated by the Ways and Means committee. This, of course, necessitated a revision of the internal revenue bill, which is to be made to supply the deficiency caused by the tariff bill. Among the new propositions submitted to the committee this week was one from Representative Hatch, of Missouri, to tax the transactions of the stock and produce exchanges, instead of the earnings of corporations, which had been previously agreed upon by the committee. Mr. Hatch thinks such a tax would be felt less than any yet proposed.

As there is no estimate for the expenses of the Bureau of American Republics in the figures submitted by Secretary Gresham, for the next fiscal year, it is safe to say that there will soon be no Bureau of American Republics. It was a sort of a side attachment to the beautiful on-paper-Blaine reciprocity programme. Its cost has been annually about $30,000, principally for salaries, and the benefit it has been to the country has been undiscoverable. Secretary Morton regards the money spent at the 48 agricultural experimental stations—one in each state and territory—as largely wasted, and having recommended in his annual report that they be abolished he left the $720,000 which it would require to run them out of his estimates for next year.

The probability of a change in the Senate rules is very slight although there are several proposed amendments now before the committee on Rules, of which Senator Blackburn, of Kentucky, is chairman. The other democrats on the committee are Senators Harris, of Tennessee, and Gorman of Maryland. The action of the republican caucus in deciding not to filibuster to prevent a vote on the Willson tariff bill when it gets to the Senate has weakened the desire for a change to a noticeable extent.

Governor-elect O'Ferrall, of Virginia, will retain his seat in the House until the Christmas recess, as his resignation will not take effect until the 28th inst. He will be inaugurated Governor on the first day of January and will, contrary to custom, deliver an inaugural address, something that has been done by only one other governor since the war. He has been warmly congratulated by his colleagues with whom he is deservedly popular.

Congress got down to work very smoothly. The regular business in the House is the Oate's bankruptcy bill, which will be disposed of late this week or early in the coming week. The Senate has listened to some stump speeches on the Hawaiian question, and taken up its routine work in the usually leisurely manner. A concurrent resolution was unanimously adopted by Congress accepting the bronze statue of Gen. James Shields, which was unveiled by a daughter of Gen. Shields, in the Statuary Hall of the Capitol, Wednesday afternoon, and thanking Illinois for having presented the statue. The ceremonies attending the unveiling were imposing and interesting and were participated in by a large number of prominent people, including Gov. Altgeld, whose oration in honor of the "warrior, jurist and statesman" made a splendid impression upon those who heard it.

It is not probable that any of the regular appropriation bills will be reported until it can be seen from the tariff and internal revenue bills just how much revenue there will be to draw against, although Chairman Sayere of the Appropriations committee has several of them in a condition to be reported at an hour's notice.

The evidence accumulates in regard to the value of wheat as a feed for hogs. This is the experience of one farmer as related in the Stockman, in feeding wheat to his pigs. He had a litter of eight pigs April 25—half Chester White and half Poland China. They were fed some bran and slop with their mother until six weeks old, when they were weaned and weighed, averaging 34 pounds. He then began feeding wheat, soaked in water until it became soft. At first he fed three quarts a day at three feeds, increasing until he reached twelve quarts a day. He continued this until Aug. 25, when they were weighed and six of them sold, the lot of eight averaging 90 pounds, an aggregate gain of 520 pounds on 19½ bushels of wheat. That is to say 19½ bushels of wheat produced 520 pounds of live hogs, which were worth in St. Paul market about 5½ cents per pound, or in the aggregate $28.60, equal to $1 46 ber bushel for the wheat. Why are farmers selling wheat for 60 cents or less?—Pioneer Press.

WE HAVE Established Headquarters at

DELANO

And expect to be here for the next FOUR MONTHS. We sell the BEST RANGE in the World and took more premiums at the World's Fair than any other firm there when every stove firm in the land was represented. All we ask of you is to go and examine the dealers Range and then exanine ours, and if you don't say we have the cheapest and best Range made, why don't deal with us. We expect the dealers to kick and the more they kick the better we like it. They do the kicking and we sell the Ranges. We have sold over one housand Ranges in this State this year and you can write and ask anyone using our goods about their merits, and we refer you to any Bank in St. Louis as to our standing.

A BOSTONIAN recently deceased left a collection of autographs valued at $25,000. This is nothing. We know of several gentlemen whose autographs would bring a million dollars—if signed at the bottom of a bank check.

FROM Asia and Africa come complaints that the elephant is becoming extinct and from Florida comes the cry that the alligators are in danger of extermination. It is estimated that during the last dozen years 2,500,000 alligators have been killed in the waters of that state.

THE center of gravity is a troublesome thing all through life. Small boys are often obliged to tie weeds and sticks to the tails of their kites in order to secure the proper balance, and venerable Uncle Sam is forced to load some of his new gunboats with cement to prevent them from turning flip-flaps.

THE secretary of war reports 25,778 enlisted men in our army and 2,144 officers. This is apparently a very small business beside the European military establishments but our little army is only a nucleus. In sixty days the government could mobilize an army as big as Germany's war footing. Yet we do not make any fuss about it.

THE term "boodler" has received a judicial definition in Montreal, where, in confirming the judgment of a lower court that awarded $500 damages to a plaintiff who had been called a boodler by the defendant, the court of review says "boodlers means the very meanest class of thieves." Coming from Montreal, this may be regarded as authoritative.

A MAN named Daniel Taylor was fined $20 by a court at Bromley, Kent, England, October 30, for docking a mare's tail as a matter of fancy, there being no surgical necessity for the operation. It was not charged that the operation was unskillfully performed. The judges held that it is cruelty ipso facto to mutilate an animal without some reason.

WOMEN are hereafter to be admitted to all the classes in Harvard, the separate schools heretofore maintained having been abolished. The governors of the institution are satisfied that women can hold their own with masculine students in nearly every department of education, and propose to give them a chance, at any rate, to demonstrate their capacity.

BY the death of Prof. John Tyndall, of London, the world has lost one of the most eminent men of science that this century has produced. His investigations were fundamental in their character and popular in their exposition, and his works were read and comprehended by all men of average intelligence. His "Natural Philosophy in Easy Lessons" was adopted throughout the English-speaking world as a text book of scientific inquiry, and contributed largely to the sum of human knowledge.

THE triple screw commerce destroying cruiser Columbia has shown herself capable of overtaking any seagoing vessel now afloat. The great speed of the new Cunard steamers, the Lucania and the Campania, has been relied on, says the New York Herald, to secure their safety against a foreign foe. It may be so as long as the United States is not the enemy. But with the Columbia in its wake there is no steamer that can keep the sea capable of escaping our latest navy shipbuilding success.

BELLE BOYD, the rebel spy, famous duing the war, has gone on the lecture platform. She is now past 50 years of age, and her reddish blonde hair has become almost white. She has three children and is divorced from her third husband. She is chiefly remembered from her scheme by which she caused Lieut. Harding of the federal army to permit a confederate officer to escape, after which Harding deserted the union army and fled to England, where he married Miss Boyd. A short time after both returned and became spies in the confederate service.

THE city marshal of Boston sixty years ago arrested one William Doyle and found in his possession a deposit book on a savings bank showing that the prisoner had deposited $60 there. The city marshal took possession of the book; Doyle served his term after sentence and was then lost to sight. Long after it was learned that he died in Charleston, Mass., leaving no known heir. Five years ago legal proceedings were instituted, publications were made and no claimant appeared. The sum on deposit, increased to about $2,100, was turned over to Massachusetts.

IT appears, according to the registration report of Massachusetts, that nearly twice as many women as men in that state live to be over 80 years of age. This is accounted for by the greater exposure of men to accidents, to weather agencies, to the constant strain of business life, to the anxiety of providing for the family, all of which tend to shorten the life of men. The deaths by accident among men are more than threefold greater than among women and men commit suicide in about a threefold ratio as compared with women.

A TRAIN ATTACKED.

Bandits Commit a Robbery Near Austin, Tex.

They Loot the Safe in the Express Car, Then Force the Passengers, Through Brutal Treatment, to Hand Over Their Cash and Valuables.

THEY ESCAPE WITH MUCH BOOTY.

ST. LOUIS, Dec. 13.—A special from Austin, Tex., says the cannon-ball train No. 2 on the International & Great Northern railway was robbed by six men at Duval Sunday midnight. The express safe was looted of its contents and passengers were robbed of their money and other valuables. It is not known what the express company's loss is. The total amount secured is estimated to be from $1,000 to $5,000.

The train was stopped by the turning of a switch by the robbers, and the fireman, not obeying orders with the alacrity required, was shot in the shoulder. About fifty shots were fired into the engine, baggage and express cars and the mail car was also riddled, but not robbed. The engineer and fireman were ordered to call for the opening of the express car. This was done as soon as the engineer's voice was recognized. The baggagemaster and express messenger were stationed alongside the car and forced to hold up their hands nearly an hour by two of the bandits, who stood guard over them. One of the shots fired entered and broke Fireman Corrigan's right arm, but he was compelled to hold up the stump until he fell to the ground exhausted.

The robbers were very profane and brutal to the men and women in the coaches and struck some of them over the head with their pistols because they had so little money. The sleepers were not entered. It is believed the robbers got only a few hundred dollars all told. It being a Sunday night train it is thought the express had but little money aboard.

Three men passed through the coaches while those on the outside kept up a constant and rapid fire, intimidating passengers, many of whom, when the bandits entered, were hiding under the seats. But the robbers made all deliver money, watches and finger rings. One man did the robbing while the others held six-shooters.

Charles Turner, a 'bus agent, saved his watch and money by throwing it under the stove. When the second passenger coach was entered one robber left a package on the coal box, and after the robbery it was discovered to be an express package containing $800. The robbers did not enter the sleeper. Messenger Ruffinger does not know how much money the express safe contained, but the run on Sunday night is light.

After going through the train the robbers got away as quickly as possible in the darkness toward the mountains. The amount of the booty is variously estimated at from $1,000 to $5,000. It is suspected that the gang is the same that made the big haul at Plano, Tex. Officers have gone in pursuit. Messenger Ruffinger thinks there were six men in the gang. They all wore masks. It took thirty minutes to complete the job. The bandits were very abusive and seemed to be drunk cursing and striking passengers at will.

HE IS DEAD.

Ex-Congressman Murphy, of Iowa, Passes Away at Washington.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 13.—Ex-Congressman Jerry Murphy, of Davenport, Ia., died here Monday morning a few minutes after midnight, but his death was not unexpected. He came here from Iowa about three months ago and was soon after taken ill with dropsy, and continued to grow worse till the end came. Mr. Murphy's identification with the Hennepin canal scheme gave him a reputation all over the world, and from the time he entered congress, about twelve years ago, until his late illness he has been the ablest and most persistent advocate of that enterprise.

[Mr. Murphy was born at Lowell, Mass., February 19, 1835. He was educated in the schools of Boston and the University of Iowa to which state his parents moved before he had reached his majority. He studied law and was admitted to practice in 1858, and he had practiced the profession ever since. In 1873 he was elected mayor of Davenport as a democrat and two years later became a member of the state senate, holding the office four years. He was again elected mayor in 1879. He was elected to the Forty-eighth congress, defeating S. S. Farwell, and was reelected to the Forty-ninth congress.]

FLOODS IN WASHINGTON.

Many Residents of Colfax Rescued in Boats—Ebberton Inundated.

COLFAX, Wash., Dec. 13.—The North Palouse river has overflowed its borders and flooded the north end of Colfax. Sunday night about 10 o'clock word was received from Palouse that the dam there had washed out, releasing a flood of water. By midnight the water was rising rapidly and by 3 o'clock had risen 10 feet, overflowing the flat in which were 100 residences in the north end, taking out a heavy wagon bridge and boom by which 1,000,000 feet of logs were held. The water invaded the houses, the residents of which had to be taken out in boats. Outhouses, fences and small bridges were washed away. The city water works, supply and pumping station are inundated. Reports from down the river are that a number have been lost.

Death of Ex-Gov. Jackson.

PARKERSBURG, W. Va., Dec. 13.—Jacob Beeson Jackson, governor of West Virginia for four years from 1880, died suddenly Monday afternoon while sitting in his arm chair at his home here. He had felt slightly ill during the morning. He started to his office after dinner but turned back. Reaching home he sat down in his chair while his wife went for the family physician. He died before the doctor and his wife arrived. He had held almost every office in the gift of the people from mayor of Parkersburg to governor of the state.

Cochran Sentenced.

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 13.—Henry S. Cochran, the ex-chief weigher of the Philadelphia mint who was recently convicted of stealing $135,000 worth of gold bullion from the institution, has been sentenced to seven years and six months' imprisonment in the eastern penitentiary.

To Seek Out Fraudulent Pensioners.

BOSTON, Dec. 13. — Commander in Chief Adams, of the G. A. R., has issued an official circular asking all comrades to report any person known to be in receipt of a pension to which he is not entitled.

IN LABORS' BEHALF.

Opening of the Convention of the American Federation.

CHICAGO, Dec. 13.—There were nearly 100 delegates in the council chamber in the city hall at 10 a. m. when the thirteenth annual convention of the American Federation of Labor was called to order by President Samuel Gompers. That the delegates realized the meeting was one of unusual importance was evidenced by the deep interest that was manifested even in the perfunctory preliminary work of organizing the convention. The early session was devoted to receiving reports and reading the call for the meeting. This call was notable for its reference to the present depression in the labor market and the suffering among all classes of workmen.

Gov. Altgeld and Mayor Swift had been announced as speakers at the opening session by the local committee on arrangements, but President Gompers, on learning of this, notified each that they would not be called upon to address the gathering, because the constitution of the federation provides that no public officials shall address its conventions.

After calling the convention to order President Gompers introduced J. J. McGrath, of the Chicago Trade and Labor Assembly, who made an informal address of welcome. He was followed in a similar address by W. C. Pomeroy, vice president of the local trade and labor assembly. M. H. Madden, president of the Illinois state federation, followed, and President Gompers responded to these addresses.

President Gompers' annual address, delivered during the afternoon session, was long and exhaustive. It handled at length almost every question of interest to labor. Concerning the industrial and financial depression Mr. Gompers said that its causes were to be traced to the extraordinary activity of manufactures after their emergence from the panic of 1873. The markets were glutted with products. The federation early foresaw the difficulties that confronted the people and in 1884 started the movement for the reduction of the hours of labor. The movement was frustrated in 1886, but resumed in 1890. Had not the capitalistic classes so vigorously opposed it the panic of 1893 would not have been known.

President Gompers thought the present depression was having a deleterious effect upon labor organizations. "It is no exaggeration to say," he declared, "that more than 3,000,000 of our fellow toilers throughout the country are without employment."

On the subject of the advisability of the federation taking political action he said:

"The last convention recommended to the organized workmen that they take such action politically as shall secure the best results to labor and place the movement upon a higher plane. I desire to record not only that in my judgment the trend will soon be in that direction, but that every earnest effort made has met with the cooperation of the members of the executive council. An intelligent use of the ballot by the toilers must largely contribute to lighten the burdens of our economic struggles. Let us elect men from the ranks of labor to represent us in congress and the legislatures whenever and wherever the opportunity offers. Let us never be recreant to our trust, and regardless of political affiliations or predilections always vote against those whose interests are inimical to labor."

The address also contained some pertinent remarks on the car-coupler law, the Chinese exclusion act, government ownership of the telegraph, railroad strikes, child labor and other matters of industrial interest.

The report of Secretary Evans was mainly interesting from the fact that it furnished a detailed statement of the money received and expended in the interest of the Homestead legal defense fund. During the year ending October 31 charters were granted to 208 various labor organizations, six of which were national unions. Several amendments to the constitution were suggested by the secretary.

The report of Treasurer John B. Lennon, which was also submitted, showed that the total income for the year ending October 31 was $21,487.14, and the total expenses $17,818.40, leaving a balance of $3,668.74. This balance, with the unexpended residue of the Homestead fund, makes the total cash in the treasurer's hands $7,147.44.

DISMISSED.

Contrary to His Wishes the Case Against Judge Jenkins Is Dropped.

MILWAUKEE, Dec. 13.—Against the vigorous objections of Judge Jenkins District Attorney Hammel entered a nolle prosequi as to all indictments found by the grand jury against him. This means that he is no longer a defendant in the proceedings against the directors of the Plankinton bank, of which he is a member. The matter came up before Judge D. H. Johnson, of the circuit court, on a motion made by Judge Jenkins through his counsel, ex-Senator John C. Spooner, for a separate and early trial. The motion was granted, and District Attorney Hammel said he was not willing to try Judge Jenkins alone, as he was certain that by a separate trial he could not convict him, and therefore he would nolle the proceedings. Mr. Spooner objected to this action on the part of the district attorney and beseeched him not to nolle the proceedings, but to give Judge Jenkins a chance to vindicate himself and his name before the people by a trial of the case on its merits. District Attorney Hammel said he could not comply with ex-Senator Spooner's request and added that he thought Judge Jenkins had the best defense of any of those indicted.

IN A RECEIVER'S HANDS.

The Manufacturing Firm of C. Aultman & Co. Fails.

CANTON, O., Dec. 13.—The business of C. Aultman & Co., manufacturers of engines, threshers and other farming implements, has gone into the hands of receivers, William A. Lynch and Robert A. Miller being appointed. The company, it is understood, is entirely solvent, as its assets are not far from $2,700,000, while its liabilities are about $1,000,000. The application for a receiver was made by Lewis Miller, of Akron, the president of the company.

Eugene Kelly & Co. to Dissolve.

NEW YORK, Dec. 13.—The old and well-known banking house of Eugene Kelly & Co. will be dissolved in the spring. The firm consists of Mr. Kelly, its head, his two sons, Edward and Eugene, and Joseph A. Donohoe, of San Francisco, the head of the Donohoe-Kelly Banking company of that city. Eugene Kelly's fortune is estimated at $10,000,000

Eight Persons Killed.

BELGRADE, Dec. 13.—An explosion occurred in the arsenal, owing to the careless removal of some cartridges. Eight persons were killed.

CHANGES IN THE TARIFF.

Important Revisions Made by the Majority of the Committee.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 13.—The ways and means committee have changed the time when the tariff bill will go into effect, from March 1 to June 1, 1894. The revised bill was laid before the committee Monday morning. The changes which have been made during two weeks have been noted from time to time, the most important being pearl buttons and tin plate. Members of the majority of the committee say that the changes are mostly from ad valorem to specific duties.

A tax on incomes is settled beyond a peradventure, but its form and scope are yet to be determined by the majority members of the committee.

The following is given as the corrected and official list of the changes since the first publication of the bill:

Collodion from $1 a pound to 45 per cent. ad valorem. Ether, sulphuric, from 25 to 35 cents per pound. Lead and lead products changed from ad valorem to one-half the present specific rates. Magesic firebrick, $1 per ton. Pottery classification changed and rates made 35 and 40 per cent. Ferro-manganese from 22½ per cent. to 10 per cent. Common black plate from 35 per cent. ad valorem to a specific duty of 9-10 cent.

Tin plate from an ad valorem duty of 40 per cent. to a specific duty of 1 1-5 cents per pound, taking effect October 1. Wire from 30 to 35 cents. Lead sheets, etc., made specific at 1¼ cents a pound.

Lumber—Duties are restored on plain lumber at the rate of 50 cents a thousand feet for each side planed; $1 for planed, tongued and grooved on one side; and $1.50 when planed, tongued and grooved on both sides.

Malt, from 20 per cent. to 25 per cent. Oranges, 8 cents per cubic foot capacity. Chocolate confectionery, from 2 cents per pound to 25 per cent. ad valorem. Champagne, restored to the present rates. Twine of hemp into basket, clause increased from 10 per cent. to 30 per cent. Oilcloth, from 20 per cent. to 25 per cent. Linens, laces, etc., from 35 to 40 per cent. Carpets, except Aubusson or Brussels, increased 5 per cent. Combed silk, which is now on the free list, is restored to the dutiable list at half the present rate, 25 cents a pound. Brushes and feather dusters from 25 to 30 per cent. Pearl buttons from 40 per cent to one cent per line and 15 per cent ad valorem. Jewelry increased from 25 to 35 per cent. Ivory, sawed or cut into logs only, placed on the free list. Petroleum, crude or refined, is made free if the country producing it admits ours free. Original drawings and sketches and artists' proofs of etchings and engravings and statuary of wood are added to the free art clause. Mother-of-pearl, sawed and cut, is taken from the free list and left among the manufacture of pearl.

The limit of wearing apparel which may be brought in free is reduced from $500 to $250.

Cotton thread, yarn warps, or warp yarn, whether single or advanced beyond the condition of single by grouping or twisting two or more single yarns together, whether in beams or in bundles, skeins or cops, or in any other form, except spool thread or cotton, hereinafter provided for, valued at not exceeding 12 cents a pound, 30 per cent. ad valorem; valued at over 12 cents per pound and not exceeding 20 cents per pound, 25 per cent. ad valorem; valued at over 20 cents per pound and not exceeding 30 cents per pound, 30 per cent. ad valorem; valued at 30 cents and not exceeding 40 cents per pound 35 per cent.; valued at over 40 cents per pound, 40 per cent. ad valorem. Burlaps, 15 per cent.

A BIG SHORTAGE.

An Indiana Insurance Company Suffers Heavy Loss.

LA PORTE, Ind., Dec. 13.—The affairs of the Knox Mutual Insurance company are in a chaotic condition. The examination of the books of the company revealed a shortage of upward of $120,000. The continued absence of three principal officers of the corporation has only served to make the collapse complete, and to disclose to the policy holders the result of misplaced confidence.

The failure of a bank could not have caused greater consternation. Knox is a village of 1,000 inhabitants, the county seat of Starke county, and the fire insurance company bearing the town name was its pillar of strength in the commercial world. George A. Scott, president and treasurer; Benjamin Andrews, secretary, and Cornelius W. Green, expert accountant, are reported missing. Scott was ostensibly called east on business connected with the company. Secretary Andrews, who represented Scott in his absence, found the need of assistance, and Cornelius W. Green, an expert accountant, was engaged. Andrews then disappeared and last Tuesday Green was summoned to the southern part of the state to settle a loss.

The leaving of the affairs of the company without an official head caused speculation to be indulged in by the board of directors, composed of leading business men of the town, and the result of secret meetings was a careful investigation of the books of the company. The discovery was made that the funds available were in possession of the officers, and that every step in the management of the business had been directed to the collection of policy premiums. The work of Green and his associates was to this end, and the success of their undertaking is apparent when it is stated that every available dollar was collected.

In the meantime numerous messages of inquiry have been received from policy holders. It is possible that the aggregated value of policies placed by the company will reach $2,000,000. The business prospered under Scott's management. The board of directors have taken steps to have the books thoroughly investigated.

The company made little effort to secure business in Indiana, the field of its operations being largely in the western states. Since sober judgment has asserted itself, the causes leading to the collapse of the company are readily apparent. The three officers lived in luxury, are said to have speculated largely and to have indulged many wild fancies.

IOWA'S VOTE.

The Official Canvass Ended—Jackson's Plurality 32,210.

DES MOINES, Ia., Dec. 13.—The official canvass of the votes cast at the election for state officers is finished. The following are the totals: For governor—Jackson, 207,089; Boies, 174,879; Joseph, 23,888; Mitchell, 10,332; Jackson's plurality over Boies, 32,210, lacking 2,010 votes of being a majority. Gov. Boies led the democratic ticket, going fully 3,000 more votes than any of his associates. The republican candidates all have a larger plurality than at any former election since 1881.

Ives Wins the First.

NEW YORK, Dec. 13.—The triangular billiard tourney between Ives, Schaefer and Slosson began in Madison Square concert hall Monday night, the first game being between Ives and Slosson. The former won by a score of 600 to 500. His average was 50, and his highest run 144. Slosson averaged 41⅝, his highest run being 164.

Man and Horses Burned to Death.

MERCED, Cal., Dec. 13. — Fire destroyed Jacob Stearing's livery stable. Loss, $40,000. An unknown man, supposed to be William Murphy, and nine horses burned to death.

Impure Blood Causes Catarrh

"I have been troubled with catarrh for over ten years, with dull headache nearly all the time. After taking three bottles of Hood's Sarsaparilla, I am cured of catarrh and clear of the headache. I was also troubled with a scaly disease, which was very annoying, four or five years. Since taking Hood's Sarsaparilla I do not have any trace of this trouble. I sleep well, have a good appetite and feel strong." J. M. CARNAHAN, Patton, Ill.

JUDGE J. B. HILL, of the Superior Court, Walker county, Georgia, thinks enough of German Syrup to send us voluntarily a strong letter endorsing it. When men of rank and education thus use and recommend an article, what they say is worth the attention of the public. It is above suspicion. "I have used your German Syrup," he says, "for my Coughs and Colds on the Throat and Lungs. I can recommend it for them as a first-class medicine."—Take no substitute.

THE YAKIMA COUNTRY.

JUST ACROSS THE COLUMBIA RIVER, ALONG THE LINE OF THE NORTHERN PACIFIC RAILROAD IN EASTERN WASHINGTON, IS A REMARKABLE VALLEY. ONLY A FEW YEARS SINCE IT WAS GIVEN OVER TO SAGE BRUSH AND JACK RABBITS. NOW IT IS ONE OF THE MOST FERTILE AND PRODUCTIVE VALLEYS IN THE WORLD. IRRIGATION HAS DONE IT. VAST SUMS HAVE BEEN SPENT UPON LONG LINES OF IRRIGATING CANALS, AND LARGE AREAS ARE NOW PLANTED IN SMALL FRUITS AND ORCHARD PATCHES, IN GRAIN FIELDS, AND ALFALFA PASTURES. THE YIELDS OBTAINED ARE SO GREAT THAT LITTLE FARMS OF 10 AND 20 ACRES ARE ABOUT AS MUCH AS ONE MAN CARES FOR OR NEEDS TO OWN. IF YOU THINK OF FINDING A NEW HOME, LOOK INTO THIS REGION, WHERE THE CLIMATE IS AS PLEASANT AS THE CROPS ARE GOOD.

WEARYIN' FOR YOU.

Jes' a-wearyin' for you—
All the time a-feelin' blue;
Wishin' for you—wonderin' when
You'll be comin' home agen.
Restless, don't know what to do—
Jes' a-wearyin' for you!

Room's so lonesome with your chair
Empty by the fireplace there,
Jes' can't stand the sight of it!
Go out doors an' roam a bit;
But the woods is lonesome, too—
Jes' a-wearyin' for you!

Comes the wind with soft caress,
Like the rustlin' of your dress;
Blossoms fallin' to the ground
Softly, like your footstep sound:
Violets like your eyes so blue—
Jes' a-wearyin' for you!

Mornin' comes: the birds awake;
Use to sing so for your sake!
But there's sadness in the notes
That come thrillin' from their throats;
Seem to feel your absence, too—
Jes' a-wearyin' for you!

Evenin' comes; I miss you more
When the dark glooms in the door;
Seems jes' like you orter be
There to open it for me!
Latch goes tinklin'; thrills me through—
Sets me wearyin' for you!

Jes' a-wearyin' for you—
All the time a-feelin' blue;
Wishin' for you—wonderin' when
You'll be comin' home agen;
Restless, don't know what to do—
Jes' a-wearyin' for you!

A NERVY CAPTURE.

How Billy Barsford Arrested Three-Fingered Jack.

The Deputy Sheriff Went Alone Into the Teton Basin and Brought Out the Horsethief and Two of His Pals.

"I say," said Col. George Barry at the Lotos club one night, says the New York Sun, "I see they've got Three-Fingered Jack at last. Killed him down on the Strip. He went into a little town down there with a lot of other bad men, and got filled full of fine, little holes.

"Well, sir, there was a horsethief for you. He lived simply to steal horses. It wasn't a business with him, it was a passion, and he was a most exalted, supreme high ruler, grand past master of the art. There isn't a town in the northwest where his record is not known, and not a ranchman in Wyoming and Montana who won't be glad to know that Three-Fingered Jack has passed in his checks. It's curious, too, I've heard men who knew him say that Jack was as soft as a woman about some things, and as hard as a woman about others. Barring horse stealing he was honest as the day, and there wasn't a man wearing a six-shooter who'd go further or risk more to help a 'pard' out of difficulty. I've heard it said that some men don't know what it is to be afraid. Harry Dacello used to say Three-Fingered Jack couldn't comprehend fear when he saw it in others. I rather guess, though, that fear is a question of stomach, much as sea sickness is. Jack never would have been sea sick. I'll bet that sinking sensation of cold never struck the pit of his stomach. I've often thought that one reason sailor men are as a rule so brave is simply that their stomachs are well behaved.

"But what I started out to tell was about the only time I ever heard of Three-Fingered Jack's being arrested. He had God knows how many fights with the officers, lost two fingers and got his distinctive title in one of 'em, I think. But somehow he always managed to come out first best. Barring perhaps Scott Hyde, there wasn't a quicker man with a gun in all Wyoming or Montana, and when he shot he usually shot straight.

"Well, sir, I knew a man at Cheyenne, when I was stationed at Fort D. A. Russell, whose business was catching thieves. It was a passion with him, just as stealing horses was with Three-Fingered Jack, only, if such a thing was possible, it was a —— sight bigger passion. His name was Barsford, Billy Barsford, and he was deputy sheriff of Laramie county. He was a fine, big fellow, unusually quiet, and the quickest man to move I ever saw. If there was anything Billy Barsford was afraid of he never 'met up' with it, as they say out there.

"One day Billy Barsford made up his mind he'd get Three-Fingered Jack. There'd been a big bunch of ponies run off from some ranches in the Sweetwater country, and the job was laid to Three-Fingered Jack. Jack had a regularly organized band, with headquarters over in what was then called the Teton basin, but I see they call it Jackson's hole now. It is just below where Robert Ray Hamilton's dead body was found in the creek. Jack's band was made up of some of the toughest men in Wyoming, good shots, fine riders and hard citizens, as good at a fight as at a drink, and always ready for either. The Teton basin wasn't so well-known in those days as it is now. It wasn't so almighty safe for strangers to be dropping around there promiscuously. In fact, it was so little known that it was commonly described as being 'just over beyond the big Teton.'

"Well, when Billy Barsford made up his mind to get Three-Fingered Jack he didn't say a word about it to anybody, but just took his horse and lit out for Eagle rock. He had to go way round the Tetons and the basin to get there, but he wanted to make sure of the lay of the country before he tackled the gang. There were heavy rewards out for Jack and Billy didn't regard them with disfavor, although he used to tell me that the main thing that started him was the desire to have the glory of catching Three-Fingered Jack all alone. Queer ideas of glory some men have.

"Billy got over to Eagle rock all right—they call it Idaho falls now, I believe, and after fooling around there awhile and finding out what he could about the Tetons, he went out to the Shoshone reservation and got an old chief there to make him a map of the Teton country. The old fellow drew it on a shingle. It was an almighty rough map, as you can mighty well imagine, but it showed the lay of the country fairly well, and Billy got a pretty good notion of where he was trying to go.

"By gad, sir, there wasn't any gristle in the end of Billy Barsford's breastbone. He's no spring chicken. What did he do but hang around that Shoshone camp four or five days longer, and then make out to the old chief that he'd burned up by mistake the shingle on which the map was made and got the old buck to make him another. That night Billy compared the two shingles. The maps agreed in essential details, and Billy concluded the old Indian was playing fair with him. So he started on. He went up over the Tetons and down into the basin, as fine a picture of a little valley as a man wants to see lying out of doors, with a little creek running through the middle of it and fine pasture grass growing.

"As Billy went into the valley he made out a little cabin down next to the creek, several miles from the foothills. It was morning, and he had lots of time. He got down to the creek, got off his horse and made as if he were prospecting along the little stream. As he came along toward the cabin he saw Three-Fingered Jack and three other fellows sitting on a bench beside the wall. Their Winchesters were all standing against the end wall around the corner from them. They were all watching Billy, but didn't seem to recognize him. Or if they did they thought they had a cinch, and kept on smoking and chinning, without ever a motion to get out their guns. They probably figured that when Billy got right opposite them they'd speak to him, and while some of them talked one would hold him up. Possibly they meant to do him. But he fooled them.

"He kept prospecting along the little creek until he got fair even with them, keeping his horse between him and the men beside the cabin, with his bridle rein thrown over his arm. Just as he came even with them he whipped out his two six-shooters like lightning, jumped in front of his pony, and drew on the four horsethieves not thirty yards away.

"'Put up your hands,' he said.

"By gad, sir, they were paralyzed. But they recovered —— quick. The two fellows on the end jumped for their Winchesters. Billy got the first with his right and winged the other with his left. His horse jumped a bit, he said when he told me about it, and bothered his arm. The other two saw they were trapped and put up their hands. One of them was Three-Fingered Jack.

"'How are you, Jack?' says Billy. 'Glad to find you at home. I've come a —— long way to see you. Now won't you kindly turn round and stand with your face to that wall there, while I assist your friend a bit to relieve himself of any extra shootin' or cuttin' irons he may have in his pockets?

"Jack turned around without a word. It's curious what a powerful influence there is in the drop of a six-shooter; and the beauty of doing it with a gun and not a Winchester is that you can cover two men at once with the gun. Now there was that gang of train robbers down at Rawlins. But that is another story. Jack stood up against the wall fine.

"'Thanks,' says Billy, dropping the bridle rein from his left arm, and taking some fine, stout cord out of one of his hoisters with his left had, all the time keeping both men covered with his right.

"'Just keep your hands well up above your head, please,' he said to the other fellow; 'and you, Jack, just please put your hands out behind your back. Don't try any grab game, now, for I'm watching, you know, and this gun might go off.'

"Jack stuck out his hands as he was ordered, quiet as a lamb. Then Billy walked up to the other fellow and held out the cord. There was a noose in one end already prepared.

"'Now,' said he, 'just have the kindness to put that noose over Jack's hands and tie it up tight. Please be careful. I'd be sorry to have to do any more shooting than I've done.'

"Well, sir, the fellow did it. And then Billy got another noose and tied the other fellow himself. Then he stood 'em both up against the wall and went through them and took every blooming thing they had in the way of metal away from them. Then he tied their feet and set 'em down on the ends of the bench and tied 'em fast to that. Then he went through the fellow he had winged. He was bad hit through the shoulder, and was unconscious from loss of blood. Billy bandaged him up and managed to bring him 'round after a bit, feeling pretty chipper all things considered. Billy buried the dead man and then got up some of Jack's stolen horses. He lashed the wounded man into one saddle, and then took the rope off Jack's legs, got him astraddle a pony and lashed his feet together under the pony's belly. Then he served the other chap the same way. He threw all their guns into the creek and then untied their hands, but tied their elbows together across their backs. That left their hands free to guide their ponies. Then he jumped on his own pony and made those fellows go ahead, one of 'em leading the pony the wounded man was riding. It took Billy thirty hours to get them out over the range, and he never took eyes off of 'em until it was done. But he did it and got the rewards. And ten days after he got 'em in Laramie a lot of their gang held up the town and took 'em out. Yes, sir, they did."

Merely a Matter of Money.

A very eminent Philadelphian, now deceased, had two daughters married in another city. One of these ladies was very fond of society and of having a good time. On one occasion her husband made a trip to Philadelphia and saw her father and told him that really there was such a thing as going beyond moderation, and he feared he would be compelled to break up and send the daughter back to Philadelphia to the paternal home. To this the old gentleman responded in his quiet way that he was very sorry, as he was just on the point of making arrangements to settle quite a sum of money upon his daughter, realizing that he was growing old, and that it must be difficult for her to sustain her social position adequately. Upon hearing this a decided change is said to have come over the complaining husband. He had to acknowledge, he said, that there were many fine qualities which could not be overlooked, and, although she had been a great trial to him, yet if the father really felt this great interest in her, he, as her husband, would try to overlook her eccentricities and bear with her a little longer. He did, and nothing more was ever heard of the matter. —Philadelphia Times.

What She Was Thinking About.

The young woman had married and there was a great array of wedding presents. She didn't seem to care about them, however.

"My dear," expostulated her mother, who had made the match, "just see these lovely presents; aren't you interested in them?"

"Not much," replied the bride, "it's the future I'm thinking about."

WORTH A QUARTER.

The Pathetic Story of the Man With a Glass Eye.

Four or five well-dressed and apparently well-heeled men stood in a group on the bows of a Windsor ferry boat yesterday, when a man whose appearance denoted hard times approached them and said:

"Gents, I'm used to going without victuals and sleeping on the ground, and I give you my word I really like it. Howsumever, I am obliged to solicit aid for a different object. Gents, allow me to call your attention to me eye—this left one."

That something had happened to his eye was plain enough. Indeed, there was no eye at all, only a socket of one.

"What's the matter?" asked one.

"It's just here, sir," replied the man. "About ten years ago a cow hooks me eye out. I suffer and suffer, and by and by I buys me a glass one to preserve me looks. It's not for me to say that I looked even handsomer than before, but should any of you gents want a glass eye, I'll be happy to give you all the pointers I can. There's a way of wearing a glass eye to make ye look like a Jim Dandy, and ye have only to call on me to get full particulars."

"But where is your eye?"

"That's what I'm coming to at once. I was over here in Detroit the other day, expecting to meet a man who wanted me to go down the country and boss his farm. He didn't show up, howsumever, and while waiting I felt cramps. I goes over to a saloon and says I've got cramps and asks what is good for 'em.

"'Whisky, of course,' says the bloomin' bloke behind the bar.

"'But I've none of the needful.'

"'Then die!'

"Gents, I was suffering that bad that I cried out for some one to hit me with a club and end me agony, and send word to me mother in Boston that I hoped to meet her in a better place, but no one would do it.

"Why didn't you speak to a policeman?" queried one of the group.

"I was too distracted with the pain. I felt that I must have whisky. I had no money, but all of a sudden I thought of me glass eye.

"'Here—give me a horn and keep me eye until I can raise ten cents!' I says to the bloke behind the bar.

"'But it's only glass,' says he.

"'Of course it's only glass. Am I to lay me real eye down on your bloomin' bar for the price of three fingers of whisky?'

"'I'll take it for two fingers, and if you don't claim it in four days I'll use it on me dog, who lost his left eye in a fight last winter!'

"I gives him the eye, gents, and I gets the whisky and saves me life to be a comfort and a consolation to me mother in her old age. Now I wants to get it back. He'll charge me interest, and it will take a quarter to do it."

No one made a move to contribute, and the man suddenly began wiping his good eye and said:

"Gents, if that bloomin' bloke was to keep me glass eye on the shelf among the bottles, I wouldn't feel so bad, but to-day is the fourth day, and by to-morrow his one-eyed fightin' dog will be wearin' me optic, and paradin' around town. Put yourselves in me place, and imagine how you'd feel!"

They chipped in a quarter for him and he bowed and scraped and said:

"And I can hear me dear old mother as she weeps for joy! Now I am a man again! Now I can face the world! Ah! gents, may you never need a glass eye to begin with. If you have to get one, may you never need to put it up to save your life. If you have to put it up, may it never be to a bloomin' bloke who hasn't got any more feelin' than to want it for his bloomin' fightin dawg to wear in the buck yard!"

He went away and sat down, and while everybody said he lied, everybody also agreed that it was a story worth a quarter.—Detroit Free Press.

MONOPOLISTIC HALF BREEDS.

The Real Owners of the Lands of the Five Nations.

The lands of the five nations are ostensibly held in common, but as a matter of fact the disproportion in holdings is monopolistic to a remarkable degree. The real Indian derives little benefit from his patrimonial acres. The pale-skinned Jacob has stolen Esau's birthright. There are farms, rich and highly cultivated, of from five thousand to twenty-five thousand acres in a body; pastures of long succulent grass whose fences a horseman cannot encompass from sun to sun; mines opulent with their stores of coal; but they are controlled by professional red men, or the mixed breeds whose dominant blood is white. It is said that a score of Chickasaw citizens, in whom combined there is hardly enough aboriginal blood to make a full-blood Indian, control nearly ninety per cent. of the arable lands of that nation. A A Cherokee squaw man is said to hold more land than is held by all the full-bloods in the tribe. Under the tribal law there is no limit to the extent of a citizen's holding. He can control and enjoy the usufruct of as much land as he can fence without encroaching upon the improvements of a fellow-citizen. As a consequence the national domain has passed into the possession of the more intelligent and enterprising elements of the tribe, the inter-married citizens and mixed breeds, who constitute probably four-fifths of the population. These landlords, many of whom operate on a scale colossal enough to make the estates of the land barons of the old world seem mere truck patches in comparison, utilize white non-citizen labor in the cultivation and improvement of their vast farms. The Indian agricultural toiler is an anomaly, and negro labor is uncommon. As a rule, especially in the opening up of new farms, the tenant not only furnishes the labor, but the improvements also, under an annual retail contract based on a share of the crop.—Rezin W. McAdam, in Harper's Magazine.

Child-Marriage in England.

Few folk have any idea that in Elizabethan times the custom of child-marriages prevailed in England, yet the dilapidated volume of Depositions in the ecclesiastical court of Chester, A. D. 1261-6, proves that these marriages must have been frequent in Cheshire and Lancashire, and no doubt other like records in the rest of our dioceses will, when looked up, establish the fact that such marriages were common all over England. The birth of a child in the Berkeley family, when the father and mother were each thirteen and a half years old, shows what was going on elsewhere a century earlier. —The Alderny.

CLASS FAVORITISM.

A Study of the Land Barons in Indian Territory.

The divine injunction, "in the sweat of thy face shalt thou eat bread," has no relevancy to the citizens of the five civilized tribes. Here are a people who, like the lilies of the field, "toil not, neither do they spin," furnishing an example of class favoritism under the law peculiar and interesting to study. The landlords have no care but the gathering of rents and a general supervision of the home place. They are, as a class, free-handed, reckless, good livers, and with a strong tendency to dissipation. Most of them live up to their incomes, and few acquire large bank accounts. Your typical landlord's home is the rambling white plantation great house of ante-bellum days, with wide galleries, big chimneys and usually in a bad state of repair. An air of untidiness and neglect pervades the yard, to which is added a lack of taste inside when you enter. Still there is something about the surroundings—the orchard, smoke-house, negroes, pigs and poultry—which denotes solid old-fashioned comfort and Arcadian content. Frequently you meet a lord of one of these mansions—a squaw man—whose family claim no Indian blood, yet he enjoys, by virtue of a former matrimonial alliance, all the landed rights of an Indian. It is really surprising the number of this class that are divorced from Indian wives or have become widowers and remarried in their own race. They constitute the largest landholders, and are very jealous of their tribal rights when threatened by "boomers," as they term the opponents of land monopoly and unequal privileges. And what of the Indian, the full-blood whom this great and munificent government of ours has in its wisdom regarded as a ward and heir to a princely heritage as a recompense for Anglo-Saxon rapine? You will find him where the stillness of the forest is as yet unbroken. He is there in his miserable little hut, a recluse from the great mad world he so distrusts and fears, living a poor hand-to-mouth existence, and rarely emerging to visit the haunts of his tormentors. A scanty patch of corn, a few poultry and mast-fed hogs, with what game and fish fall prey to his skill, go to supply his meagre larder and furnish employment for his squaw and himself. Once in a great while there is a per capita payment, and a pittance falls to his share after the professional red men of the tribe have made the disbursement to their satisfaction and paid their "attorney's fees." It is a rare thing to find a full-blood in the Indian Territory who is living comfortably on as much as a quarter section of land under cultivation. There are some, but they are striking exceptions.—Rezin W. McAdam, in Harper's Magazine.

BISMARCK AT HOME.

The Great German Statesman and His Historic Pipe.

After coffee and cigars had been passed, Bismarck's long pipe, with its china bowl decorated with the family coat of arms, was brought to him and lighted. A small table at his side held a tray with long queer matches, a small rod, and other pipe appurtenances, all of which were from time to time used. Never had I seen the process of smoking require to be helped along so often, for, during animated conversation, the pipe was forgotten and allowed to go out. In this need, as in every other, I was impressed with the alertness of the attendants. Proud were they of their master, and tenderly watchful of his wishes and his physical infirmities.

And here another picture. Bismarck lying back in the large chair, puffing at his long pipe—that historic pipe, in the cloud-smoke of which the Germany of to-day first took shape—his face animated, strong and ever-changing, the two dogs now stretched in front at full length, with their big heads crossed over their master's feet. "This one was a gift to me from the young emperor," said Bismarck, pointing to the larger of the two.

Talk turned upon the affectionateness and faithfulness of dogs, and some one asked how the unmerited expression, "gone to the dogs," had ever originated. Bismarck said: "The meaning of that saying has become entirely perverted. In olden times, when a pack of hounds was a necessity, not a luxury, on every country estate, horses and cattle, when they had outlived their usefulness, were slaughtered and given to the dogs for food. This is what was originally meant by 'gone to the dogs.'"

Conversation next turned upon America, and Bismarck asked much about his old friend Carl Schurz. "In 1845," he said, "I anticipated quite as little as did Schurz what the future had in store for me. My highest ambition was to become a good farmer, and to be able, eventually, to purchase the lands adjoining our estate. Occasionally I cast a hungry eye upon the office of justice of the peace, but the only chance I had to obtain it was cut off"—with a smile at the princess—"by my not succeeding in marrying the girl who could have helped me attain it."

"So much the better for me," was the princess' laughing rejoinder.

And the better for us all, thought I, for what a wholesome and blessed example of happy marriage has this historic home presented to the world during the last half century!—Eleonora Kinnicutt, in Century.

NOVEL HAND DECORATION.

White Gloves and Little Finger-Rings Are Now the Rage.

White gloves and little finger-rings set with large solitaires are now the rage. Few gloves of any sort have been worn during the hot weather. After the mysterious way of fashion the fad for little finger-rings materialized, and considerable business ensued. Many rings were purchased from the regular stock and many more were made to order, the stone being a souvenir of more or less intrinsic value. A few shirt studs have been sacrificed for the solitaire pearl or diamond, and coral, spinal ruby, carbuncle, amethyst, cat's eye and the fatal opal have been selected for the band and snake ring.

These little finger-rings are comparatively hard to wear. Two elements are needed to make them effective—a hand that is pretty and one that is small. On any other hand the ring is aggressive and inartistic.

The white glove is also dependent upon delicacy for effect. An authority on such matters says: "No. 6 is the limited size for white gloves, and even then the hand would look as big as a No. 6¾ gloved in ecru or tan." All the new white gloves are made of undressed kid, dog or chamois, stitched and topped with black and fastened with pearl buttons half an inch wide —Chicago Post.

NATURE AT SEA.

The Floating Islands of Gulf Weed and Their Inhabitants.

The vegetation of the sea is limited to the brown masses of sargassum or "gulf weed," which is most abundant in or along the borders of the gulf stream and may be seen growing on the sheltered roofs about Nassau. This alga is especially interesting for the wealth of marine life which it shelters. A large mass, which has been a floating island for some time, possesses in fact quite a varied fauna. If you fish up a handful of it and shake it over the deck, the little animals pour down like rain. Here are crabs and shrimps without number, some of them very delicate, no longer than a pin; barnacles, mollusks and fish of several species, one of which, the antennarius, regularly lives and builds its nest in these little islands. This grotesque fish is two or three inches long and nearly as broad in a vertical plane, and is variously spotted and mottled with light and dark-brown colors. Its lower fins resemble a pair of hands in shape and function, and its head recalls that of a mediæval war horse armed and plumed.

These little communities furnish a striking instance of the protective coloring of animals, a phenomenon of which there seem to be nearly as many examples as there are living things. The general cast of the plant and animals inhabiting it is a dull brown. The goose barnacles, which are attached to the sprays in great numbers, have white shell-cases with brown stalks. The crabs are brown with usually a large white spot on their backs, apparently in imitation of the barnacles, while many of the little shrimps are marked in the same way. The spherical floats of the sargassum are, furthermore, incrusted with the white lacelike skeletons of bryozoa. The brown gulf weed is thus dappled with white, and it is evidently advantageous for animals living in it to simulate its colors, which they do in an extraordinary manner.—Prof. F. H. Herrick, in Popular Science Monthly.

The Land of Flowers.

Three hundred and eighty-one years ago, the romantic Ponce de Leon, searching for the fabled fountain of youth, set foot on a land so adorned with blossoms of every kind and hue that he named it Florida—Land of Flowers. To most Northerners, Florida suggests only a refuge for invalids and consumptives, or a place whence comes oranges and other semi-tropic fruits. The state, however, has something of a history. Where Ponce de Leon landed was founded St. Augustine, the oldest settled town in the United States, and now a famous winter resort. In 1763 Florida was ceded by Spain to Great Britain, in exchange or as a ransom for Cuba, on which the British lion had laid its paw. In 1783, at the close of our Revolutionary war, England ceded the territory back to Spain, probably not desiring a possession surrounded by the rebellious colonies. In 1819 Spain ceded Florida to the United States, and she was admitted to the Union in 1845. Since the war of the Rebellion, material development has been rapid in Florida—railroads have been built, much Northern capital invested and great improvement manifested. If intending to make a trip to Florida—and now is the time to be planning for it—be sure that your railroad ticket is via the Burlington, which affords choice of routes by either Chicago or St. Louis. Apply to any coupon ticket agent, or write to W. J. C. Kenyon, Gen. Pass. Agent, St. Paul, Minn.

16 World's Fair Photos for One Dime.

The Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railway has made an arrangement with a first-class publishing house to furnish a series of beautiful World's Fair pictures, of a large size, at the nominal cost to the purchaser of only ten cents for a portfolio of sixteen illustrations. Nothing so handsome in reference to the World's Fair has before been published. The series would be worth at least twelve dollars if the pictures were not published in such large quantities, and we are therefore able to furnish these works of art for only ten cents.

Remit your money to George H. Heafford, General Passenger Agent, Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railway, at Chicago, Ill., and the pictures will be sent promptly to any specified address. They will make a handsome holiday gift.

KNOWLEDGE

Brings comfort and improvement and tends to personal enjoyment when rightly used. The many, who live better than others and enjoy life more, with less expenditure, by more promptly adapting the world's best products to the needs of physical being, will attest the value to health of the pure liquid laxative principles embraced in the remedy, Syrup of Figs.

Its excellence is due to its presenting in the form most acceptable and pleasant to the taste, the refreshing and truly beneficial properties of a perfect laxative; effectually cleansing the system, dispelling colds, headaches and fevers and permanently curing constipation. It has given satisfaction to millions and met with the approval of the medical profession, because it acts on the Kidneys, Liver and Bowels without weakening them and it is perfectly free from every objectionable substance.

Syrup of Figs is for sale by all druggists in 50c and $1 bottles, but it is manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co. only, whose name is printed on every package, also the name, Syrup of Figs, and being well informed, you will not accept any substitute if offered.

---Read Photographer Wood's ad.

—Brick $8 per 1000 at John Coolen's.

---Notice the change in Geo. P. Schaffer's ad this week.

—Notich the change in the ad of Hanseman & Kohler in this issue of the GAZETTE.

—The K. P. Lodge of this place are arranging for a grand ball to be held Christmas night.

--Sleighing is fine, and farmers are taking advantage of it by marketing their farm produce.

---If you wish people to know where to buy their holiday goods you should advertise in the GAZETTE.

—Thermometers about town indicated 22° below zero Wednesday morning. It felt like winter about these times.

—Ladies who left dishes at the supper on Friday evening at the city hall, can recover them by calling at the parsonage.

---The Delano Roller Mills seem to be kept as busy as ever. They turn out A 1 flour and give satisfaction so far as we have heard.

-- Louis Sutton received two barrels of apples Wednesday which were shipped about six weeks ago from his home in Virginia.

--The city fathers should furnish the city hall with another stove if they wish to rent it these cold nights. One stove don't seem to warm it.

—The Eagle has been setting on that boom edition about long enough for an average bird to hatch out a full flock. If it don't soon come forth people will think the eggs are addled.

--Some of the High school scholars were considerably "shocked" this week by experiments in electricity introduced by Prof. Dewey. And now the small boy can hardly pass by a cat without expressing a desire to procure her hide to carry to school.

--The principal of the Delano school seems bent on giving his pupils an education in law. We understand that a jury has been empanneled and a couple of cases already set for trial, one a murder case, the other breach of promise. Probably divorce will be the third on the list. The principal is to act as judge.

—The fair on Saturday last was not so largely attended as on some occasions. Stormy weather in the morning probably kept some away. We noticed one man had his cow loaded in the sled where she stood while the team made as good time as his neighbors. This beats pokeing along in the cold for half a day when much less time would suffice.

—The lecture, "Rome as I Saw it It in 1891," by Rev. William Willkinson, in the city hall Tuesday evening was a good one. Mr. W. is a pleasant and ready speaker and by his lecture proves he was a keen observer, while in Rome and that he has studied history from an unprejudiced stand point and can speak freely his own views, giving to each subject his praise or censure as he thinks it deserves, always kindly but forcibly.

---Delano boasts as good a local cash market for farm produce, of all kinds as the country affords, something she has never had before. This saves lots of long, cold drives to the city markets, and allows the provident wife to herself select from the good assortments of goods in the stores at home, where they know who they are dealing with, what the family needs. When the city is visited it is often the case that a good deal of stuff is bought because it is cheap, and not because it is needed. The money is spent and the necessaries have to be procured of our home merchants. This home cash market does away with a good deal of them.

---Charles Conzet received this morning a very nice robe from the city where he had sent a fine cow hide to be tanned. He is very proud of it.

---The public schools are taking their Christmas holidays. They began a week early on account of the privalence of diphtheria, one case of which has occurred in the school.

---A large flock of prairie chickens are said to be wintering in the corn fields near Maple Plain. Farmers think if they feed them they ought to be allowed to fast on them.

---Our neighbor up street started out about three weeks ago to give its readers a Thanksgiving "write up" and we very innocently mentioned the fact, but she appears to be a long time recovering from the Thanksgiving festivities; or is she waiting for Gov. Pennoyer's next years proclamation?

--Presiding Elder J. F. Chaffee held Quarterly meeting services and Quarterly Conference at the M. E. church here Wednesday evening. On Thursday, accompanied by Rev. J. W. Powell, he went to Armstrong for the purpose of holding the same kind of service. The next Quarterly meeting of the Delano and Montrose circuit will be held at Montrose.

---Our depot agent, George W. Bolton is one of the ablest, most expeditious, and most experienced handlers of empty beer kegs on this line of road, judging from the short time it took him to hide from view that large number of empties that looked like a large barricade on the platform one day this week. He survived the trying ordeal, however.

---Horses are growing so numerous in this section of the country as to be almost a drug in the market. Where farmers but a few years ago used the sturdy ox for farm work and to travel with he now sports a spring wagon or buggy and a spanking span of horses. We heard one horse fancier offering to trade a horse for a cow, which he thought would be more profitable.

---The quarantine for diphtheria at the house of Nick Franzen was raised yesterday and a new one established in the other end of town, at A. Anderson's. At Mr. Franzen's, Henry, aged 13 died. Susie, 16 had a severe attack, and Charles, who was in bed, on account of the railroad injury, and a married sister, Mrs. Teichnor had light attacks which were soon over. Mr. Anderson's children have been attending school until yesterday when the premises were qurrantined. A great many sore throat patients are in bed, without a doctor, some of them may prove to be diphtheria at any time, should they chance to get a little cold or become weakened from any cause. It is well to keep the little folks away from suspected cases, no child should be allowed at school who is not feeling well. Headache is among the first symptoms with many.

Among Our Exchanges.

Etc., etc., "Tariff is a Tax."--Buffalo Journal.

Instead of finding himself the administration candidate for the democratic Presidential nomination, Walter Q Gresham may ere long find himself out in the cold.- Buffalo Journal.

It is stated that Congressman Baldwin will antagonize the new tariff bill because it reduces the tariff on iron. If protection is good for iron, will Congressman Baldwin explain why it isn't good for wool, lumber salt, etc., etc?—Sherburne County Star-News.

Belle Van Emart made her mornings walk to her school, one mile east, through the blinding snow storm Monday morning. Mr. Elliott says if Belle didn't start so early she wouldn't have to walk. How is it Jim. --Dassel items in Litchfield Independent.

The village of Wadena has followed Aitkin's example in choosing a candidate for postmaster. At an election held last Thesday by the democrats of that place Geo. E. Trent received a plurality of the votes cast and was declared the winner. All the candidates having previously agreed that the losing candidates should support the winner. Trent seems to have the call. Mr. Trent was a former resident of Aitkin, and his many friends join the Age in wishing him success.—Aitkin Age.

There will be no session of the legislature this winter, for which deliverance the people ought not to forget to be duly and truly thankful, but there will be an Alliance convention in January at Minneapolis, in which the great majority of the people have no interest, but which will serve the purpose of affording an opportunity for some of the "leaders" to blow off their accumulated gas. Owen is billed to deliver the annual address, and Mrs. Lease is also expected to be present. There will be a "silver dollar collection" to which all will be expected to contribute except the leaders. They never chip in. After two or three days of bombastic oratory denouncing everybody and every thing but themselves--the elections of some old, broken down politicians for officers and the adoption of the usual "ringing" resolutions the "delegates" will go back home, poorer by several hard earned dollars but no wiser than when they come. It has been ever thus.--Buffalo Journal.

There is a commotion in Monticello school circles because of the discovery that one of the members of the school board had been systematically stealing wood from the district wood pile. No arrests were made but it is said to be a clear case.—Elk River Star News.

Will the Star News name the member of the school board who has been stealing wood, or the person who informed the editor of the alleged stealing? The commotion in school circles is all in the eye of the Star News man, as no member of the board has stolen any wood, is charged with stealing any, or even suspected of stealing any. The item is a libel upon every member of the board, and the Star News shall either name the person accused or the accuser, or confess that he has wilfully lied. The editor of the Star News ought to know better than to give publicity to such an item without being very sure of its truth.—Wright County Times.

This week's Star-News publishes a notice for retraction served according to law and signed by James C. Tarbox Pres. and C. A French Sec. of Monticello board of Education, and then proceeds as follows:

THE STAR NEWS hadn't the slightest intention of reflecting on the Monticello School board in any way shape or manner, and a careful perusal of the item in question will so show. The STAR NEWS is not acquainted with all the members of the Monticello school board, but so far as it knows the majority of them are of undoubted respectability and honesty. If it has in any way slandered the Monticello school board, or any member in his official capacity, it was done unintentionally, and the paper hereby cheerfully retracts the same.

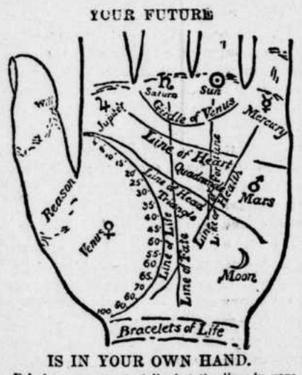
YOUR FUTURE



IS IN YOUR OWN HAND.

Palmistry assumes to tell what the lines in your hand indicate. It will amuse you, if nothing more. The above diagram almost explains itself. The length of the LINE OF LIFE indicates probable age to which you will live. Each BRACELET gives you thirty years. Well marked LINE OF HEAD denotes brain power; clear LINE OF FORTUNE fame or riches. Both combined mean success in life; but you must keep up with modern ideas to win it. You will find plenty of these in Demorest's Family Magazine, so attractively presented that every member of the family is entertained. It is a dog in magazine income. A CLEAR LINE OF HEART bespeaks tenderness: a straight LINE OF FATE, peaceful life; the reverse if crooked. A well-defined LINE OF HEALTH spares you doctors' bills; so will the health hints in Demorest's. No other magazine publishes so many stories to interest the home circle. You will be subject to extremes of high spirits or despondency if you have the GIRDLE OF VENUS well marked; keep up your spirits by having Demorest's Magazine to read. By subscribing to it for 1894 you will receive a gallery of exquisite works of art of great value, besides the superb premium picture, 17x22 inches, "I'm a Daisy!" which is almost a real baby, and equal to the original oil painting which cost $3 0; and you will have a magazine that cannot be equaled by any in the world for its beautiful illustrations and subject matter, that will keep you posted on all the topics of the day, and all the fads, and different items of interest about the household, besides furnishing interesting reading matter, both grave and gay, for the whole family; and while Demorest's is not a fashion magazine, its fashion pages are perfect, and you get with it, free of cost, all the patterns you wish to use during the year, and in any size you choose. Send in your subscription at once, only $2.00, and you will really get over $25.00 in value. Address the publisher, W. Jennings Demorest, 15 East 14th St., New York. If you are unacquainted with the Magazine, send for a specimen copy. A large QUADRANGLE means honesty; a large TRIANGLE, generosity; long FIRST DIVISION OF THUMB, strong will; LONG SECOND DIVISION, reasoning faculty. The MOUNT OF JUPITER betokens ambition; that of SATURN, prudence; the SUN, love of splendor; MARS, courage; MOON, imagination; VENUS, love of pleasure; and MERCURY, intelligence. Take our advice as above and you will be sure to possess the last and most valuable quality.

HOW A PUZZLE WAS SOLVED.

When you want a certain article, you want the best make of that article, don't you?

But how to determine which make is best is what puzzles you, isn't it?

And when the puzzle is solved for you, by authority which cannot be questioned, you are pleased, aren't you?

And you would like to hear of one puzzle that has been solved for the people of the whole world, wouldn't you?

Well, we will tell you about that very puzzle, and its solution.

At the Universal Exposition of 1889 at Paris, France, the best sewing machines of the world, including those of America, were in competition. They were passed upon by a jury composed of the best foreign mechanical experts, two of whom were the leading sewing machine manufacturers of France.

This jury, after exhaustive examination and tests, adjudged that the Wheeler & Wilson machines were the best of all, and awarded that company the highest prize offered, the GRAND PRIZE, giving other companies only gold, silver and bronze medals.

The French Government, as a further recognition of superiority, decorated Mr. Nathaniel Wheeler, president of the company, with the Cross of the Legion of Honor, the most prized honor of France.

That is how the puzzle of the best sewing machine in the world was fully solved by the most competent authority in the world in favor of the No. 9 and No. 12 Wheeler & Wilson machines.

The No. 9, for family use, and the No. 12, for manufacturing uses, are the best in the world to-day.

And now, when you want a sewing machine, if you do not get the best, it will be your own fault.

Ask your sewing machine dealer for the No. 9 Wheeler & Wilson machine, and if he does not keep them write to us for descriptive catalogue, prices and terms.

COULD WE BUT KNOW.

Could we but draw back the curtains
That surround each other's lives,
See the naked heart and spirit,
Know what spur the action gives,
Often we should find it better,
Purer than we judge we should—
We should love each other better
If we only understood.

Could we judge all deeds by motives,
See the good and bad within,
Often we should love the sinner
All the while we loathe the sin.
Could we know the powers working
To o'erthrow integrity,
We should judge each other's errors
With more patient charity.

If we knew the care and trials,
Knew the effort all in vain,
And the bitter disappointment,
Understood the loss and gain,
Would the grim, external roughness
Seem, I wonder, just the same?
Would we help where now we hinder?
Would we pity where we blame?

Ah! we judge each other harshly,
Knowing not life's hidden force;
Knowing not the fount of action
Is less turbid at its source,
Seeing not amid the evil
All the golden grains of good;
O! we'd love each other better
If we only understood.

Christmas.

December 25th is observed throughout the civilized world in commemoration of the birth of Christ, the Savior of mankind. It is kept as other birthdays in joy and merriment, in addition to the church services held on each return of Christmas. The custom of celebrating mass at midnight, at dawn and in the early morning on Christmas in Roman Catholic churches has existed since the 6th century. The people of most nations take the opportunity of the recurrences of this day to make presents to their friends and acquaintances. Some place the presents on Christmas trees, others fill the young people's stockings, which are carefully hung up for Christ Krinkle, Santa Clause. Kuecht Rupert or what ever name he may be known by, with eatables, toys, and articles of use, much to the pleasure of the entire family, as the beeming eyes of the recipants make the discoveries in the early morning This day is looked forward to with as great expectation, perhaps, as is any other day of the year. As much pleasure is felt in anticipating, and as much enjoyment is had on Christmas as it is possible for the human heart to feel in regard to the annual visitation of any day on the calendar. This is right, for what could be of more importance; what of more interest to humanity than the birth of a Saviour One who is to save them from their sins. Who has prepared for them a place in Heaven? Let all be happy on this day. Let all rejoice in songs of praise to the maker of the universe, and to the Saviour of mankind.

OPPONENTS of the Administration at Washington are making a great deal of noise about Senator Blounts pulling down the American flag that floated over the Capitol of the Hawaiian Islands. And they are comparing the situation of affairs to that of this country when the declaration of Independence was declared. When this country severed her relations with England she had something to cause her to do so. Something for which every American citizen would fight. But when representatives of this country floated to the Pacific zephyrs the stars and stripes, so far as appears from reading both sides of the argument, it was for the avowed purpose of protecting American interests. Was it necessary to hoist our country's emblem over those Islands in order to have every American living there have all that he was entitled to, or was it simply a scheme to secure to some rich sugar raisers and manufactures a few paltry dollars to add to their already corpuleut pocket books. If the United States has by its representatives aided in dethroning the Queen, in depriving her of her rights and possessions, is not the United States morally and legally obliged to do what is right to restore to her her position as it was when they aided in wronging her. Because she is a Queen and we don't like Queens or because she is a woman and we don't believe in womans rights should cut no figure. The fact of the matter remains the same as if it were a private individual, or a Republic that we had aided in wronging. We should right what we make wrong as far as is right to do so.

READ President Cleveland's message to Congress, on the Hawaiian question, it is found on the inside of this paper.

PHIL SCHEIG, was sentenced to serve a term of seven and one-half years in the penitentiary, and was taken to Stillwater on Wednesday.

IF the Republican officials of the State of Minnesota are honest in their belief that the Democratic State Auditor is not filling his office properly they should at once, take steps to vacate the office.

WHERE did the Minneapolis Tribune go to school? "Ich bin schuldig, fader, Ich bin schuldig," is not German. The Germans had been saying "vater" up to the time that the Tribune put "fader" into Phil Scheig's mouth.—Globe.

This sounds like some of Stacy's Dutch in the Howard Lake Herald.

THE resignation of U. S. Marshal, Capt. Jerry C. Donnahower, has been placed in the hands of Attorney General Olney, at Washington, and is to take effect Dec. 31. Marshal Donnahower says his fees are about even now and if he holds the office until his term would expire in May things would not be in so favorable a shape to turn over to his successor, and he wishes at once to enter into private business enterprises. This leaves the office to be filled in the very near future. Just who will be appointed remains to be seen. John Clark of St Paul, Ex-Congressman Harris, Senator Lienau and Senator Jay La Due are candidates mentioned. What's the matter with giving it to some man who is not so pronouncedly in favor of getting it. There are plenty of good men who might, on a pinch, be induced to accept the situation.

THE Delano Eagle is about as glaringly inconsistent this week as usual when she finds fault all in one column, with President Cleveland and Secretary Gresham for not blindly trusting their predecessor in office, and with State Auditor Bierman for trusting his, even though on the advice of the Attorney General She says; "There is evident design on the part of the President and Secretary Gresham to discredit everything the Harrison administration did in the matter," referring to the Hawaiian troubles. And she, refering to the pine land law suit, says; "And the pith of Mr. Bierman's circular is in his falling back on other State officials and his predecessors in office to justify his course." Now if President Cleveland should have followed out his predecessors plans to the letter, why do they blame Auditor Bierman for partially doing so, after the advice of the present Attorney General; O, Consistency! Thou art a jewel.

Tariff Reduction.

The Wilson tariff bill will be discussed after the holidays, and it is hoped that too much time will not be spent in talking about it. People are better acquainted with the subject than they, perhaps, ever were before, and long winded speeches would be out of place. The question has been before the voters at several elections and they have finally rendered their decision in favor of a cut down in rates, and an enlargement of the free list, and they are entitled to have it pretty soon now, and are expecting it. The tariff bills seem to have been gotten up with the view of mystifying them as much as possible. We read of so much per pound, specific duty, and so much advalorum duty, additional, and unless considerable attention has been given the subject, many fail to comprehend what an enormous rate they are paying for the priviledge of getting goods they must have into the country, or what a per cent. of profit they are paying into the manufacturers pockets for the privileges of using their goods. The dropping of the specific duty, that is the so much a pound, tariff, regardless of price, as for instance woolen and worsted clothing which the McKinley bill has at 49½ cts. per pound and 60 per ct advalorem, would be an advantage to poorer people; or people who can afford to wear only cheaper grades of goods; or hay which the McKinley bill has at $1 per ton may be of very different grade and price, and if our farmers should have to import it as England does this year, the $1 per ton would be harder on the cheaper grades, being a bigger per cent of first cost.

Pine Stumpage.

Auditor Biermann who, by virtue of his office, is, also, Commissioner of State lands, has issued to the public a report of the disputed question of his disposing of Sec. 35, Town 42, Range 26, a section of school lands covered with pine. He claims that this particular section together with 842 other tracts estimated and appraised was on the sales record when he took charge of the office. He states that "Of record, section 36, town 42, range 26, was estimated at 700,000 feet, and appraised at $1.75 M." If the Auditor can't take his predecessors figures and records for matters of this kind what is he to do? Is he to employ experts to view the land over again? Is he to expend thousands of dollars to ascertain if what his preeecessors have done is right or wrong? Is he to go to work from the beginning? Did he not drive a pretty good bargain when he found parties cutting on adjoining lands who would pay him $2 per M for lands that had been appraised at $1.75 per M. Did he not take more than ordinary precautions when he called upon the Attorney General for an opinion in the matter? And what is an Attorney General for if his advice is not to be followed in matters of this kind? Was not Auditor Burman justified in construing Section 2, of 269, General Laws of 1885, which reads as follows: "He shall take such measures as will protect said timber from damage or loss by fire, tresspass or otherwise, and make such regulations for the care control sale and disposition of the timber lands of the State," to permit him to sell at priyate sale, lands for which he could get more, per M than the appraised value by his predecessor's figures. Especially when the Attorney General had written him that in his opinion this very law, "clearly confers discretionery powers in making such sale by the State Land Commissioner." If as appears from some sources this question is a political one arranged to throw out of office the only Democrat in the State Capitol it must have been the intention to also provide against the return of his predecessor, who, it appears has been doing the thing for which fault has been found. Also, the Attorney General who it seems took the same view of the law that did State Land Commissioner Biermann, concerning the right to make private sale of lands.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

(From our Regular Correspondent.)
WASHINGTON, D. C., Dec. 15, 1893

President Cleveland, having exhausted the constitutional means at his command to right what he considered a great wrong perpetrated in Hawaii in the name and by the power of the United States, will now, after having furnished all the information in his possession, leave it to Congress and say what, if any further shall be done He makes no apology for what he has done; knowing that he has not violated the authority vested in him by the constitution and believing now as at the time of Minister Willis' departure from the United States that what he did was an act of justice from a strong to a weak nation.

Senator Vest unmercifully scored ex-minister Stevens and the New Englanders who instigated the Hawaiian revolution, in a short speech, replying to one made by Senator Frye eulogizing the Christian qualities of Mr. Stevens. He made a palpable hit and raised a hearty laugh when he charged that the New England revolutionists of Hawaii had Christianized the natives out of their country, taking posession of it under the name of God, and then dividing the lands among themselves under a law made by themselves; and he stated a great truth, manifest to all men, when he said that it was the policy of the republicans to have, instead of the compact continental republic established by the fathers, a great, expensive territory acquiring government extending to the islands of the ocean, and to the uttermost parts of the earth. Mr. Vest believes that the true policy of the United States in Hawaii and all other foreign countries is "hands off."

Republican Senators have been giving Senator Hill as much trouble as they possibly could in getting the bill for the repeal of the Federal election laws before the Senate, but they are finding that Senator Hill is no slouch of a fighter himself.

"I can assure the Senator," said Mr. Hill, of New York, to Mr. Cullom, of Illinois, "that the democratic party does intend to carry out the tariff promises of its national platform faithfully, honestly and impartially." Nothing bombastic about those plain words modestly spoken in reply to Senator Cullom's sneers and half spoken taunts about the party being afraid of its platform declarations on the tariff, but they have destroyed some very elaborately constructed stories intended to cheer the protectionists, in which Senator Hill invariably appeared as the leader of the democratic wing of the protection army. The fact that there is no such wing has not worried the concoctors of these romances; they would not recognize a fact if they met it in the road, and they would not thank anybody to introduce them to one.

Quite a delegation of Congressmen and prominent officials went over to Baltimore last night to hear Senator Gordon, of Georgia, deliver his address on "The last days of the Confederacy," among the latter being General Scofield.

Congressman Morse, of Massachusetts, possesses, in a remarkable degree, that faculty which once upon a time, according to the tale, caused the monkey to attempt to investigate a buzz saw in motion. He again assumed the role of monkey this week, to the buzz saw of Delegate Rawlins, of Utah. After being unmercifully held up to the ridicule of the House by Rawlins. Morse had to acknowledge that his opposition to the bill for the admission of Utah as a State, which was passed by the house, was based entirely upon a book written by Brigham Young's fifteenth wife. What would be thought of a lawyer who would make "Uncle Tom's Cabin" the corner stone of a case to be tried in the courts of the present time? Just about the same that is thought of Morse now.

Charman Wilson proved his earnestness in punishing the tariff bill by making the very unusual proposition to his colleagues that the Christmas recess be not taken this year, in order that the time which has been unavoidably lost in getting the bill before the House might be made up. While the proposition has been received with considerable favor the difficulty of keeping a quorum here and the certainty that the republicans would allow nothing to be done without one makes it improbable that it will be carried out. It is no fault of the Democratic members of the Ways and means committee that the bill is not now before the house; they have worked night and day to overcome the obstacles which have confronted them In obedience to the written request of a considerable number of democrats Representative Holman, chairman of the caucus, will call a caucus to consider the bill before the debate begins in the House.

Vice President Stevenson is loud in his praise of the hospitality extended to him during his southern trip.

INDEPENDENCE INCIDENTS.

It would seem that neither the Repeal bill, the McKinley bill, nor that Extra session or Congress had improved the times any although some say times are looking up for there is some $65,000,000 more money in the banks of New York. But does that amount to anything if it is not in circulation? We think not. Is the McKinley bill a preventative against soup houses and hard times as many of our itinerant republican politicans have declared. It would seem to a hungry man the thing dont work worth a cent. But they say the democrats have blocked the wheels of progress, and all business is at a standstill and will take lots of praying to get the democrats out of the hole they have got into. But the democrats do not believed every report they hear; if others want to they may. This country needs something besides bluff and talk wind is good in its place but you couldn't build the foundation of a government on it. Some are bound to believe anything their party leaders say. But that does not make good times; neither does it create capital.

We are having plenty of winter for so early in the season. The crop of snow is great and sleighing is good.

Quite a number of our towns people are on the sick list, caused by rheumatism, colds lagrippe and the Repeal Bill.

W. W. Mills is confined to the house, he has not been able to be out since he moved up from Minneapolis.

Report says there is two or three weddings coming off soon. B. R. Hoisington is now ready to do sawing for the public, bring on your logs and give him a trial.

The entertainment given at schoolhouse hall last Wednesday evening by major R. H. Hendershot, the Drummer Boy of the Rapphannock, was very good, and quite well patronised.

A New Species of Fish.

A guard tells a good story on a lady who was visiting a well known Chicago lady, and was being shown by her through the Fisheries Building. She was in the salt-water section of the aquarium, in the very thickest of the pushing, jostling, crowding mob that constantly gazed upon the caged denizens of the deep. Pushing her way toward the tank where the toad fishes disported themselves, she suddenly exclaimed:

"Do look at that great long fish squirting water out of his nose! Isn't it wonderful!"

The long fish referred to was a lead water-pipe leading from the top to the bottom of the section, through which was sent a copstant stream of salt water which came out in sprays through a number of little holes in the end of the pipe.

But she wasn't the only person who was deceived by these pipes that sprayed salt water in the various sections. Occasionally a countryman would be heard to explain:

"Gee whiz! look at that long eel! I never saw an eel squirt water like that before!"—From "Undercurrents of Humor from the Fair," in Demorest's Family Magazine for January.

SIR EDWIN ARNOLD says there are thirty thousand poets in England. No wonder there is such general discontent.

THE question as to whether winter commences on the 1st or 22d of December is not of special interest this winter. It is here, and there is an end to discussion.

ADVERTISING is part of the news of the day. It is, moreover, news that interests the people vitally because financially. The best business men understand this.

THE secretary of agriculture in his annual report recommends legislation compelling the immediate destruction of any animal or carcass condemned by United States inspectors.

THE dependent relatives of the Italians who were lynched in New Orleans have been awarded judgment in the United States circuit court against the city for $5,000 in each case.

ACCORDING to the report of the commissioner of Indian affairs the Indian is advancing in civilization and at the same time increasing his prospects of leaving a numerous posterity.

PHYSICIANS may be right when they tell us that the grip is coming again, but nothing can bring back to life the man who made such excruciatingly funny jokes about it three years ago.

SOMETIMES lovely woman goes too far in her struggle for emancipation. A case in point is reported from Indiana, where a young woman who was rebuked by her stepfather for keeping late hours protested with an ax.

CORONERS in various parts of the country are reaping the annual harvest provided for them by careless mothers who lock their children in the house with a roaring fire and a kerosene can while they go shopping or calling.

THE Missouri supreme court has decided that dentists are not doctors. Still, it always pays to be polite to your dentist. When you are in immediate use of his professional services it is best for you to call him doctor, as heretofore.

OKLAHOMA, with the recent addition of the Cherokee strip, has a population of 251,000. In 1890 it was about 60,000. Business and agriculture have developed proportionately, and the young territory is ahead of all the other territories in population already.

RICH gold fields are reported to have been discovered in Rioja, Argentina, and the congress of that country has ordered the completion of a railroad which will terminate close to the mines. The annual supply of gold is expected to be much increased in the near future from these and other mines that recently have been discovered.

A TEACHER who was held up in Cleveland claims that she frightened the footpad away by simply giving him the "schoolma'am's stare," good and hard. The lady, or anybody else who happens to know the ingredients of the stare that will cause a highwayman to hie himself away, will confer a favor upon the public by publishing the recipe.

THE youngest living child of a revolutionary soldier, it is believed, is ex-Judge Jeremiah Smith, of the Harvard law school, who was born in 1837, when his father, the famous Judge Jeremiah Smith, of New Hampshire, was 78 years old. The elder Judge Smith entered the revolutionary service at the age of 17 and was slightly wounded at the battle of Bennington.

NEW YORK racing associations are required to pay 5 per cent. of their receipts as a tax into the state treasury, and this money is apportioned among the various agricultural associations in the state. This tax amounts to over $17,000 for the year 1893, which represents receipts of nearly $350,000. The horse race has evidently retained its grip upon the pockets of the American public.

THOSE who belive that thirteen is an unlucky number should fight shy of the American twenty-five cent piece. It has thirteen stars, thirteen letters in the scroll held in the eagle's beak, thirteen marginal feathers on each wing, thirteen tail feathers, thirteen parallel lines in the shield, thirteen horizontal bars, thirteen arrow-heads and thirteen letters in the "quarter dollar." But most of us are mighty glad to get them, thirteen or no thirteen.

PRESIDENT CARNOT, of the French rerublic, has issued a decree for the making of preliminary arrangements for the world's fair it is proposed to hold at Paris in 1900, marking the closing year of the present century. He has named M. Alfred Picard as general commissioner of the exposition, and constituted a commission of 100 members, consisting of the colonial secretary, eight senators, twelve deputies and the heads of numerous designated departments. The preliminary work is divided among seven departments, each under the charge of an appropriate committe.

THEODORE R. TIMBY, now 71 years old and in Chicago hale and hearty, claims to have invented the revolving turret of modern naval vessels. He says that the idea came to him when a boy, over fifty years ago, from the first sight he had of Castle William in New York barbor. He took his idea to John C. Calhoun, who interested other senators in it and induced Mr. Timby to submit it to the chief engineer and the chief of ordnance. A committee of army and navy officers decided against it on acount of its cost, but Mr. Timby patented the idea in 1843 and secured a broad claim in 1862.

THE number of destitute persons in Chicago is appalling, says the Tribune. Those who have no homes, neither place to sleep nor food to eat except what is furnished free of cost to themselves, are numbered by thousands, and doubtless are but a small proportion of all those who are threatened by the wolf at the door. The list of sufferers includes not only great numbers of those who found regular work here a year or two ago, but many of those who were attracted by the fair and now find themselves stranded with little hope of being able to earn wages and no ability to go elsewhere.

INTERESTING NEWS COMPILATION.

FIFTY-THIRD CONGRESS.
Regular Session.

WEDNESDAY, Dec. 13.—In the senate the Hawaiian question was again discussed and a resolution calling upon the president for further information in the Hawaiian matter was referred to the committee on foreign affairs. In the house the bill for the admission of Utah to statehood was passed without division with an amendment prohibiting polygamy forever. Mr. Hatch's new antioption bill was introduced. It reduces the tax levied by the former bill one-half.

THURSDAY, Dec. 14.—In the senate to-day a bill was introduced by Senator Voorhees for the coinage of silver dollars and the retirement of small denominations of gold and paper. The house bill to repeal the federal election laws was reported and placed on the calendar. Adjourned to the 18th. In the house the bill to improve the methods of accounting in the post office department was passed. An effort to proceed with the bills admitting New Mexico and Arizona as states failed owing to the lack of a quorum.

FRIDAY, Dec. 15.—The senate was not in session to-day. In the house the bill for the admission of Arizona as a statepassed by a vote of 185 to 61 and the bill to admit New Mexico was discussed. The urgent deficiency bill was reported.

SATURDAY, Dec. 16.—There was no session in the senate. In the house the urgent deficiency bill was taken up and during the discussion Mr. Cannon (Ill.) severely criticised the pension policy of the administration. A bill was introduced to protect the forest reserve.

MONDAY, Dec. 18.—In the senate the president's message on the Hawaiian matter was read and a motion referring the document to the foreign affairs committee went over for the day. A bill was introduced to provide funds for immediate use in relieving the want and distress of the country. In the house the Hawaiian message was read and provoked an exciting discussion. In the debate on pensions Mr. Dolliver (Ia.) denounced the policy of the administration and Gen. Sickles (N. Y.) said he did not believe wholesale fraud existed in the pension rolls.

THE policy of the president concerning Hawaii, with all the accompanying correspondence since March 4, 1889, with a special message, was spread before congress. The president gives his reasons for the belief that the overthrow of the queen was the result of the active efforts of ex-Minister Stevens. Having asserted that the United States was responsible for the revolt, the message deals with the moral obligation of this government to right the wrong. The president says Mr. Willis was instructed to advise the queen that this country desired to repair the wrong done her by restoring her to the throne, providing those engaged in the revolution were not punished, and that the queen declined to accede to the condition of amnesty.

LATER NEWS.

WHEN the Southern Pacific express train arrived at Liberty, Tex., early the morning of the 19th, John C. Richardson, the Wells-Fargo messenger, was found dead in his car, his head split open by a blow from an axe, and the car robbed. From what can be learned it appears that the train porter, on going into the car, found Richardson dead, his feet near the "through" safe, with a hatchet lying by his head. The impression is that the robbers wanted him to open the "through" safe, the combination of which is known only at terminal points, and his failure to do so caused his death.

THE BLESSED CHRISTMAS TREE.

FAIR may fall the springtime, with banners all ablow!
With blossom on the branch and with daisy on the lea:
The hawthorn bush above and the primrose fair below,
But the fairest bloom of all is the bonny Christmas tree.

Fair the hillside orchards with apple blossoms sweet
That fall in snows of promise, while young birds sing in glee:
Glad the shining meadows where little lambs do bleat,
But the gladdest stem that groweth is the merry Christmas tree.

For its golden root of love uplifts to human ken
The stately trunk of charity, that riseth brave and free:
With fruit of holy deeds done by One who died for men,
And the cross of Christ doth bourgeon in the happy Chrismas tree;

With fruit of holy deeds, that whoso eats shall know
That joy divine of helpfulness that causeth grief to flee:
The radiance loaned from Heaven to the dreary land below,
That sparkles in the leaves of the precious Christmas tree.

Nor where its branches rise, the blight of earth shall pass
Like dark before the dawning, till every man may see
Life's hidden virtues shining as violets in the grass,
Made fragrant by the shadow of the holy Christmas tree.

And springtime of the soul at its coming draweth near,
With hope and peace and melody, with all delights that be—
O shout, ye little children, and carol loud and clear,
For the dearest gift the year doth bring, the blessed Christmas tree!

HIS CHRISTMAS WISH.

'Twuz 'tarnal strange, you'll all allow. An' credit me,
It wa'n't no meanness—that I swow—nur jealousy;
But every time thet C'rismus come thet odd I wuz
I wish't th' y'unguns 'd think I knew ol' Sandy Cluz.

I allus got right nervous-like th' day afore,
An' mebbe showed it w'en we gander'd round th' store
A-buyin' nuts an' candy an' etsettiyruz
T' make th' y'unguns think still more o' Sandy Cluz.

An' w'en we'd stirred th' y'unguns' stumps upstairs t' bed
An' crammed their stockin's full o' stuff, an' stood th' sled
Right in th' chimbly corner, I tell you I wuz
Jes' wishin' they' suspek I knew ol' Sandy Cluz.

Mos' y'unguns like their pop and mammy both right well,
An' C'rismus mornin' how they hug an' laugh an' yell
An' kiss you w'ile they make you taste o' things. But duz
Their love fer you seem like their love fer Sandy Cluz?

A LEGEND OF THE CHRIST CHILD.

I WANT to tell you to-night a story which has been told to little children in Germany for many hundreds of years.

Once upon a time, a long, long time ago, on the night before Christmas, a little child was wandering all alone through the streets of a great city. There were many people on the street, fathers and mothers, sisters and brothers, uncles and aunts, and even gray-haired grandfathers and grandmothers, all of whom were hurrying home with bundles of presents for each other and their little ones. Fine carriages rolled by, express wagons rattled past, even old carts were pressed into service, and all things seemed in a hurry, and glad with expectation of the coming Christmas morning.

From some of the windows bright lights were already beginning to stream until it was almost as light as day. But the little child seemed to have no home and wandered about listlessly from street to street. No one seemed to notice him, except perhaps Jack Frost, who bit his bare toes and made the ends of his fingers tingle. The north wind, too, seemed to notice the child, for it blew against him and pierced his ragged garments through and through, causing him to shiver with cold. Home after home he passed, looking with longing eyes through the windows, in upon the glad, happy children, most of whom were helping to trim the Christmas trees for the coming morrow.

"Surely," said the child to himself, "where there is so much gladness and happiness, some of it may be for me." So with timid steps he approached a large and handsome house. Through the windows he could see a tall and stately Christmas tree already lighted. Many presents hung upon it. Its green boughs were trimmed with gold and silver ornaments. Slowly he climbed up the broad steps and gently rapped at the door. It was opened by a tall and stately footman, who had on white gloves and shiny shoes and a large white cravat. He looked at the little child for a moment, then sadly shook his head and said: "Go down off the steps. There is no room for such as you here." He looked sorry as he spoke; possibly he remembered his own little ones at home and was glad that they were not out in this cold and bitter night. Through the open door a bright light shone, and the warm air, filled with the fragrance of the Christmas pine, rushed out through the door and seemed to greet the little wanderer with a kiss. As the child turned back into the cold and darkness, he wondered why the footman had spoken so, for surely, thought he, those little children would love to have another companion join them in their joyous Christmas festival. But the little children inside did not even know that he had knocked at the door.

The street seemed colder and darker to the child than before, and he went sadly forward, saying to himself: "Is there no one in all this great city who will share this Christmas with me?" Farther and farther down the street he went, to where the homes were not so large and beautiful. There seemed to be little children inside of nearly all the houses. They were dancing and frolicking about. There were Christmas trees in nearly every window, with beautiful dolls and trumpets and picture books, and balls, and tops, and other nice toys hung upon them. In one window the child noticed a little lamb made of soft white wool. Around its neck was tied a red ribbon. It had evidently been hung on the tree for one of the children. The little wanderer stopped before this window and looked long and earnestly at the beautiful things inside, but most of all was he drawn towards this white lamb. At last, creeping up to the window pane, he gently tapped upon it. A little girl came to the window and looked out into the dark street where the snow had begun to fall. She saw the child, but only frowned and shook her head and said: "Go away and come some other time. We are too busy to take care of you now." Back into the cold, dark street he turned again. The wind was whirling past him and seemed to say: "Hurry on, hurry on, we have no time to stop. 'Tis Christmas Eve and everybody is in a hurry to-night."

Again and again the little child rapped softly at door or window pane. At each place he was refused admission. One mother feared he might have some ugly disease which her darlings would catch; another father said he had only enough for his own children, and none to spare for beggar brats. Still another told him to go home where he belonged, and not to trouble other folks.

The hours passed; later grew the night, and colder grew the wind, and darker seemed the street. Farther and farther the little one wandered. There was scarcely anyone left upon the street by this time, and the few who remained did not seem to see the child, when suddenly ahead of him there appeared a bright, single ray of light. It shone through the darkness into the child's eyes. He looked up smiling and said: "I will go where the light beckons; perhaps they will share their Christmas with me."

Hurrying past all the other houses he soon reached the end of the street and went straight up to the window from which the light was streaming. It was a poor, little, low house, but the child cared not for that. The light seemed still to call him in. What do you suppose the light came from? Nothing but a tallow candle which had been placed in an old cup with a broken handle, in the window, as a glad token of Christmas Eve. There was neither curtain nor shade to the little square window, and as the little child looked in he saw standing upon a small wooden table a branch of a Christmas tree. The room was plainly furnished, but was very clean. Near the fireplace sat a lovely-faced mother with a little two-year-old on her knee and an older child beside her. The two children were looking into their mother's face and listening to a story. She must have been telling them a Christmas story. I think. A few bright coals were burning in the fireplace, and all seemed light and warm within.

The little wanderer crept closer and closer to the window pane. So sweet seemed the mother's face, so loving seemed the little children, that at last he took courage and tapped gently, very gently, on the door. The mother stopped talking, the little children looked up. "What was that, mother?" asked the little girl at her side. "I think it was some one tapping on the door," replied the mother. "Run as quickly as you can and open it, dear, for it is a bitter cold night to keep anyone waiting in this storm." "Oh, mother, I think it was the bough of the tree tapping against the window-pane," said the little girl. "Do please go on with our story." Again the little wanderer tapped upon the door. "My child, my child," exclaimed the mother, rising, "that certainly was a rap on the door. Run quickly and open it. No one must be left out in the cold on our beautiful Christmas Eve."

The child ran to the door and threw it wide open. The mother saw the ragged stranger standing without, cold and shivering, with bare head and almost bare feet. She held out both hands and drew him into the warm, bright room. "Oh, you poor, dear child, come in as quickly as you can and get warm! Where did you come from and where are you going? Have you no home? Have you no mamma? Have you no Christmas to celebrate?"

The mother put her arms around the strange child, and drew him close to her breast. "He is very cold, my children," said she. "We must warm him and feed him, and give him some clothes." "And," added the little girl, "we must love him and give some of our Christmas, too." "Yes," said the mother, "but first let us warm him."

So she sat down beside the fire with the child on her lap, and her own two little ones warmed his half-frozen hands in their own, and the mother smoothed his tangled curls, and bending low over his head kissed the child's face. She gathered the three little ones together in her arms and the candle and the firelight shone over them, and for a few moments the room was very still. Then the mother whispered to the little girl, and the child ran quickly into the next room and soon returned with a roll of bread and a bowl of milk which had been set aside for her own breakfast the next morning.

The little two-year-old, who had slipped away from his mother's side, was happy that he, too, could help the little stranger by bringing the wooden spoon from the table. By and by the little girl said softly to her mother: "May we not light the Christmas tree, and let this little child see how beautiful it will look?" "Yes," said the mother. With that she seated the child on a low stool beside the fire and went herself to fetch the few simple ornaments which from year to year she had saved for her children's Christmas tree. They were soon busy preparing the tree and lighting the candles. So busy were they that they did not notice that the room had filled with a strange and beautiful light. They turned and looked at the spot where the little wanderer sat. His ragged clothes had changed to garments white and beautiful. His tangled curls seemed like a halo of golden light about his head, but most beautiful of all was his face, which shone with a light so dazzling that they could scarcely look upon it.

In silent wonder they gazed at the child. Their little room seemed to grow larger, the roof of their low house seemed to expand and rise, until it reached the sky. With a sweet and gentle smile the beautiful child looked upon them for a moment and then slowly rose and floated through the air, above the tree-tops, beyond the church-spire, higher even than the clouds themselves, until he appeared to them to be a shining star in the sky above, and at last disappeared from sight. The wondering children turned in hushed awe to their mother and then said in a whisper: "Oh, mother, it was the Christ Child, was it not?" And the mother said in a low tone: "Yes."

And so, they say, each Christmas Eve the little Christ Child wanders through some town or village, and those who receive Him and take Him into their homes and hearts have given to them this marvelous vision which is denied to others.—Adapted from the German by Elizabeth Harmon for Chicago Standard.

THE CHRISTMAS DRUM.

I am the merry Christmas drum,
I'm gladly welcomed when I come
By Johnny, Dick and Freddy,
And even grandpa with a glow
Commends my martial tones, altho'
He says my voice is heady.

The live-long day the boys are at
The sounding of a rat-tat-tat
Upon my upper story.
And, for the moment, papa says
I 'mind him of his thrilling days
Upon the field of glory.

But soon they weary of my din,
The neighbors one and all come in
With protests most emphatic,
And with a badly broken head
I'm bundled off among the dead
Attractions in the attic.

DEATH SEEMED NEAR

By reason of intense suffering with an abscess on my thigh, I went to Maryland University Hospital, where they said my trouble was chronic blood poisoning and gave me little hope. I returned home and took Hood's Sarsaparilla. I have used six bottles and the abscess has entirely disappeared, and I have been in fine health ever since. I know if it had not been for Hood's Sarsaparilla I should be in my grave. I have gained in weight from 147 a year ago to 170 pounds to-day. I praise Hood's Sarsaparilla for it all." WM. E. GIVES HIS REASONS.

The President Explains His Action with Reference to Hawaii.

Feeling That the Queen Had Been Overthrown by Reason of Unjust Intervention, He Deemed It His Duty to Right the Wrong.

HIS PLAN BLOCKED BY THE QUEEN.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 20.—The president's response to the resolutions passed by both houses of congress requesting information in Hawaiian affairs, and especially to the nature of the instructions given to Minister Willis, was sent in to congress Monday. The message of the president was as follows:

TO THE SENATE AND HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES: In my recent annual message to the congress I briefly referred to our relations with Hawaii and expressed the intention of transmitting further information on the subject when additional advices permitted. Though I am not able now to report a definite change in the actual situation, I am convinced that the difficulties lately created both here and in Hawaii and now standing in the way of a solution through executive action of the problem presented render it proper and expedient that the matter should be referred to the broader authority and discretion of congress, with a full explanation of the endeavor thus far made to deal with the emergency and a statement of the considerations which have governed my action. I suppose that right and justice should determine the path to be followed in treating this subject. If national honesty is to be disregarded and a desire for territorial extension or dissatisfaction with a form of government not our own ought to regulate our conduct I have entirely misapprehended the mission and character of our government and the behavior which the conscience of our people demands of their public servants.

The Annexation Treaty.

When the present administration entered upon its duties the senate had under consideration a treaty providing for the annexation of the Hawaiian islands to the territory of the United States. Surely under our constitution and laws is the enlargement of our limits is a manifestation of the highest attribute of sovereignty, and if entered upon as an executive act all things relating to the transaction should be clear and free from suspicion. Additional importance attached to this particular treaty of annexation, because it contemplated a departure from unbroken American tradition in providing for the addition to our territory of islands of the sea more than 2,000 miles removed from our nearest coast.

Instability of Provisional Government.

These considerations might not of themselves call for interference with the completion of a treaty entered upon by a previous administration. But it appeared from the documents accompanying the treaty when submitted to the senate, that the ownership of Hawaii was tendered to us by a provisional government set up to succeed the constitutional ruler of the islands, who had been dethroned, and it did not appear that such provisional government had the sanction of either popular revolution or suffrage.

History of the Revolt.

Two other remarkable features of the transaction naturally attracted attention. One was the extraordinary haste—not to say precipitancy—characterizing all the transactions connected with the treaty. It appeared that a so-called committee of safety, ostensibly the source of the revolt against the constitutional government of Hawaii, was organized on Saturday, the 14th day of January; that on Monday, the 16th, the United States forces were landed from a naval vessel lying in its harbor; that on the 17th the scheme of a provisional government was perfected, and a proclamation naming its officers was on the same day prepared and read at the government building; that immediately thereupon the United States minister recognized the provisional government thus created; that two days afterwards, on the 19th day of January, commissioners representing such government sailed for this country in a steamer especially chartered for the occasion, arriving in San Francisco on the 28th day of January and in Washington on the 3d day of February; that on the next day they had their first interview with the secretary of state, and another on the 11th, when the treaty of annexation was practically agreed upon, and that on the 14th it was formally concluded and on the 15th transmitted to the senate. Thus between the initiation of the scheme for a provisional government in Hawaii on the 14th day of January and the submission to the senate of the treaty of annexation concluded with such government, the entire interval was thirty-two days, fifteen of which were spent by the Hawaiian commissioners in their journey to Washington. In the next place, upon the face of the papers submitted with the treaty, it clearly appeared that there was open and undetermined an issue of fact of the most vital importance.

Harrison's Message.

The message of the president accompanying the treaty declared that: "The overthrow of the monarchy was not in any way promoted by this government," and in a letter to the president from the secretary of state, also submitted to the senate with the treaty, the following passage occurs: "At the time the provisional government took possession of the government buildings no troops or officers of the United States were present or took any part whatever in the proceedings. No public recognition was accorded to the provisional government by the United States minister until after the queen's abdication and when they were in effective possession of the government buildings, the archives, the treasury, the barracks, the police station and all the potential machinery of the government."

Protest of the Queen.

But a protest also accompanied said treaty, signed by the queen and her ministers at the time she made way for the provisional government, which explicitly stated that she yielded to the superior forces of the United States whose minister had caused United States troops to be landed at Honolulu and declared that he would support such provisional government.

The truth or falsity of this protest was surely of the first importance. If true, nothing but the concealment of its truth could induce our government to negotiate with the semblance of a government thus created, nor could a treaty resulting from the acts stated in the protest have been knowingly deemed worthy of consideration by the senate. Yet the truth or falsity of the protest had not been investigated.

Why Blount Was Sent to Hawaii.

I conceived it to be my duty, therefore, to withdraw the treaty from the senate for examination and meanwhile to cause an accurate, full and impartial investigation to be made of the facts attending the subversion of the constitutional government of Hawaii and the installment in its place of the provisional government. I selected for the work of investigation Hon. James H. Blount, of Georgia, whose services of eighteen years as a member of the house of representatives and whose experience as chairman of the committee of foreign affairs in that body and his consequent familiarity with international topics, joined with his high character and honorable reputation, seemed to render him peculiarly fitted for the duties intrusted to him. His report detailing his action under the instructions given to him and the conclusions derived from his investigation accompany this message.

The Commissioner's Report.

These conclusions do not rest for their acceptance entirely upon Mr. Blount's honesty and ability as a man, nor upon his acumen and impartiality as an investigator. They are accompanied by the evidence upon which they are based, which evidence is also herewith transmitted, and from which it seems to me no other deductions could possibly be reached than those arrived at by the commissioner.

President and Senate Misled.

The report with its accompanying proofs, and such other evidence as is now before the congress or is herewith submitted, justifies in my opinion the statement that when the president was led to submit the treaty to the senate with the declaration that "the overthrow of the monarchy was not in any way promoted by this government," and when the senate was induced to receive and discuss it on that basis, both president and senate were misled.

The attempt will not be made in this communication to touch upon all the facts which throw light upon the progress and consummation of this scheme of annexation. A very brief and imperfect reference to the facts and evidence at hand will exhibit its character and the incidents in which it had its birth.

The Agitation for Annexation.

It is unnecessary to set forth the reasons which in January, 1893, led a considerable proportion of American and other foreign merchants and traders residing at Honolulu to favor the annexation of Hawaii to the United States. It is sufficient to note the fact and to observe that the project was one which was zealously promoted by the minister representing the United States in that country. He evidently had an ardent desire that it should become a fact accomplished by his agency and during his ministry, and was not inconveniently scrupulous as to the means employed to that end.

Ex-Minister Stevens Scored.

On the 19th day of November, 1892, nearly two months before the first overt act tending towards the subversion of the Hawaiian government and the attempted transfer of Hawaiian territory to the United States, he addressed a long letter to the secretary of state in which the case for annexation was elaborately argued, on moral, political and economical grounds. He refers to the loss to the Hawaiian sugar interests from the operation of the McKinley bill, and the tendency to still further depreciation of sugar property unless some positive measure of relief is granted. He strongly inveighs against the existing Hawaiian government and emphatically declares for annextion. He says:

Some of Stevens' Letters.

"In truth the monarchy here is an absurd anachronism. It has nothing on which it logically or legitimately stands. The feudal basis on which it once stood no longer existing, the monarchy now is only an impediment to good government, an obstruction to the prosperity and progress of the islands."

He further says:

"As a crown colony of Great Britain or a territory of the United States the government modifications could be made readily and good administration of the law secured. Destiny and the vast future interests of the United States in the Pacific clearly indicate who at no distant day must be responsible for the government of these islands. Under a territorial government they could be as easily governed as any of the existing territories of the United States."

"Hawaii has reached the parting of the ways. She must now take the road which leads to Asia, or the other which outlets her in America, gives her an American civilization, and binds her to the care of American destiny."

He also declares:

"One of two courses seem to me absolutely necessary to be followed, either bold and vigorous measures for annexation or a 'customs union,' an ocean cable from the California coast to Honolulu, Bar Pearl harbor perpetually ceded to the United States, with an implied but not expressly stipulated American protectorate over the islands. I believe the former to be the better, that which will prove much the more advantageous to the islands, and the cheapest and least embarrassing in the end to the United States. If it was wise for the United states through Secretary Marcy thirty-eight years ago to offer to expend $10,000,000 to secure annexation in the near future. To-day the United States has five times the wealth she possessed in 1854, and the reasons now existing for annexation are much stronger than they were then. I cannot refrain from the expression of opinion with emphasis that the golden hour is near at hand."

More Hot Shot for Stevens.

These declarations certainly show a disposition and condition of mind, which may be usefully recalled when interpreting the significance of the minister's conceded acts, or when considering the probabilities of such conduct on his part as may not be admitted.

In this view it seems proper to also quote a letter written by the minister to the secretary of state on the 8th day of March, 1892, nearly a year prior to the first step taken toward annexation. After stating the possibility that the existing government of Hawaii might be overturned by an orderly and peaceful revolution, Minister Stevens writes as follows:

"Ordinarily in like circumstances, under the rule seems to be to limit the landing and movement of United States forces in foreign waters and dominion exclusively to the protection of the United States legation and of the lives and property of American citizens. But as the relations of the United States to Hawaii are exceptional, and in former years the United States officials here took somewhat exceptional action in circumstances of disorder, I desire to know how far the present minister and naval commander may deviate from established international rules and precedents in the contingencies indicated in the first part of this dispatch."

The Hour and the Man.

To a minister of this temper full of zeal for annexation there seemed to arise in January, 1893, the precise opportunity for which he was watchfully waiting—an opportunity which by timely deviation from established international rules and precedents might be improved to successfully accomplish the great object in view; and we are quite prepared for the exultant enthusiasm with which in a letter to the state department dated February 1, 1893, he declares:

"The Hawaiian pear is now fully ripe and this is the golden hour for the United States to pick it."

Further Diplomatic Activity.

As a further illustration of the activity of the diplomatic representative, attention is called to the fact that on the day the above letter was written, apparently unable longer to restrain his ardor, he issued a proclamation whereby "in the name of the United States" he assumed the protection of the Hawaiian islands and declared that said action was "taken pending and subject to negotiations at Washington." Of course, this assumption of a protectorate was promptly disavowed by our government but the American flag remained over the government building at Honolulu and the forces remained on guard until April and after Mr Blount's arrival on the scene when both were removed. A brief statement of the occurences that led to the supervision of the constitutional government of Hawaii, in the interests of annexation to the United States, will exhibit the true complexion of that transaction.

The Committee of Safety.

Saturday, January 14, 1893, the queen of Hawaii, who had been contemplating the proclamation of a new constitution, had in deference to the wishes and remonstrances of her cabinet, renounced the project for the present, at least. Taking this relinquished purpose as a basis of action, citizens of Honolulu, numbering from fifty to one hundred, mostly resident aliens, met in a private office and selected a so-called committee of safety composed of thirteen persons, seven of whom were foreign subjects, and consisted of five Americans, one Englishman and one German. This committee, though its designs were not revealed, had in view nothing less than annexation to the United States and between Saturday, the 14th, and the following Monday, the 16th of January —though exactly what action was taken may not be clearly disclosed—they were certainly in communication with the United States minister. On Monday morning the queen and her cabinet made public proclamation with a notice which was specially served upon the representatives of all foreign governments, that any changes in the constitution would be sought only in the methods provided by that instrument.

Nevertheless, at the call and under the auspices of the committee of safety a mass meeting of citizens was held, on that day to protest against the queen's alleged illegal and unlawful proceedings and purposes. Even at this meeting the committee of safety continued to disguise their real purpose and contented themselves with procuring the passage of a resolution denouncing the queen and empowering the committee to provide ways and means "to secure the permanent maintenance of law and order and the protection of life, liberty and property in Hawaii." This meeting adjourned between three and four o'clock in the afternoon.

The Appeal for American Support.

On the same day, and immediately after such adjournment, the committee, unwilling to take further steps without the cooperation of the United States minister, addressed him a note representing that the public safety was menaced and that lives and property were in danger, and concluded as follows:

"We are unable to protect ourselves without aid, and therefore pray for the protection of the United States forces."

Whatever may be thought of the other contents of this note, the absolute truth of this latter statement is uncontestable. When the note was written and delivered the committee, so far as it appears, had neither a man nor a gun at their command and after its delivery they became so panic stricken at their position that they sent some of their number to interview the minister and request him not to land the United States forces until the next morning. But he replied that the troops had been ordered and whether the committee were ready or not the landing should take place.

Landing of the Marines.

And so it happened that on the 16th day of January, 1893, between 4 and 6 o'clock in the afternoon a detachment of marines from the United States steamship Boston with two pieces of artillery landed at Honolulu. The men, upward of 160 in all, were supplied with double cartridge belts filled with ammunition and with haversacks and canteens, and were accompanied by a hospital corps with stretchers and medical supplies. This military demonstration upon the soil of Honolulu was of itself an act of war, unless made either with the consent of the government of Hawaii or for the bona fide purpose of protecting the imperiled lives and property of citizens of the United States; but there is no retense of any such consent on the part of the government of the queen, which at that time was undisputed and was both the de facto and the de jure government. In point of fact the existing government, instead of requiring the presence of an armed force, protested against it. There is little basis for the pretense that such forces were landed for the security of American life and property. If so they would have been stationed in the vicinity of such property, so as to protect it, instead of at a distance, so as to command the Hawaiian government building and palace.

Admiral Skerrett's Statements.

Admiral Skerrett, the officer in command of our naval force on the Pacific station, has frankly stated that in his opinion the location of the troops was inadvisable if they were landed for the protection of American citizens whose residences and places of business, as well as the legation and consulate were in a distant part of the city, but the location selected was a wise one if the forces were landed for the purpose of supporting the provisional government. If any peril to life and property calling for any such martial array had existed Great Britain and other foreign powers interested would not have been behind the United States in activity to protect their citizens, but they made no sign in that direction. When these armed men were landed, the city of Honolulu was in its customary orderly and peaceful condition. There was no symptom of riot or disturbance in any quarter. Men, women and children were about the streets as usual, and nothing varied from the ordinary routine or disturbed the ordinary tranquility except the landing of the Boston's marines and their march through the town to the quarters assigned them. Indeed, the fact that after having called for the landing of the United States forces on the plea of danger to life and property, the committee of safety themselves requested the minister to postpone action, exposed the untruthfulness of their representations of present peril to life and property. The peril they saw was an anticipation growing out of guilty intentions on their part and something which, though not then existing, they knew would certainly follow their attempt to overthrow the government of the queen without the aid of the United States forces.

The Occupation of Honolulu.

Thus it appears that Hawaii was taken possession of by the United States forces without the consent or wish of the government of the islands or of anybody else, so far as shown, except the United States minister. Therefore, the military occupation of Honolulu by the United States on the day mentioned was wholly without justification, either as an occupation by consent or as an occupation necessitated by dangers threatening American life and property.

It must be accounted for in some other way and on some other ground, and its real motive and purposes are neither obscure nor far to seek.

The United States forces being now on the scene and favorably stationed, the committee proceeded to carry out their original scheme. They met the next morning, Tuesday, the 17th, perfected the plan of temporary government and fixed upon its principal officers, ten of whom were drawn from the thirteen members of the committee of safety. Between one and two o'clock, by squads and by different routes to avoid notice, and having first taken the precaution of ascertaining whether there was anyone there to oppose them, they proceeded to the government building to proclaim the new government. No sign of opposition was manifest and thereupon an American citizen began to read the proclamation from the steps of the government building almost entirely without auditors. It is said that before the reading was finished quite a concourse of persons, variously estimated at from fifty to 100, some armed and some unarmed, gathered about the committee to give them aid and confidence. This statement is not important, since the one controlling factor in the whole affair was unquestionably the United States marines, who, drawn up under arms and with artillery in readiness only 76 yards distant, dominated the situation.

The Government's Proclamation.

The provisional government thus proclaimed was by the terms of the proclamation "to exist until terms of union with the United States had been negotiated and agreed upon." The United States minister, pursuant to prior agreement, recognized this government within an hour after the reading of the proclamation, and before 5 o'clock, in answer to an inquiry on behalf of the queen and her cabinet, announced that he had done so. When our minister recognized the provisional government the only basis upon which it rested was the fact that the committee of safety had in the manner above stated declared it to exist. It was neither a government de facto nor de jure. That it was not in such possession of the government property and agencies as entitled it to recognition is conclusively proved by a note found in the files of the legation at Honolulu, addressed by the declared head of the provisional government to Minister Stevens, dated January 17, 1893, in which he acknowledges with expressions of appreciation the minister's recognition of the provisional government, and states that it is not yet in the possession of the station house, the place where a large number of the queen's troops were quartered. Though the same had been in demand of the queen's officers in charge, nevertheless, this wrongful recognition by our minister placed the government of the queen in a position of most perilous perplexity. On one hand, she had possession of the palace, the barracks and the police station, and had at her command at least 500 fully armed men and several pieces of artillery. Indeed, the whole military force of her kingdom was on her side and at her disposal, while the committee of safety, by actual search, had discovered that there were but very few arms in Honolulu that were not in the service of the government. In this state of things if the queen could have dealt with the insurgents alone her course would have been plain and the result unmistakable. But the United States had allied herself with her enemies, had recognized them as the true government of Hawaii, and had put her and her adherents in the position of opposition against lawful authority. She knew that she could not withstand the power of the United States, but she believed that she might safely trust to its justice. Accordingly, some hours after the recognition of the provisional government by the United States minister, the palace, the barracks and the police station, with all the military resources of the country, were delivered up by the queen upon the representation made to her that her cause would thereafter be reviewed at Washington, and while protesting that she surrendered to the superior force of the United States, whose minister had caused United States troops to be landed at Honolulu, and declared that he would support the provisional government, and that she yielded her authority to prevent collision of armed forces and loss of life and only until such time as the United States, upon the facts being presented to it, should undo the action of the representatives and reinstate her in the authority she claimed as the constitutional sovereign of the Hawaiian islands. This protest was delivered to the chief of the provisional government, who indorsed thereon his acknowledgement of its receipt. The terms of the protest were read without dissent by those assuming to constitute the provisional government, who were certainly charged with the knowledge that the queen, instead of finally abandoning her power, had appealed to the justice of the United States for reinstatement in her authority, and yet the provisional government, with this unanswered protest in its hands, hastened to negotiate with the United States for the permanent banishment of the queen from power and for a sale of her kingdom.

President Jackson Cited.

Our country was in danger of occupying the position of having actually set up a temporary government on foreign soil for the purpose of acquiring through that agency territory which we had wrongfully put in its possession. The control of both sides of the bargain acquired in such a manner is called by a familiar and unpleasant name when found in private transactions. We are not without a precedent showing how scrupulously we avoided such accessions to our former days. After the people of Texas had declared their independence of Mexico, they resolved that on the acknowledgement of their independence by the United States they would seek admission into the union. Several months after the battle of San Jacinto by which Texas independence was practically assured and established, President Jackson declined to recognize it, alleging as one of his reasons that in the circumstances it become us "to beware of a too early movement as it might subject us, however unjustly, to the imputation of seeking to establish the claim of our neighbors to a territory with a view to its subsequent acquisition by ourselves." This is in marked contrast with the hasty recognition of a government openly and comededly set up for the purpose of tendering to us territorial annexation. I believe that a candid and thorough examination of the facts will force the conviction that the provisional government owes its existence to an armed invasion by the United States. Fair minded people with the evidence before them will hardly claim that the Hawaiian government was overthrown by the people of the islands or that the provisional government has ever existed with their consent. I do not understand that any member of this government claims that the people would uphold it by their suffrages if they were allowed to vote on the question. While naturally sympathizing with every effort to establish a republican form of government it has been the settled policy of the United States to concede to people of foreign countries the same freedom and independence in the management of their domestic affairs that we have always claimed for ourselves, and it has been our practice to recognize revolutionary governments as soon as it became apparent that they were supported by the people. For illustration of this rule I need only to refer to the revolution in Brazil in 1889 when our minister was instructed to recognize the republic, so soon as a majority of the people of Brazil should have signified their assent to its establishment and maintenance; to the revolution in Chili, in 1891, when our minister was disposed to recognize the new government "if it was accepted by the people," and to the revolution in Venezuela, in 1892, when our recognition was accorded on condition that the new government was "fully established in possession of the power of the nation, and accepted by the people." As I apprehend the situation, we are brought face to face with the following conditions:

The lawful government of Hawaii was overthrown without the drawing of a sword or the firing of a shot by a process every step of which, it may safely be asserted, is directly traceable to and dependent for its success upon the agency of the United States minister through its diplomatic and naval representatives. But for the notorious predilections of the United States minister for annexation, the committee of safety, which should be called the committee of annexation, would never have existed. But for the landing of the United States forces upon false pretexts respecting the danger to life and property the committee would never have exposed themselves to the pains and penalties of treason by undertaking the subversion of the queen's government. But the presence of the United States force in the immediate vicinity, and in position to afford all needed protection and support to the committee would not have proclaimed the provisional government from the steps of the government building.

Finally, but for the lawless occupation of Honolulu under false pretexts by the United States forces and but for Minister Stevens' recognition of the provisional government when the United States forces were its sole support and constituted its only military strength, the queen and her government would never have yielded to the provisional government, even for a time, and for the sole purpose of submitting her case to the enlightened justice of the United States.

Does Not Favor Annexation.

Believing, therefore, that the United States could not, under the circumstances disclosed, annex the islands without justly incurring the imputation of acquiring them by unjustifiable methods, I shall not again submit the treaty of annexation to the senate for its consideration, and in the instructions to Minister Willis, a copy of which accompanies this message, I have directed him to so inform the provisional government.

Wants Justice Done to Hawaii.

But in the present instance our duty does not, in my opinion, end with refusing to consummate this questionable transaction. It has been the boast of our government that it seeks to do justice in all things without regard to the strength or weakness of those with whom it deals.

By an act of war, committed with the participation of a diplomatic representative of the United States and without authority of congress, the government of a feeble but friendly and confiding people has been overthrown. A substantial wrong has thus been done which a due regard for our national character as well as the rights of the injured people requires we should endeavor to repair. The provisional government has not assumed a republican or other constitutional form, but has remained a mere executive council oligarchy, set up without the assent of the people. It has not sought to find a permanent basis of popular support and has given no evidence of an intention to do so. Indeed, the representatives of that government assert that the people of Hawaii are unfit for popular government and frankly avow that they can be best ruled by arbitrary or despotic power.

America Must Vindicate Its Honor.

The United States cannot properly be put in the position of countenancing a wrong after its commission any more than in that of consenting to in advance. On that ground it cannot allow itself to refuse to redress an injury inflicted through an abuse of power by officers clothed with its authority and wearing its uniform; and, on the same ground, if a feeble but friendly state is in danger of being robbed of its independence and its sovereignty by a misuse of the name and power of the United States, the United States cannot fail to vindicate its honor and its sense of justice by an earnest effort to make all possible reparation.

Wants a Peaceful Adjustment.

In the belief that the queen, as well as her enemies, would be willing to adopt such a course as would meet the prevailing conditions, and in view of the fact that both the queen and the provisional government had at one time apparently acquiesced in a reference of the entire case to the United States government, and, considering the further fact that in any event the provisional government by its own declared limitation was only to exist until terms of union with the United States of America have been negotiated and agreed upon, I hoped that after the assurance to the members of that government that such union could not be consummated I might compass a peaceful adjustment of the difficulty.

Demands Made Upon the Queen.

Actuated by these desires and purposes, and not unmindful of the inherent perplexities of the situation nor of the limitations upon my power, I instructed Minister Willis to advise the queen and her supporters of my desire to aid in the restoration of the status existing before the lawless landing of the United States forces at Honolulu on the 16th of January last, if such restoration could be effected upon terms providing for clemency as well as justice to all parties concerned.

Minister Willis' Instructions.

The conditions suggested, as the instructions show, contemplate a general amnesty to those concerned in setting up the provisional government and a recognition of all its bona fide acts and obligations. In short, they require that the past should be buried and that the restored government should reassume its authority as if its continuity had not been interrupted.

The Queen Not Satisfied.

These conditions have not proved acceptable to the queen, and though she has been informed that they will be insisted upon, and that, unless acceded to, the efforts of the president to aid in the restoration of her government will cease, I have not thus far learned that she is willing to yield them her acquiescence. The check which my plans have thus encountered has prevented their presentation to the members of the provisional government, while unfavorable public misrepresentations of the situation and exaggerated statements of the sentiments of our people have obviously injured the prospects of successful executive mediation.

I therefore submit this communication with its accompanying exhibits, embracing Mr. Blount's report, the evidence and statements taken by him at Honolulu, the instructions given to both Mr. Blount and Minister Willis, and correspondence connected with the affair in hand.

Will Cooperate with Congress.

In commending this subject to the extended powers and wide discretion of congress, I desire to add the assurance that I shall be much gratified to cooperate in any legislative plan which may be devised for the solution of the problem before us which is consistent with American honor, integrity and morality.

DEATH BY DYNAMITE.

Three Railway Employes Blown to Pieces in West Virginia.

WHEELING W. Va., Dec. 20.—A terrible explosion of dynamite took place at Hendricks, a station on the West Virginia Central railroad, at 11 o'clock Monday morning, by which three men were torn into fragments and their arms, legs and heads thrown long distances. They were J. H. Houston, Giovanna Pagoletta and Charles Swartz.

The men were in the employ of the railroad and were transporting fifty pounds of dynamite when the explosion took place. Houston, who lived at Beverly, Randolph county, was disemboweled, and his legs and arms blown off and the trunk thrown 60 or 70 yards. The head of Pagoletta, the Italian, who lived at Parsons, was blown from the body against some rocks, while the body itself fell 50 yards away. Swartz was thrown about 40 yards, while his legs were torn off, one alighting on the opposite side of the river. An immense hole was torn in the earth.

A FEW ARE LEFT.

A Herd of Two Dozen Buffalo Found in Colorado.

DENVER, Col., Dec. 20.—A state deputy game warden has found another small herd of buffalo, larger than the one found in Lost park last summer, in North park, Routt county, a region more isolated than any other part of Colorado. The herd is said to consist of two dozen of the rare animals. They are very tame and are fed regularly by some of the few farmers who inhabit the lonely park. These people have constituted themselves special protectors of the herd. Its existence was kept quiet through fear of agents of taxidermists and of hunters.

TRAGEDY IN ARKANSAS.

A Young Man Shoots Three Women and Himself.

FORT SMITH, Ark., Dec. 20.—Barnie Patrick, aged 18, on Monday shot his sweetheart, Ina Dodson, and two other women and then put a pistol ball through his own head. The tragedy occurred in the store of J. C. Tucker, on Townson avenue. Miss Dodson was killed instantly. One of the other women, Mrs. James Hendricks, will die. The third, Mrs. Ella Garrett, will recover. Patrick is shot through the temple, and though yet alive cannot recover. The shooting was the result of a lover's quarrel.

Banker Cadwallader Indicted.

MADISON, Wis., Dec. 20.—The grand jury in the United States court has returned two indictments against A. A. Cadwallader, who was brought here from Brazil to answer to the charge of embezzlement from the Superior national bank, of which he was president. One count charges him with embezzlement and the other with conspiracy to commit an offense against the United States.

CURE ROUND SHOULDERS.

Simple Exercise That Require Little Time and No Apparatus.

A Boston woman physician has recommended the following movements for the cure of all except very "severe cases" of round shoulders, when braces are also sometimes a necessity: "1. Raise arms before your shoulder high; extend arms sideways; throw head back; move arms forward; lower arms; repeat ten times. 2. Stand erect; raise arms before you; rise on tiptoes, then throw arms as far backward as possible; sink again on heels and drop arms to side; repeat ten times. 3. Raise arms with elbow bent shoulder high, bringing palms together in front of face; then, with elbows still bent, swing both arms vigorously backward as far as possible even with the shoulders, palms looking forward. This should be repeated several times, but as the position is somewhat fatiguing, rest or change of exercise may be made between the movements."

Another simple movement designed to bring about a correct position of the shoulder-blades consists of holding a cane or wand in both hands, throwing the head back, and carrying the stick "from above the head back and down the hips."

As the clothing, if too light or unyielding about or over the shoulders, may help to produce round shoulders, both the under and outside waist should be comfortable and bands over the shoulder of garments made of elastic.—Chicago Tribune.

Christmas Day.

Though Christmas day is now regarded as a festival peculiar to the Christian religion, as distinguished from all other forms of belief, its claim to be so regarded is quite doubtful. As the month of December in Judea is one of rains and storms, the Nativity could hardly have been on the 25th of that month, as shepherds and their flocks would not have been out on the plains of Bethlehem in such weather. A fairly good case has been made out for October, and it is certain that until the fifth century, the date was later than the 25th of December. Possibly the festival may have been placed at the date it now is by the early Christians in their desire to displace the Roman "Saturnalia," a heathen orgie. Among our Anglo-Saxon ancestors such a mid-winter festival seems to have been known long before the priests of the new religion had made their way from Rome into the forests of Germany. However disputes as to date or origin may be settled, Christmas is the day of gifts and good-will, and the Burlington wishes a merry day to all its friends in the Northwest, merely suggesting that if you are intending to travel during the holidays, your ticket should read via Burlington Route. Pierce Guarantees a Cure.

Keyser, N. C.

DR. R. V. PIERCE: Dear Sir—When about three years old I was taken with mumps, also had fever, finally I had that dreaded disease Scrofula. The most eminent physicians in this section treated me to no avail. I had running scrofulous sores on left side of neck and face. I was small and weakly when eight or nine years old, and in fact was nearly a skeleton. Six bottles of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery wrought marvelous changes. Although the sores were healed in eight months I did not quit taking it until I was sure it had been entirely rooted from my system. The only signs left of the dreadful disease are the scars which ever remind me of how near death's door I was until rescued by the "Discovery." I am now eighteen years old and weigh 148 pounds; and have not been sick in five years.

16 World's Fair Photos for One Dime.

The Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railway has made an arrangement with a first-class publishing house to furnish a series of beautiful World's Fair pictures, of a large size, at the nominal cost to the purchaser of only ten cents for a portfolio of sixteen illustrations. Nothing so handsome in reference to the World's Fair has before been published. The series would be worth at least twelve dollars if the pictures were not published in such large quantities, and we are therefore able to furnish these works of art for only ten cents.

Remit your money to GEORGE H. HEAFFORD, General Passenger Agent, Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railway, at Chicago, Ill., and the pictures will be sent promptly to any specified address. They will make a handsome holiday gift.

--Brick $8 per 1000 at John Cooler's.

--Hay, even though there is a McKinley tariff on it of $4 per ton is selling in our markets for $4 and $4.50 per ton. Wood also is very cheap.

—About 30 people from Cokato, including the depot agent with his books, journed via Delano to the county seat on Tuesday to participate in the "blind pig" lawsuits. Blind pigs appear to be very costly animals to keep or even to get rid of.

--Misses Quinn, Sherry and Cheeley, teachers of the Delano schools, took the opportunity offered them by the vacation given them by the board to visit the Howard Lake school, on Tuesday. They speak in high praise of the school work being done in our neighboring village.

—Most of the churches in town will have Christmas exercises. The M. E. Sunday School will hold their's on Saturday evening at the church. We understand that the Presbyterians will hold theirs on Sunday evening. The Swedish Mission on Monday evening.

—Had the Howard Lake School Board been as officacious as the Delano board they would have placed our three school marms under quarantine on their arrival in that village on Tuesday and kept them until the down train. There is nothing like being careful, but extremes are sometimes reached.

—That nice fur overcoat in which Rev. J. W. Powell appeared this week, in which he looks so comfortable was sent him as a Christmas present by his former flocks in Red Rock and St. Paul. Many a prayer will ascend to the Giver of all good for the kind friends who were so thoughtful, as the good man goes on his weekly rounds during the balance of the winter, and maybe for years to come.

--Before the school board precipitately closes the public school and turns the teachers and scholars out of a job they should ask the advice of the Health Officer. One object in having a Health Officer is to investigate cases of contagious or infectuous diseases and take such methods to suppress them as he deems proper. All officials should pay due defference to each other, and not take upon themselves the duties of others totally ignoring them in their official capacity, unless circumstances demand that they do so. In this instance the Health Officer was not consulted although easily accessible at the time.

—At about nine o'clock Wednesday evening the clear tones of the fire alarm called out the fire companies and citizens to learn that Thomas Reichel's building on Bridge street, occupied by the Delano Provision Company's headquarters was on fire. The engine was taken onto the ice and quickly got to work throwing a fine stream; after about three quarters of an hour the building was torn partly down and the flames quenched, thereby saving the building used as a residence standing about four feet away and the brick barn, covered with several inches of snow, belonging August Bernick, and standing on the other side of the burning building. Great credit is due the fire company and several energetic citizens whose labors saved adjoining buildings. The principle criticism heard was the lack of system in handling the hose nozzle, and the consequent loss of perhaps three-fourth of the water pumped. This being the first time for months the company has been called out, and lack of practice accounts for this great fault: The engine demonstrated its power to throw water well. Mr. Bronkow had on hand quite a stock of poultry, butter, eggs, etc., which with the help of ready hands he was enabled to save, mostly in good condition.

—The Delano cornet band will tender a banquet to the village council next Tuesday evening. Supper will be served at Leo & Bob's restaurant.

—The I. O. O. F's. lodge is having a school of instruction here today. Visitors are present from Maple Plain, Wayzata, Montrose and other places.

—Rev. Frank R Millspaugh, of Minneapolis, with his vestured choir, are to hold an Episcopal Christmas service in Delano on Wednesday evening.

—We are creditably informed that the State Department of Education differs, as it often does, with our neighbor up street about teachers being able to collect pay for time they are prevented from teaching by circumstances beyond their control, as when the school is closed on account of sickness.

—The Village Council purchased for the use of the Village Justice Vol. II, Minnesota Statutes and Roberts Minnesota Justice, at the Monday evening meeting. They allowed several bills, and voted to pay their own salaries, $10 a piece. Times are hard and the money will come handy.

—A lively skrimage took place in Delano last night between a couple of men, who, we understand, were the worse for liquor. Doctor Ames acted as surgeon and restored the lacerated tissues to their normal conditions as far as possible, under the circumstances. Such men should not fool with liquors.

—Thursday Dec 31, the shortest day of the year, was a very fine one. People could walk the streets without their overcoats. And sleighing being the best for years was enjoyed immensely, while produce from neighboring farms found its way to town in large quantities to be exchanged for Christmas things.

--A few evenings ago as Druggist Wittmer's folks were away from home he retired leaving the door unlocked for those who were out. Near midnight his wife came into the parlor and found a man sitting in an easy chair fast asleep, she enquired what he wanted but got no answer. Her father then came in and in emphatic tones enquired of the stranger what he wanted, and soon learned that he was waiting for Dr. Shrader, and had gotten things considerably mixed and was taking a nap while he waited for something to turn up. Dad Gast soon satisfied him.

—On Tuesday several parties were seen on Third street, holding their horses and growing more and more impatient for quite a long time while waiting for a freight train to move on. One of the men whose time was taken and patience tried threatened to have some justice dealt out on the subject. There is a village ordinance, No. XXIV, which says five minutes is the limit for stopping trains on a crossing. The fine on the company for violating this ordinance is not less than $10 to $50 and on the railroad employees who violate the ordinance not less than $5 to $20, and costs of action or be imprisonod not more than 30 days. People will not wait much over the five minutes these cold days before they will call on the law to open the crossings. If Fourth street were opened as it should be there would then be another chance to cross which would be a convenience to many travelers.

Personals.

I. Gutzwiller is able to be out again.

Mrs. C. H. Buckley, took a trip to Hamline, Wednesday evening.

M. C. O'Donohoe, of Annandale, was a pleasant GAZETTE caller on Tuesday.

Dr. J. S. Shraeder, attended the meeting of of the Pension Board at Buffalo on Wednesday.

John McGary, thawed out enough to get to town on Monday. He says he is still a Democrat.

Charles S. Hawker came up from Hamline on Tuesday evening to spend the holidays at home.

Miss Irene Cheeley left on Wednesday evening for Minnetonka Mills to visit her sister until next year.

Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Dannehr, of Independence, made the GAZETTE a very pleasant call on Friday last.

L. K. Flanders and wife of Montrose visited Delano friends on Monday. L. K. thinks of having a golden wedding in the spring.

Dr. E. E. Shraeder of Watertown carries an arm in a sling, while he is laid up for repairs from a runaway on Monday. He visited Delano friends a portion of the week.

County Cullings.

This week's Eagle gives out the wise idea that when the object in view is the acquisition of the Hawaiian Islands follow precident, but when it is pine timber from Minnesota forests don't follow precident.

Wolves are reported as plentiful and quite ferocious in many parts of the state. It would be well for school children and others having long walks, often in lonely places, to get home early and not run so much risk of meeting a pack of wolves.

Senator A. Y. Eaton is getting there with both feet as a Congressional candidate. Wright county is certainly entitled to some consideration and A. Y. ought to stand a spendid chance of securing the nomination. Failing in this he will probably try to thrust his big political feet into the aristocratic shoes of Senator Washburn, nothing like aiming high and keeping your eye well up to the mark Senator, nothing like it.

The Buffalo Journal, under the heading, "Unequal Justice," complains that Phil Scheig, with all his wrongs, was given but seven and a half years while Ole Nortrome, an ex-convict, who had stolen a horse, was given five years in the penetentiary. Were not both arrested for stealing? Was the act not as wrong in itself to take all opportunity offered, a horse, as to take the money, which to the taker, seemed really no larger? If the two were on trial for the same offence, stealing, and not for their other offences what should the amount have to do with it? When each got all he could get?

District Court seems to be drawing out to quite a lengthy term, and is to resume work on January 8. Judge Russel is in charge, but was relieved for a short time, on account of sickness in his family, by Judge Pond. The term is expected to be an expensive one.

The case of Nora Herman vs Thomas Smithson for pay for labor, jury gave defendant. Ashley Riggs, Jr., was released, nole prosequi. Coleman Foley recovered from John Elsenpeter, for labor $49.50. Suits of Josie Herman and Creola Kerns against Martin Bland continued over term. John Foshant, bastardy case, to pay $65 and costs. Fidelity & Casulty Company vs J. J. Barrett, continued. Mathias Gulla, not guilty of stealing a gun. Ole Nortram sentenced to states prison five years for horse stealing. Fred Pohl, three years seven months state prison. Swan Melberg vs Hannah Melberg, divorce, granted. Michael Draeger, assault in second degree, not guilty. Jos. Campbell vs P. P. Praught, overflowing land, verdict for defendent. James A. Pettit vs Great Northern Ry verdict for the father $300. boy 15 years old $4700 for loss of arm at Smith Lake. Charles Erickson vs. Charles Pomerank, dam case for flowing land $575 granted.

Old Settler's day draws nigh. The committee should come together and appoint a programme for the occasion For several years old settlers have not been the most conspicuous persons present. It might look to the unacquainted as if there are no old settlers left, or if there are that they are too feeble to perform their parts at each annual meeting. This is not the case however If an old settlers meeting is to be held it should consist of old settlers. The committees should be made up of old settlers, and not of wise-pulling politicians. The programme should be filled from the pioneers who blazed the ways into the country, and not with office seekers after the fat of the land, or if they desire no programme, let each in his turn relate some incident of early days, or let them sit down and have a genuine old fashioned talk over early days. Give them a room by themselves and let them have one day of unalloyed enjoyment, as only old settlers know how to appreciate. There are plenty of people in the county who came to the territory before it was a state, to make a very respectable showing, and have an entertaining time and if they knew they would have a chance to talk over old times with those who know whereof they speak they would be on hand, and do their share, and return to their homes satisfied that they had, indeed, been to an old sellers' meeting.

Among Our Exchanges.

Charley Brasie says the toughest trip he ever took was down below Greenleaf and back during the storm last Monday.—Litchfield News-Ledger.

The pulpit of the Methodist church will be occupied tomorrow, both morning and evening, by Rev. John Doran of Sauk Rapids. Sunday school at the usual hour.—Aitkin Age.

Bro. Eaton or the Buffalo Journal, it has been unmistakably hinted, has a congressional bee buzzing in his bonnet; and that French, of the Monticello Times, has the legislative fever. The Eagle wishes success.—Eagle.

Senator David B. Hill, who has shown himself to be the most distinguished failure in the democratic party, only makes his position more conspicuous by criticising the administration of Grover Cleveland. He seems to have lost what little perspicacity he used to have.—Wabasha Democrat.

The campaign year will soon be hear, and already numerous little "boomlets" are being carefully started and nursed in the hope that they may grow and wax exceeding strong so that when the time comes no other "boom" will be able to stand before their "boom." So mote it be.—Buffalo Journal.

PLEASANTRIES

Little drops of water
Filled with fever germ,
Make the doctor happy
And the patient squirm.
—Chicago Inter-Ocean.

Mary had a stocking once,
And it was made of wool;
And on that merry Christmas morn
That stocking it was full.

How came that stocking to be full?
Because at Christmas dawn,
When Mary rose and dressed herself,
She pulled that stocking on.

THE FIN DE SIECLE GIRL

"What do you know, oh, maiden fair?"
"Oh, I know much," she made reply:
"I know of Homer and Moliere;
I can make poetry if I try,
Or send sonatas with a crash
Out of my three-legged parlor grand;
Play Wagner with terrific dash,
And 'Home, Sweet Home' with my left hand.
Also can I, whenever I please,
Variegate the general din,
Removing with dispatch and ease
Concertos from my violin;
I know talking, dancing, hant,
Zoology and how to box,
And the name of every plant,
The solstices and equinox.
The only things I do not know
Are how to cook and how to sew."
—Chicago News Record.

Mr. Baldwins Bill.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 19.—Mr. Baldwin, of Minnesota, offered in the house today a bill authorizing the secretary of the interior to withdraw from settlement or sale any gold or silver bearing public lands in Minnesota, upon satisfactory proof being presented to him of the existence in paying quantities of such deposits in any of the undisposed of public lands within the state. Upon withdrawl they shall be subject to disposition according to the provisions of the mineral laws of the United States.—Minneapolis Times.

Paper Railroad Ties.

Steel-tired paper car wheels are in use on nearly every railroad in the land. Before many years, it is probable, the tracks themselves may be laid upon paper and held together by paper ties. The inventor of a paper tie says that he can utilize in this way the ordinary paper board, which is made from straw, grass, or any cheap and coarse fibrous material. The straw boards are cemented together and pressed in molds, making, he claims, a fire-proof and water-proof tie which is not affected by atmospheric changes, holds the spikes firmly, is effectually elastic, and will outwear five wooden ties.—Ex.

Deathbed Confession.

OGDEN, Utah, Dec, 20.—The deathbed repentance of John Doyle, at Los Angeles, in which he confesses to having set fire, together with George Hogan, to the novelty theater in this city in September 1891, will probably be the meaning of liberating from the penitentiary William Golden, Serving a six-year sentence as the supposed criminal. M. M. French, who was convicted at the same time for aiding in the crime, escaped last spring and is still at large. John Doyel's confession entirely clears Golden and French, and after exonerating them concluded as follows:

"On the 16th or 17th day of September, 1891, at 2 o'clock in the morning, I and the said George Hogan, committed the said crime of arson, of which the said M. M. French and William Golden stand convicted. I, together with the said George Hogan, committed the crime as follows: I and the said George Hogan, had a row with the proprietor of the said Novelty theater (Monroe, I think is his name) about 11 o'clock on the night of the 16th or 17th of September, 1891, and after that we both got drunk and at 2 o'clock in the morning I and the said Hogan went in the rear of the theater and set fire to the rubbish which ignited the theater. "JOHN DOYLE."

This case is a most remarkable instance of the trial and conviction of two innocent men upon circumstantial evidence.—Globe.

THE SONG OF THE "No. 9."

My dress is of fine polished oak,
As rich as the finest fur cloak,
And for handsome design
You just should see mine—
No. 9, No. 9.

I'm beloved by the poor and the rich,
For both I impartially stitch;
In the cabin I shine,
In the mansion I'm fine—
No. 9, No. 9.

I never get surly nor tired,
With zeal I always am fired;
To hard work I incline,
For rest I ne'er pine—
No. 9, No. 9.

I am easily purchased by all,
With instalments that monthly do fall;
And when I am thine,
Then life is benign—
No. 9, No. 9.

To the Paris Exposition I went,
Upon getting the Grand Prize intent:
I left all behind,
The Grand Prize was mine—
No. 9, No. 9.

At the Universal Exposition of 1889, at Paris, France, the best sewing machines of the world, including those of America, were in competition. They were passed upon by a jury composed of the best foreign mechanical experts, two of whom were the leading sewing machine manufacturers of France. This jury, after exhaustive examination and tests, adjudged that the Wheeler & Wilson machines were the best of all, and awarded that company the highest prize offered—the GRAND PRIZE—giving other companies only gold, silver and bronze medals.

The French government, as a further recognition of superiority, decorated Mr. Nathaniel Wheeler, president of the company, with the Cross of the Legion of Honor—the most prized honor of France.

The No. 9, for family use, and the No. 12, for manufacturing uses, are the best in the world to-day.

And now, when you want a sewing machine, if you do not get the best it will be your own fault. Ask your sewing machine dealer for the No 9 Wheeler & Wilson machine. If he doesn't keep them, write to us for descriptive catalogue and terms. Agents wanted in all unoccupied territory. WHEELER & WILSON MFG. CO. Chicago, Ill

A NEW YEAR SONG.

Who comes dancing over the snow,
His little soft feet all bare and rosy?
Open the door, though the wild winds blow,
Take the child in and make him cozy,
Take him in, and hold him dear;
He is the wonderful New Year.

Open your heart, be it sad or gay,
Welcome him there and use him kindly:
For you must carry him, yea or nay.
Carry him with shut eyes so blindly.
But whether he bringeth joy or fear,
Take him! God sends him—this good New Year.

YELLOW FEVER has attacked the citizens of Rio and is doing more damage than the insurgents. A naval battle is expected soon.

JULIUS H. BLOCK, sheriff of Nicollet county, is a candidate for State Treasurer. Julius is a big man and should he be elected and set out to defend the State's wealth, all attempts at intrusion would be effectually Blocked.

SOME of the Populists and disgruntled Republicans are getting to be grear calamity howlers. They go so far as to say Cleveland should be impeached. If he was, some one would take his place. At present that would be Adlai E. Stevens, and he would be less liked than the present incumbent, judging from what they have already said about him.

JUDGE CONTY will lay down his District Judgeship for some successor in office on the 31st inst. Who his follower will be has not yet been announced. Judge Canty will take a higher seat as Judge of the Supreme Court of the State, toward which he has been rapidly climbing for several years, having distanced many competors in the race he now realizes his fond anticipations. May success attend him in his new labors.

THE Republican press of the country seems to be having a very serious time of it to get some Democratic politician to resign a fat office. They have announced the probable resignation from the Presidents Cabinet, of Secretary Gresham, Secretary Smith, and others, and now they say it is Attorney General Olney who is to quit and go home. These predictions seem to fail. Better quit this kind of work or you will loose what reputation you may have for truth and veracity.

THE St. Peter Herald now comes out as a twenty page paper. It is something like a boom edition every week. If Bros. Johnson and Essler would add one more sheet, making twenty-four pages, and serve up one sheet each day instead of the whole of them at once, St. Peter would have a daily newspaper. Just what she wants to boom her. Perhaps that's what these enterprising editors are driving at, and are simply experimenting a little before entering the daily list. That's right gentlemen, go slowly on to the top of the heap even if times are a trifle hard, economy and enterprise are sure to win.

Happy New Year.

On Monday begins the new year 1894. Like most things new it is hailed with delight, by young and old. The young count that they are another year older, that much nearer being a man or woman. The old calculate the time to come to them as so much shorter; that their sands of life are that much nearer run, and look forward to the time when the "pitcher be broken at the fountain" and they are transported to that "bourne from which no traveler returns." They look back on the happy return of New Year's day in the past, and think how short is life. All resolved to do better this year than ever before. The young think they will be more like grown people; the middle aged conclude to be better and live better lives; old people determine to spend the remainder of their days in the service of the Giver of all good Business men figure on making more wealth, on piling up more of this World's goods in 1894, than they have ever done before. The dude thinks possibly he can get along with a few less cigars or cigaretts, the abomination of decent people, generally. This is a time of resolves, and many good resolutions are made with each return of the New Year. Let all resolve to keep the resolutions they make and use their best efforts to become better themselves, to help others in the same line; and thus to better the whole world. Let all remember with pleasure this New Year.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

(From our Regular Correspondent.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Dec. 22, 1893

Secaetary Carlisle proved himself, during his long service in Congress, to be one of the ablest legislators the country has produced. and his annual report, submitted to Congress this week, places him in the front rank of national financiers. Even a cursory glance over his report, which makes a pamphlet of sixty-two pages, will show the enormous amount of studying he was compelled to do in order to familiarize himself with the more or less complicated subjects with which it deals. He strongly commends the Wilson tariff bill and puts forward strong arguments to show that it will will greatly benefit the country, and reminds the majority of the house that it was especially elected to reform the the tariff. He shows the financial condition to be such that immediate relief by Congressional legislation is necessary, and points out that this may be by authorizing the issue of five-year 3 percent bonds, or by authorizing the issue of five-year 3 percent bonds, or by authorizing the Seeretary of the Treasury to use a 3 per cent note to run one year, to pay those creditors of the government who may elect to receive them in lieu of cash.

The predominating trait in the character of President Cleveland is his manliness in assuming responsibility for all his acts. And it was brought prominently to the front when he sent for some of his friends in the Senate and House, while the republicans were engaged in trying to make political capital in both bodies by distorting the facts concerning his Hawaiian policy, and told them that it was his desire that the democrats should place no obsticles in the way of the fullest myestigation of the whole matter. The reason the republicans were so anxious to get in their speeeces before the recess was their fear that the whole business will be entirely settled before Congress meets again.

The House committee on Banking and Currency adjourned for the Christmas recess in a dead lock over the proposition to report a bill for the unconditional repeal of the 10 per cent State bank tax. There were only twelve out of the seventeen members present when the vote resulted in a tie. An agreement one way or the other will probably be reached early in January

The majority report of the House Ways and Means committee, which presented to the House when the bill was reported this week, is a long document, but it will repay careful reading and study. It takes up and answers in detail about every reasonable objection that has been raised to the Wilson tariff bill and outlines the course that will be followed by the democratic speakers when the bill is taken up in the House, which will be as soon as Congress comes together after the holiday recess. Chairman Wilson is anxious to see the bill put through the House without having to resort to drastic measures, but fully determined not to allow the debate to run beyond the point of legitimate discussion The general impression among democrats seem to be that about two weeks will be allowed for debate, with night sessions if they are considered necessary to give every member who desires it an oppertunity to express his views on the bill.

Postmaster General Bissell has not yet fully decided to give the contract for the printing of postage stamps to the Bureau of Engraving and Printing but it is believed that he will do so notwithstanding the efforts--doubtless well paid for--of a Washington daily paper in behalf of the private concern which put in the lowest bid for the work, except that of the Bureau of Engraving and Printing. Secretary Carlisle says in his annual report, on the subject:" At present this bureau executes all of the work of engraving and printing required by the Treasury department and much of that required by the other departments of the government. The most considerable work of this kind now executed outside of the bureau is the postage stamps and the postal notes required by the Post Office Department. It might be well for Congress to consider the advisibility of haying this portion of the work of the government also executed by this bureau, as it has all the facilies for executing it and would afford perfect accurrtu to the government. It would seem to present an anomalous condition of affairs for the government to maintain a large establishment for the execution of this character of work and yet have a part of it done in private establishments.

It would be absurd to say that the nomination of Hon. Wayne MacVeagh to be ambassador to Italy was joyfully received by Democrats, but the fact of his immediate conformation shows there are no hard feeling on the part of the senators.

WOMAN'S COLUMN.

EDITED BY MRS. C. A. STACY.

Terrence Powderly says: "I believe that in five years the sun will shine in a country where saloons are closed on Sunday. If I have my way the saloons will all be closed until the next Sunday."

Dr. Laurent, in his valuable work on the habitues of the Paris prisoners asserts "that drunkenness alone, or combined with some other narcotic condition, is to be found almost constantly in the parents of criminals."

John G. Wooley will soon remove his family to Chicago and make that city his head quarters from now on.

Dr. Cuyler calls the church to action when he says: "It seems to me that the chorch is as clearly bound to fight drunkenness and the customs which lead to drunkenness as it is to fight paganism or infidelity, or Sabbath breaking. or any other soul dettroying evil."

The lowest estimates for Chicago's drink bill for the year 1893 is $40,000,000; all this expenditure for adulterated whisky and poor beer, and most of this amount has come out of the working men—day-laborers, who could illy afford to support 7,000 saloons with 14,000 bar-tenders. Can't you see what has brought all this want and misery on Chicago? But the fact remains that tens os thousands are needing help and we must give it.

The saloonkeeper is a better friend to the poor man than anybody else according to Wm. T. Stead, because he allows them to come into the saloon and wash his face, when there is no other place supplied for the purpose. In other words after he has robbed him of his money, manhood, self-respect, friends, and made him repulsive to decent society, he allows him in compensation the privilege of washing off saloon filth at a saloon hydrant. If making drunkards, causing poverty and want, filling our jails and almshouses, and debauching public morals can be made a virtue in this way, then stand aside drygoods merchants, boot and shoe dealers, grocers and butchers every business that supplies the comforts and necessities of life to the workingman and give the workingman's "best friend," full swing.

The late P. T. Barnum, whose ability as a financier is well known, in one of his addresses made this challenge: "I will undertake, and give bonds for the fulfillment of the contract, that if the city of Philadelphia will stop selling liquor and give me as much as was expended there for liquor last year, I will pay all the city expenses. no person living within her borders shall pay taxes, there shall be no insurance on property; a good dress and suit shall be given to every poor boy, girl, man and woman; all the educational expenses shall be paid, a barrel of flour shall be given to every needy and worthy person, and I will clear a half million or a million dollars by the operation."

Worlds of welcome and good will were spoken by many notable persons. Among them was Judge C. C. Bonney, President of the World's Congress Auxiliaries, who said: "The Woman's Christian Temperance Union stands in the world the foremost representative of the new movement which is known as the woman's movement of the nineteenth century. This great movement has many aspects and moves forward along the lines of many reforms, but I think it only just to say that the organization which has sought to bind the whole world with a white ribbon of purity, to banish from the world all the great evils of intemperance and insanity and pauperism and crime which follow in its train, is entitled to the palm of victory."

The inhabitants of Okushiri Island, off the north coast of Japan, in 1884 entered into a compact to abandon wholly the sale, purchase and use of alcoholic beverages. It has been kept rigorously with this result: "In five years the population increased tenfold, and the capital invested in fishing tenfold. Bad roofs were replaced by shingles; good roods were built all over the land; four large public granaries were erected and filled with rice, and each family had a private store in reserve At the present time, it is said, they have sufficient food on hand if the fisheries should fail entirely for five years in succession. The school has been greatly improved and several branch schools have been established. Crime which was formerally very prevalent has largely passed away." So writes Rev. John L. Deering, of Yokohama to the Independent.

The Christian Endeavor in Line.

The Star of Hope for the temperance reform is set on the brow of that young Hercules, the "Young Peoples Society of Christain Endeavor." At their recent large and enthusiastic Convention held at Quincy, Ill, they give to the world this resolution, which was adopted unanimously by the Convention;

"That we recognize in the liquor traffic the greatest enemy of Christ and the church and the foe of humanity. To encourage it in any way is a sin, to license it is a crime We therefore recommend the following pledge contained in Secretary Baer's letter in the Golden Rule of Sept. 28: "Trusting in the Lord Jesus Christ for strength, I promise Him that I will pray each day that the saloon may be banished from our land, and just as far as I know how I will work for what I pray, and I will also vote as I pray and do all in my power to help kill king alcohol.' That we recommend a temperance union in every town and city according to the plan suggested by the state superintendent of temperance work, who has already been of inestimable service in this department of our work."

There is every reason to believe that this utterance expressed the heartfelt sentiments of the members of this great organization, and is the banner under which they intend to fight.

The Alliance Meeting.

We are reminded by one of our county party organs that we have one thing to be truly thankful for at this season of blessings, and that is that there is no session of the legislature this winter. We agree with that and would suggest that perhaps it would be a blessing to have none next year if we can not improve our politicians and get better material for a legislature.

There will be a meeting of the Farmers' Alliance in Minneapolis beginning on Jan. 9th in which the farmers and all other honest toilers should be interested. This is an agricultural state and though the majority may not be farmers the welfare of the farmers is of much interest to the majority of the people. Now there is one thing indisputable and that is that our whole social and economic system needs fixing, and if the people are going to run this governmental machine they had better begin to look it over and find where repairs are needed, for if it goes on in its present deplorable condition it will soon explode. The material or the expert may not be found in the Alliance or in any other reform organization as they now stand, but the only way to improve them is to educate their members and that can be done only by discussing and thinking on these questions there is a remedy and we must seek it before we find it. Then we would advise the farmers to have meetings. All friends of reform should unite and organize. Let us learn to respect the opinions of the common people. The solan may be found clad in jeans.

Many farmers cannot attend the regular meeting at Minneapolis but let him who cannot attend interest himself in its proceedings, and also in the work of the organizations. Let the farmer who can possibly spare enough to go, don his best jeans and attend even if he must take cheap lodgings. You may hear some bombast but you will hear good speeches, also. You will come back wise and more unselfish. S. M. Owens will be the principal speaker. He is an enthusiastic reformer and an honest man. There are many honest workers in this cause though there may be cast off politicians. Of course we understand why the average old party politician thinks fraud. He is like tipsy Jim who thinks every man he meets is tipsy. Every independent thinker in the land sees this need of reform. Read the speech of Henry D. Loyd, of Chicago delivered before the labor confederation.

Look out sor the fellow who discourages the discussion of subjects. He would have you "turning the grindstone for a booby." BUSHWHACKER.

WE HAVE Established Headquarters at

DELANO

And expect to be here for the next FOUR MONTHS. We sell the BEST RANGE in the World and took more premiums at the World's Fair than any other firm there when every stove firm in the land was represented. All we ask of you is to go and examine the dealers Range and then exanine ours, and if you don't say we have the cheapest and best Range made, why don't deal with us. We expect the dealers to kick and the more they kick the better we like it. They do the kicking and we sell the Ranges. We have sold over one thousand Ranges in this State this year and you can write and ask anyone using our goods about their merits, and we refer you to any Bank in St. Louis as to our standing.

IT is estimated that, with the proposed adoption of the trolley system on the Erie canal, there can be transported 30,685,290 bushels of grain every day, or 6,444,043,020 bushels during the 210 days of canal navigation each year.

A NEW YORK court has decided that piano-torture is not a nuisance and that a person addicted to the piano habit may torment the instrument and the neighborhood from 7 a. m. to 11:59 p. m., if said piano-baiter so elect. The ways of the courts are past finding out.

NINETEEN persons have threatened the life of Dr. Parkhurst, the New York clergyman who has been so effectually attacking the haunts of vice and the officials who wink at them. THE flower badges of nations are as follows: Athens, violet, Canada, sugar maple; Egypt, lotus; England, rose; France, flower-de-luce (lily); Florence, giglio (lily); Germany, corn-flower; Ireland, shamrock leaf; Italy, lily; Prussia, linden; Saxony, mignonette; Scotland, thistle; Spain, pomegranate; Wales, leek leaf.

KEELY, the motor man, is still hard at work upon his invention which is to revolutionize the world of mechanics. He now claims that his machine is almost complete. Gray-haired men of the present day will remember that in their youth Mr. Keely had the same story to tell at least twice a year. The motor is one of those things that "never is, but always to be," compieted.

OF course it is natural that things should be topsy-turvy on the under side of the globe, but it is queer to note the things that are reversed. In China the men wear skirts and the women trousers. The men wear their hair long and the women wear their hair short. The men carry on dressmaking and the women carry burdens. People dress in white at funerals, in mourning at weddings, and it is old women always who serve as bridesmaids.

IT is said that when the electric current was turned on the circuits at Long View insane asylum at Cincinnati, O., for the first time the insane patients were much affected. They tossed their hands about, fell into each other's embrace, danced with glee and displayed an exaltation such as irrational animals sometimes do when stirred by emotional music. Improvement in many of the patients has been noted, due, it is believed, to the buoyant effect on the system of the surprise.

BETTER than the liberal contributions of the public in aid of the suffering miners in the Lake Superior region is the news that several of the mines are to reopen, thus affording work for a good many thousand men. The ability and opportunity of supporting themselves is a far more gratifying position for the men to be placed in than the receipt of even the most abounding charity. "The glorious privilege of being independent" is dearer to the hearts of all true American workmen than would be the granaries of the world were they bestowed upon them as a charity.

IN one week the advertisement of a firm in Chicago, says the Tribune, who wished to employ about forty men was answered by over a thousand persons. The applicants were old and young, married and unmarried. Some of them were clerks, some mechanics and some laborers. The wages offered were less than those which most of the seekers for employment had been in the habit of receiving, but they made no objections on that score. Such instances as this are good evidences of the distress among those who have been in the habit of working, who want to work, but can find nothing to do.

CHARLES R. THORNE, the veteran actor, whose death at the age of 83 was recently announced, was quite unknown to later generations of playgoers, for it is 64 years since he made his first appearance, and his home has been for 40 years on the Pacific coast. He was of the days of Forrest and Macready and the elder Wallack, and made his debut as Octavian in Colman's "The Mountaineers" at the old park theater in this city. He married Ann Mestayer, herself a famous actress, who died about twelve years ago. His two sons, Charles R. and Edwin, both developed into good actors.

INTERESTING NEWS COMPILATION.

FIFTY-THIRD CONGRESS.
Regular Session.

TUESDAY, Dec. 19.—In the senate a bill was introduced to impose a discriminating duty on tea imported from this side of the Cape of Good Hope. The bill to repeal the federal election laws was discussed. The nomination of Wayne MacVeagh, of Pennsylvania, to be ambassador of the United States to Italy was received from the president. In the house a resolution was offered and referred to the committee on rules for the appointment of a committee of seven to investigate the Hawaiian question and the privileges of the house in such matters. The Wilson tariff measure was reported, and the urgent deficiency bill was passed.

WEDNESDAY, Dec. 20.—In the senate the Hawaiian question was discussed and Senator Hoar in his remarks said that the president had no power to appoint a paramount commissioner without the advice and consent of the senate. A resolution was adopted directing the committee on foreign relations to inquire into and report on the whole mattter. The urgent deficiency bill was passed. In the house the New York and New Jersey bridge bill was passed. The committee on territories reported in favor of admitting Oklahoma as a state in the union.

THURSDAY, Dec. 21.—In the senate a bill was introduced to annex the territory of Utah to the state of Nevada. Adjourned to January 3. In the house it was decided that debate on the tariff bill would commence January 3. The foreign affairs committee presented a resolution condemning the action of ex-Minister Stevens in Honolulu and the minority report denounces the course taken by President Cleveland and Secretary Gresham. Adjourned to January 3.

FROM WASHINGTON.

THE secretary of the treasury in his annual report says that the probable deficiency for the year ending June 30 will be $28,000,000. This, he says, it will be impossible to raise by any practicable plan of taxation as soon as it will be required, and he recommends that he be authorized to issue and sell bonds at not less than par and not exceeding $200,000,000 in amount bearing 3 per cent. interest to meet the necessary expenses of the government.

AT the leading clearing houses in the United States the exchanges during the week ended on the 22d aggregated $1,953,184,972, against $1,915,882,558 the previous week. The decrease, compared with the corresponding week in 1892, was 36.8.

ADVICES from 119 important cities throughout the country indicated that the total number of employes in industrial and other lines out of work at this time, together with the total number of people directly dependent for support upon those so rendered idle, is nearly 3,000,000.

THE treasury officials were worried by the decrease in the cash balance, which was but $90,589,737.

THE features of the business week ended on the 22d were the increased uniformity in reports that general trade was quite as much or more depressed than previously; that heavy trading had been unsatisfactory and far below that of a year ago, and there was continued closing down of important industrial establishments, reduction of wages and increased instances where short time was being enforced.

IN the United States there were 344 business failures in the seven days ended on the 22d, against 339 the week previous and 283 in the corresponding time in 1892.

WAR on firms which sell patent medicines at cut rates will be made by the National Wholesale Druggists' association.

LATER NEWS.

THE suburban train on the Union Pacific railroad at Denver was nearly wrecked the morning of the 26th, the vigilance of the engineer only saving it. A three-foot piece of railroad iron was welged into a frog and the switch opened. This is the third attempt at wrecking near that spot.

AT 4 o'clock the morning of the 26th James J. Butler, city attorney of St. Louis, Mo., fatally shot James Leary in a bawdy house. The trouble arose over the discussion of a gambling exposure.

AT Urbana, O., the 26th, Grant Jackson, a notorious colored tough, and the son of Postmaster Piatt met under the influence of liquor and renewed an old quarrel. Piatt struck Jackson on the head with a club, causing death.

WRITTEN threats to destroy various public buildings in Paris, France, continue to be made, ostensibly by anarchists. The latest buildings threatened are the railway stations.

A SENSATION was caused at Paris, Texas, the morning of the 26th, when the lifeless body of Will Hooks was found in an opium joint. It has been known for years that these dens had been run almost openly right in the midst of the city, but no effort has been made to suppress them.

THE three-story club house and grand stand of the Pittsburg Driving club at Homewood, Pa., were burned the morning of the 26th. Loss, $15,000. Edward Morris and family, who lived in the house, narrowly escaped from being burned.

HEAVILY INVOLVED.

The Santa Fe Road Unable to Meet Interest Payments.

It Has Liabilities of $240,000,000, and Upon the Petition of Its Bondholders, the System Goes Into the Hands of Receivers.

SANTA FE GIVES UP.

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., Dec. 27.—Another big railroad is in deep distress. The Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe and St. Louis & San Francisco railroads and branches, comprising the Santa Fe system proper, have been placed in the hands of three receivers, the order being made by United States Circuit Judge H. C. Caldwell, in chambers, in this city at 5:30 o'clock Saturday evening. The application was made by the Union Trust company of New York, trustees for the bondholders of the Atchinson, Topeka & Santa Fe, and the Mercantile Trust company of New York, trustees for the bondholders of the St. Louis & San Francisco.

Although the press of the country has anticipated the result for some time past, not until the death of Chairman George C. Magoun last week was any immediate action contemplated. The first intimation of decisive action was received at 2 o'clock Saturday afternoon when a special sleeper, the Catoosa, with baggage car attached, which left St. Louis at 2 o'clock in the morning, arrived over the Iron Mountain with prominent railway attorneys and officials on board, who hastened at once to the federal courthouse and were soon closeted with Judge Caldwell, who had arrived from St. Louis the night before.

They remained closeted behind closed doors with Judge Caldwell until 5:30 o'clock, when an order was agreed upon appointing three receivers for the Santa Fe system: J. W. Reinhardt, president of the Santa Fe system; J. J. McCook, general counsel of the Santa Fe system, and Joseph C. Wilson, clerk of the United States district court at Topeka, Kan., the latter being a compromise receiver, the railroads having recommended Reinhardt, McCook and George C. Nickerson, the latter being a director of the system, but who was objected to by the complainants.

The receivership met with no resistance on the part of the railroad companies, and an agreement was quickly reached. The bills in both cases—that of the Santa Fe and 'Frisco—showed that the lines were heavily involved, with maturing obligations coming on soon, and that the interest due January 1 could not be paid and would be foreclosed. In both cases the complainants' bill went elaborately into figures and were very full and voluminous.

The bonded indebtedness aggregates $232,000,000, as follows: First mortgage bonds, $150,000,000; class A, second mortgage bonds, $77,000,000; class B, second mortgage bonds, $55,000,000. The interest due January 1 will aggregate $8,000,000 and the floating debt is about $5,000,000, making a total liability of about $240,000,000.

J. W. Reinhardt and J. J. McCook, two of the receivers, are well known in railroad circles throughout the country. The other receiver, Joseph C. Wilson, has been twice mayor of Topeka. A supplementary bill will likely be filed at Topeka January 5, which will be tantamount to foreclosure of the bonded indebtedness, in which event the branch lines, which have been sapping the life blood of the main lines, will be lopped off.

The order in each of the two cases is the same and directs that the receivers be "authorized and directed to take immediate possession of all the railroads and properties (including 8,346 miles of operated lines) and to run, manage and operate them and to execute the authority and franchises of the roads and conduct systematically their business."

ROBBED BY MASKED MEN.

Matthew Miner and His Aged Wife Are Bound and Gagged.

UTICA, N. Y., Dec. 27.—At 7 o'clock Saturday evening three masked men entered the farmhouse near Leonardsville, 20 miles from this place, owned and occupied by Matthew Miner. Miner is an aged man and he and his wife live alone. Three men bound and gagged the old people and then ransacked the house for valuables. They secured $1,800 which Mr. Miner had laid by and then made good their escape. Mr. and Mrs. Miner were relieved from their unpleasant position soon after the escape of the men. The affair caused a vast amount of excitement in the neighborhood and the rogues, if captered, are likely to receive rough treatment. Officers are on their track. The men went south.

GOING TO HONOLULU.

United States Man-of-War Preparing to Make a Quick Trip to Hawaii.

SAN FRANCISCO, Dec. 27.—It is learned here that the United States man-of-war Mohican is to be dispatched to Honolulu Wednesday. The sailing orders have already been received and there is unusual activity at Mare island preparing the cruiser for sea. Inasmuch as the steamship Australia sailed for Honolulu Saturday and could have carried all necessary advices to Minister Willis, the inference is that there must be some urgent reason for strengthening the United States naval force at Honolulu.

Kansas City Schools to Learn Tactics.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Dec. 27.—At a meeting of the board of education the offer of the secretary of war to furnish public schools of the country a military attache who will instruct the scholars in military tactics was accepted. Kansas City is the first city to avail itself of the offer. An officer from Fort Leavenworth will this week be detailed to the service.

Ask $10,000 a Week for Relief.

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 27.—The permanent relief committee of Philadelphia has issued a circular appealing for funds. The circular states that at least $10,000 a week is needed, and that there are 750 families on the list of the committee who are dependent upon charity for temporary support.

Death of Henry Pettit, the Dramatist.

LONDON, Dec. 27.—Henry Pettit, the dramatist, is dead. He had been suffering for several days past from typhoid fever. Mr. Pettit's works include "The Black Flag," "Faust Up to Date," "Hands Across the Sea," etc.

ASSASSINATED.

A Prominent Sullivan (Ind.) Lawyer Shot Dead on the Street.

SULLIVAN, Ind., Dec. 27.—Lawyer John S. Hultz, of this place, was shot dead on the street here Sunday morning by a man who wore a wig and a mask. The wig was found afteward in a pond on a line between the place where the shots were fired and the home of ex-Sheriff Willis. Willis is under arrest on suspicion of committing the crime. He claims to be innocent.

The shooting was done with a shotgun and the charges in both barrels were emptied into Hultz' back. The lawyer saw the man coming toward him and turned to retreat. When the first shot was fired Hultz turned into a stable, and as he did so the second shot brought him down. He died almost instantly. The assassin ran away and the stock of the gun, the wig and face mask were thrown in the pond. Ex-Sheriff Willis was arrested, but protests that he is innocent. Several persons saw the shooting, but the disguise was so complete that they cannot say who did the killing.

Within forty minutes after the shooting sufficient evidence was collected against Willis that if established will place his neck in great danger. A small boy saw the assassin in a stairway putting on the wig. When he added a beard the boy became frightened and took to his heels. He says positively that the man was "Lem" Willis. A hostler of the stable who ran to the dying man was told by Hultz that Willis had killed him. The man who threw the things in the pond was observed and watched. He went in the direction of the highway. Willis was met in the highway a few minutes later by a farmer who saw him go to a neighboring farmhouse. Willis was coming to the city with the son of this farmer. When he met the constable the murderer wore rubber boots, and it is said that Willis removed the rubber boots as soon as he reached the house and put on shoes. The preliminary trial will be held December 28.

Hultz was shot several months ago by the ex-sheriff, who found him in a compromising position in the Willis residence. Willis had been Hultz' personal and political friend, and had done more than any one else to secure the latter's election as prosecuting attorney. When Willis learned that there was ground for the suspicion that Hultz and Mrs. Willis were too intimate he set a trap and with his brother caught the couple together. He fired several times and two bullets entered Hultz's body. The lawyer escaped to a friend's house, where a physician dressed what were thought to be fatal wounds. Willis put Mrs. Willis in a buggy and drove to her father's house, where he left her. Hultz recovered and Willis brought suit against him for $25,000 damages, not with hope of recovering anything, but, as was said at the time, to crush the lawyer or drive him out of town. It had the latter effect, but recently Hultz returned to Sullivan and announced through the newspapers that he had come to stay.

GOOD FOR THE SOUTH.

All Large Factories Have Made Money and Paid Dividends.

AUGUSTA, Ga., Dec. 27.—The Chronicle says editorially:

"In a year of unexampled depression in cotton manufacturing in the eastern states the mills of Georgia and South Carolina have been running on full time. With climate advantages, cheap water power and raw material at first cost all large factories have made money and paid dividends. Mills in and around Augusta have made a splendid showing for the year just closed.

"The Augusta factory, capital $600,000, paid 6 per cent. dividends; Enterprise Manufacturing company, capita $750,000, 6 per cent.; Sibley Manufacturing company, $1,000,000 capital, 6 per cent.; King Manufacturing company, $1,000,000 capital, 6 per cent.; Graniteville Manufacturing company, 600 capacity, 10 per cent. The Langley Manufacturing company increased its capital during the year from $400,000 to $600,000 and will pay a semi-annual dividend of 3 per cent. on increased capital. The dividends of these mills show that the south is the most inviting field for cotton goods, and indications are that in the near future factories will be started in this section.

"In 1880 the south consumed 200,000 bales of cotton. In 1893 southern mills consumed 600,000 bales. There could be no stronger evidence of the south's superiority over the north in its advantages for cotton manufacturing than during the past year.

"Northern mills have been shut down while mills in the south have been running on full time and have paid good dividends."

HIS JUST DESERTS.

The Invader of a Michigan Home Killed by Its Occupant.

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich., Dec. 27.—John G. Wonderham, of this city, Saturday night shot and instantly killed John Eikmen, aged 25. Wonderham nine years ago married a girl several years younger than himself and very pretty. Three months since Eikmen met the woman, fell violently in love with her, and continued to force his calls upon her during her husband's absence. Saturday afternoon he called and informed Mrs. Wonderham that he would come to the house Saturday night and shoot every member of the family. Saturday evening he appeared with a double barreled shotgun heavily loaded and after trying the front door of the Wonderham house went around to the rear entrance and attempted to force his way in. Here he was met by Wonderham, who leveled a shotgun and shot the intruder dead.

DECLARED NOT GUILTY.

Verdict of the Jury in the Case of Conductor Scott

BATTLE CREEK, Mich., Dec. 27.—After being out an hour and a half the jury in the Conductor Scott manslaughter case rendered a verdict of not guilty. Scott was the conductor of train No. 6 which disobeyed orders and caused the collision here on October 20 in which twenty-seven were killed and twenty-six wounded. The trial was the hardest fought legal battle that has been tried here. The prosecutor was assisted by Senator Clapp. The verdict gives general satisfaction.

Took Great Pains to Die.

TRENTON, N. J., Dec. 27.—William Hawley, a burglar sentenced from Union county to five years in the state prison, committed suicide there by inhaling gas. He made tunnels out of bits of paper and connected them with a gas fixture near his cell door. Then he drew his cot up close to the door, lay down upon it and with a blanket over his head inhaled the gas.

Two Men Killed.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., Dec. 27.—By the explosion of a boiler at Whitesburg, Ala., two men were killed and three fatally hurt.

AN EXTRA SESSION.

Gov. Waite Calls Colorado's Legislature Together.

DENVER, Col., Dec. 27.—Gov. Waite has issued a call convening the legislature in extraordinary session January 10. The call is characteristic of the governor. He claims that this session will give the legislature the best opportunity it ever had to do something for Colorado. This action on the part of Gov. Waite has been opposed by the business men of Denver and the state ever since it was first suggested. Mass-meetings were held in this city and at various towns and cities in the state, at which strong resolutions were passed against the proposed action, and committees of prominent men have daily visited the governor's office to protest against an extra session. The movement was strongly opposed in Gov. Waite's home town, Aspen, but to all appeals made the governor has given unsatisfactory answers and has indicated all along that he would convene the legislature. His action lacks the unanimous approval of his own party—the populist.

The call consists of about 5,000 words and mentions over thirty subjects on which legisiative action should be taken, in the governor's opinion. The governor justifies his proclamation by declaring:

"The mining interests of the state have been unjustly and unconstitutionally attacked by congress and the present administration. The panic has so reduced values and increased burdens of taxation that agriculturists, fruit growers and stock raisers are obliged to sell their products below cost of producing them, and the extraordinary remedies now granted to creditors in Colorado should be repealed. Appealing to Almighty God for the rectitude of my intention and willingness to assume the entire responsibility of the act, I do issue this my proclamation."

The first business of the legislature suggested in the call is to provide that all silver dollars, domestic and foreign, containing not less than 371¼ grains of fine silver, shall be legal tender for all debts collectable in Colorado.

The governor also suggests the passage of an act forbidding the making of trust deeds, mortgages or obligations of any kind payable in gold; laws providing for the issuance of certificates of small denominations in payment for work on state canals, said certificates to be receivable for water carriage and leasing or purchase of internal improvement lands; repeal of all laws authorizing the issuance of municipal bonds and the enactment of a law to provide for the issuance of certificates of small denominations in payment for work on public improvements. The governor also suggests many subjects of legislation affecting various local interests in the state.

FIRE IN SAN FRANCISCO.

Printing House Row Suffers a Loss of $350,000.

SAN FRANCISCO, Dec. 27.—At 11:30 o'clock Monday morning fire broke out in the block bounded by Clay, Commercial, Sansome and Leidesdorff streets, and in a few minutes one of the biggest fires of the year was raging. The block is composed of some of the oldest brick buildings in the city and was occupied by the Call and Bulletin newspaper offices, Francis Valentine & Co., printers; Broqui Printing & Engraving company; Blake, Moffitt & Jones' paper warehouse, E. J. Shattuck & Co., ink manufacturers; Commercial Steam Power company, and numerous smaller concerns. Every engine in the city was called out and for over two hours fought the flames. Fire Marshal Lowe estimates the loss at $350,000, with insurance of half the amount.

A large portion of the block was partly destroyed. The Bulletin's editorial and composing rooms are a complete wreck and the Call's presses were injured by water. The fire will not interfere with the publication of the papers. The principal losses are Valentine & Co., $100,000; insurance $25,000; E. J. Shattuck & Co., $40,000; Broqui Engraving company, $35,000, insurance $7,000; Blake, Moffitt & Towne, $50,000, insurance $40,000; Union Advertising company, $10,000; Call and Bulletin, $10,000, fully insured; loss on buildings, $100,000. There are a large number of minor lossss which will bring the total up to nearly half a million.

TWO BIG ASSIGNMENTS.

Rich & Silber and the A. W. Rich Shoe Company, of Milwaukee, Fail.

MILWAUKEE, Dec. 27.—Rich & Silber, one of the leading retail dry goods firms of the city, and the A. W. Rich Shoe company filed assignments with the clerk of the courts Monday. The aggregate of the assets of both concerns, according to the bonds, is $331,000. Rich & Silber is one of the oldest dry goods firms in the city. The store is Nos. 411 to 417 Broadway. Benjamin M. Weil is assignee of the dry goods firm. His bond is $225,000, representing the nominal assets. Mr. Rich, of the dry goods firm, also is the president of the A. W Rich Shoe company. T. L. Kelley is assignee of the shoe company, his bond, $106,000, representing the nominal assets. No preference is given to creditors of either concern, although it is stated that Mr. Rich is indebted to relatives for money advanced to the amount of $30,000. The liabilities of either concern are not given. Their indebtedness to Milwaukee banks is small, their principal creditors being eastern firms.

BATTLE IN A DANCE HOUSE.

One Man Killed and Two Others Fatally Wounded—Talk of Lynching.

GLOUCESTER, O., Dec. 27.—At a dance near here Monday Frank James (colored) broke into the dance house and with a revolver began firing at the crowd. Several of the company returned the fire. "Jake" Harris, a bystander, was shot dead. Andrew Lovell was fatally wounded. James, the starter of the riot, was shot in the chest and cannot recover. Eight participants have been arrested and lynching on a large scale is a possibility.

Aluminum Dime Counterfeits.

CINCINNATI, Dec. 27.—United States Secret Service Agent Hazen is searching for a gang of counterfeiters who are flooding the city with aluminum dimes of the date of 1893. The counterfeit is an especially fine one, and but for the weight cannot be detected with the naked eye. This is the first counterfeit to be made of aluminum so far as the local government authorities know.

Starved Herself to Death.

BREWER, Me., Dec. 27.—Mrs. Fannie Landers, an inmate of the alms-house here, died, after having for fifty-five days refused both food and drink.

HUNTING AND FISHING.

ABOUT 25,000 people are killed every year in India by wild beasts and reptiles.

DEER are numerous in northwestern Maine, and annoy the farmers whose lands are near the forests.

A SNAKE, just discovered in Brazil, has tusks like a boar, and a two-foot horn ornaments its forehead.

SALMON fishing is prohibited in the state of Washington between six p. m. on Saturday and the same hour on Sunday.

A QUAIL almost pure white was lately shot near Atlanta, Ga. The only part not white was the tip of the tail, and this was of the usual hue.

A HUGE lobster, thirty-five inches in length, was lately caught by Everett Smith, at the edge of the surf, in Patchogue, N. Y. One of its claws is twelve inches long.

GEORGE JAMISON, of Bath, Me., had just warned Michael Nelson to handle his gun carefully when he (Jamison) tripped and fell, and received a death-wound from the discharge of his own gun.

THE largest fish caught in the Columbia river so far this season was a sturgeon measuring 11 feet 5 inches long and weighing 755 pounds, which was landed at Knappton, Wash., a week or so ago. The head alone weighed 151 pounds, and the fish yielded 427 pounds of edible meat.

A DELUDED WIFE.—The Unmarried One—"Are men really such awfully wicked creatures?" The Newly-Married One—"No, indeed. Why every time Charlie has to stay down town at the office, away from me at night, it just makes him feel so bad that he's almost sick the next day."—Detroit Tribune.

IS NEW YEAR'S once more; oh! the thoughts that it brings me—
Thoughts of the days that are long past and gone;
And spellbound I listen as Memory sings me
The lyrics of childhood,
Of pasture and wildwood,
That bring rest and pleasure when weary and worn.

Now tunes she her lyre, and I eagerly listen
To catch the loved strains that in sweet cadence fall,
That tell of the river that sunlight a-glisten,
Till deep in the shadow
It ran by the meadow
Where grew the sweet grasses so loved by us all.

She sings of the bees, and the humming birds flying
With deep-sounding wings round the blue-bell's sweet flower:
And I feel once again the south wind faintly crying,
As fields of red clover
It softly creeps over,
And it lulls me to rest with its mystical power.

From the quiv'ring strings comes a breath from the cloud-wrapped
Grand mountains, that arch our fair valley round,
That purple in summer, or winter time snow-capped,
Gave winds full of healing,
Now boisterous, now stealing,
So gently the clouds seemed at last run aground.

So Memory sings, and I list to the measure—
She croons of the scenes that are still fond and dear,
And the picture of boyhood I hold as a treasure,
That years now advancing
With pleasures entrancing,
Ne'er remove from my thoughts or can render less clear.
—John S. Barrows, in Good Housekeeping.

THE NEW-YEAR RESOLUTION.

When first, on New Year's eve, it sprang
To life with a determined mien,
"'Twill live forever and a day!"
You would have said if you had seen;
And when it spoke its strict intent
With sternest voice and rigid word:
"'Twill never yield to any wile!"
You would have said if you heard.

Yet day by day it bore itself
Less loftily, and day by day
Its accents lost their tone severe,
And slowly, softly died away.
'Twas then with satisfaction he
Who made it saw its power wane,
And hushed it to a silent sleep
Till New-Year's eve should come again.
—Mrs. George Archibald, in Judge.

Grandfather's Gift.

THE last night of the old year Jessie sat on her grandfather's knee, with her curly head resting on his shoulder and her chubby hands swinging her grandfather's watch gently backward and forward.

"What are you going to give me tomorrow, grandpa?"

"Give you to-morrow? Kisses, of course," said grandpa.

"No, I mean what you are going to give me for New Year's, and birthday, too—you know mamma always calls me a New Year's gift."

"Such a big New Year's gift ought to be contented with itself," said grandfather. "I shan't need to give you anything."

"Oh, yes, you will!" and Jessie let the watch slide into her grandfather's pocket, and framing his face in her little hands looked reproachfully and entreatingly into his face.

"Must I?" asked grandfather, regarding that same little face with very kind eyes.

"Yes, must," said Jessie imperiously.

"What shall I give you, then?" he asked.

Jessie thought a moment.

"A pocket full of money."

"A pocket full of money? What could you do with a pocket full of money?"

"Walk out," said Jessie.

"And lose it all."

"No, grandpa, of course not—give it away."

"Oh-h!" said grandfather, "that's the idea."

"Yes," said Jessie. "Last New Year's I met ever so many poor little girls and boys that said: 'Please gib me a penny?'" and Jessie said the words thickly and fast, as she remembered to have heard them, "and it went to my heart, grandfather, to pass them by dressed in my ermine cloak and velvet hat."

Grandfather's smiling eyes grew serious.

"Supposing, Jessie," he said, "I should fill your pockets with the money which I intended to buy you a pony with next summer, do you think you would be willing to go without the pony when summer came?"

"Oh, yes, grandpa," said Jessie, eagerly, "I am sure I should, and that would be lots of money, wouldn't it?"

"I should only put part in your pocket and the rest in the bank for mamma to help you spend."

"Spend? For poor little girls and boys?'

"Yes, dear."

"You're a beautiful grandpa!"

Grandfather did not say anything, but he thought in his heart that Jessie was a New Year's gift invaluable.

"Did you hear the child?" he asked of Jessie's mother, after Jessie had gone to bed.

"Why, yes," said Jessie's mother. "It is no more than she ought to do. I should be very sorry if she did not think of others, with all the comforts that she has."

That same night another little girl of Jessie's age lay weeping silently in the corner of a desolate room where a feeble fire burned in a broken grate, and every other sign of poverty prevailed.

Upon a narrow bedstead lay the little girl's mother, too sick to rise, sleeping now, after a day of weary pain.

Presently there came a knock outside the door, at the sound of which the little girl rose and, brushing the tears from her eyes, went softly and opened the door.

"Rob!" she exclaimed, gladly, "is that you?"

"Yes, Aggie; but it's no use—"

"Hush h!" said Agnes, shutting the door very gently and drawing her brother into the adjoining room. "Oh, Rob, you don't mean they didn't want you?"

"Yes, I do; and we may as well die and done with it. Never mind, Aggie, don't cry"—noticing his sister's distress. "Perhaps something will turn up."

And, striving to comfort his sister, Rob almost deceived himself as to the hopelessness of things.

"People are always kinder at New Year's. I may beg a job somewhere, as long as the Sharpley's don't want me. They didn't pay me well, as it was, and if it hadn't been for mother being sick—"

"They've got so much money, too!" sobbed Agnes. "Oh, I know if I was a rich man I'd look out for poor people!"

"I think I should, too," said Rob. "At least I wouldn't cheat them out of what really did belong to them."

A faint call from the sick room reached Agnes' ear, and both she and her brother hastened to the bedside of their mother, where they remained most of the night, sleeping and watching by turns, hoping that the morning would find her better, yet fearing it would find her worse.

Rob had wished to call a physician, but as there was nothing to pay one with, and no immediate prospect of any means to do so, he had not gone; but in the morning he started out for that purpose, and Agnes, cheering the fire into its warmest blaze, sought to keep up a brave heart, while the patient invalid lay as silent and uncomplaining as it was possible for her, suffering and weak as she was.

The hours stole slowly by toward noon, and Rob did not return, neither did the physician appear, and little Agnes at last decided to go for the latter, while with an anxious heart she wondered where her brother could be.

As she hurried along the street, so intent upon her purpose, eager only to get a physician, and hasten back to her mother, she stumbled awkwardly against a little girl who was walking with one hand in her grandfather's and one hand in her pocket.

"Oh!" exclaimed Jessie, as she put her jaunty hat back into its proper place, and regarded the frightened Agnes. "Oh, did I hurt you, little girl?"

"Oh, no," said Agnes; "I was afraid I hurt you. I'm very sorry—I wasn't looking," and she was hastening on, when Jessie caught hold of her shawl, which felt very thin, and drew her back.

"I want to wish you a happy New Year," she said, "and give you something to buy you a new shawl," and she eagerly pressed a handful of coin into Agnes' hand.

"Do you mean to give this all to me?" asked Agnes, bewildered.

"Oh, yes," said Jessie, "and more, too, if you want it. That's my New Year's, isn't it, grandpa?"

"It will more than pay Dr. Westtan," said Agnes, speaking to herself, as she eagerly counted the money. "Oh, how kind of you! The money'll make mother better just in itself."

JESSIE CAUGHT HOLD OF HER SHAWL.

"Is your mother sick?" asked Jessie, compassionately.

"Yes," answered Agnes, her eyes filling with tears; "and I must not stop to talk, although I thank you so very much."

"Just a moment longer!" said Jessie's grandfather. "Where do you live? We may be able to be of use to your mother. Dr. Westtan and I are old friends. Does he think your mother so very sick?"

"He hasn't seen her yet," faltered Agnes; "we did not like to call him until we had to, as we were afraid we couldnot pay him; but now—now I must hurry, for mother is alone."

"Go back to her," said Jessie's grandfather; "I will go for Dr. Westtan myself."

"Oh, thank you!" said Agnes; "then he will be sure to come."

"Yes, and we'll come back with him," said Jessie, shouting after her as she hastened away. "Let us hurry, grandpa. I hope Dr. Westtan will be at home."

They found him just returning, and making preparations to call on the sick woman, as Rob had left word for him to do in the morning.

He took Jessie and her grandfather with him in his chaise, and in a few minutes they stopped before the shabby habitation which Agnes was just entering.

She uttered a glad exclamation at beholding them, and showed the doctor at once to her mother's bedside.

"I am glad," he said to Jessie's grandfather, after prescribing for his patient, "to meet you here, for here you will find an opportunity to exercise the charity for which you have acquired a reputation. These are worthy people, and your kindness will not be lost upon them."

Meanwhile, Jessie had been explaining to Agnes about her pocketful of money, and Agnes had been telling her of other little boys and girls who, she supposed, would be as glad of the money as she had been.

"Oh, I hope Rob will come soon," she said; "everything is so nice. Rob said people would be kinder to-day because it is 'New Year's,' and he was right."

"Is Rob your brother?" asked Jessie.

"Yes," and Agnes drew such a glowing picture of him that Jessie wanted to wait and see him, but her grandfather warned her that their dinner hour was near at hand, and that they must be going.

"You will hear from us again," he said to Agnes, while Jessie insisted upon putting more money into her hand.

"For Rob," she said, laughing.

Doctor Westtan remained awhile longer, as he was in truth more anxious about his patient than he cared to show. She was, however, sleeping quietly, when, with a few kind words to Agnes, he withdrew.

"I need not be quite so afraid to put this last shovelful of coal on," said she, meditatively, as she renewed the fire, and settled herself to recount her money and consider what of all their needs it should buy for them.

While thus occupied she fell asleep.

Jessie was eating her New Year's dinner, and, between the mouthfuls, recounting the adventures of the morning.

"You'll go there, mamma, won't you?"

"Certainly, my dear, this very afternoon."

"And, mamma, I shall give them all the money I was going to put in the bank, shall I not?"

"We will consider it, my dear. We will learn first what their needs are."

"Most everything, I should think; shouldn't you, grandpa?"

"Pretty nearly, from what I saw and from what Dr. Westtan tells me."

"Oh, mamma, why didn't I think to ask you to send that little girl a dinner?"

"I thought of it," said grandfather, "and your mother has sent it."

So when Agnes woke with a start from her sleep it was to find by her side a basket of provisions which some one had left there.

"Mother," she said, softly; but her mother was still sleeping. "I ought to have locked the door," said Agnes, "but I did not think of going to sleep. That dear little girl must have sent this; I will put it by until Rob comes, and then we will enjoy it together. I wish mother could eat some of it."

Jessie was much displeased when, later in the afternoon, she and her mother made their proposed visit, to find that the dinner was untouched.

"Didn't eat even a piece of pie?" she asked.

Agnes shook her head.

"Then you must eat it now," said Jessie, "for mother is going to send you as many pies as you want, and everything else."

Which was. Agnes thought, quite true, when that night the narrow bedstead had given way to a more commodious one, and the scanty bedclothes were replaced by warm soft blankets and downy spread.

Every comfort that the invalid could desire was placed at her disposal, with the promise of the constant attention of Dr. Westtan until health should return to her.

A happy New Year it proved in this home from the first day until the end.

With hope and comfort, health and happiness returned, for that night when Rob came back to find the joyous change the day had wrought, he had his own happy story to add to the general rejoicing.

He had aided a lady to cross a crowded street, and picked her little boy out almost from under the horses' hoofs, and she, in turn, had taken him home with her, and recommended him to one of her gentlemen boarders who had need of a boy in his business, and who at once engaged Rob, and, as he was only too willing to begin his labors then and there, had kept him busy writing until night; for before his father died Rob had been kept at school.

"A happy New Year," said Agnes, as she and Rob watched the smile on their mother's pale face that night as she lay sleeping.

"A happy New Year," said Jessie, with her curly head nestled under her grandfather's chin. "It was a good present you gave me, grandpa, wasn't it?"

"It was a wise little brain that thought of it," said grandfather. "But wait till the summer comes, with no pony, and then see."

"Grandpa!" and Jessie's reproachful eyes quite silenced him.—M. A. Alden, in N. Y. Weekly.

GORGE OF THE LUALABA.

An Interesting Stretch of River Unlike Anything Seen Elsewhere in Africa.

The western head sources of the Congo river were visited for the first time by white men last year, and the story they have told of the great gorge they saw and the stream that plunges through it, almost as swift as an arrow for many a mile, was entirely out of the common in Congo explorations. The explorers were Lieut. Francqui and Dr. Cornet, in the service of the Congo Free state. They traced the Lualaba river from its fountain head and made a discovery that, as far as is known, is duplicated nowhere in Africa.

Imagine a narrow stream flowing placidly between its rather low banks. It has gradually been gathering volume from little contributions that a dozen or fifteen tributaries have supplied. The channel is quite deep, though not wide. Nearer and nearer the water approaches a mountain pass to the north, which at a distance appears to have no passage through. Suddenly the water rushes into a rift in these hills, and for many a mile it tumbles along, zigzagging between two gigantic, perpendicular walls of solid rock. Sometimes it falls headlong as a cataract, and then again it is merely a rapid, with a speed five times as great as that with which it enters the hills.

This great gorge has a tortuous course, bending first to the east and then to the west. It is nowhere over 120 to 150 feet wide, and it rises 1,000 to 1,200 above the level of the stream. The walls rise nearly perpendicular in every part, and are formed of the bare crystalline rock. Here and there in some crevice a little soil has formed, just enough for a tuft of grass or a puny tree to take root.

At the level of the stream one can see only a little ribbon of the sky above, for at that great height the top of the walls seem almost to touch one another, and the trees at the top overhang the edge and shut out nearly every glimpse of daylight. At the bottom of the narrow gorge the little river glides swiftly, sometimes with almost an unbroken surface, and then again lashed into foam by thousands of rocks, whose tops rise above the surface; and then again the water pours tumultuously over the edge of the declivity, and then plunges on in a series of rapids.

In a distance of forty-three miles the river drops 1,500 feet, and then it emerges upon the plain, and, forgetting its mad career, it flows placidly along to join the Lualaba river, and at the junction of the two rivers the true Congo begins. No other tributary of the Congo, or even the great river itself, where it tumbles along in rapids for 235 miles, between Leopoldville and Matadi, presents a spectacle so savage and so violent.—N. Y. Sun.

THEY HAD BEEN LICKED.

The Tall Man and the Stout Man Had Been Roughly Handled.

A tall, thin young man and a short, stocky one walked painfully up street the other day. They were well dressed From the rear they looked like two young fellows who had tight shoes or sore feet or something of the kind. From the front they looked like two men who had been thrashed within six inches of their lives by some one who knew how to use his fists.

That is what they were.

The tall, thin man had one black eye. There was a long bruise on one side of his face and his nose was twisted somewhat. One of his lips was cut. The short, stocky man had two black eyes. His forehead had the skin rubbed off and his lips were cut.

"Hello!" said a friend, "what in thunder's the matter with you fellows?"

"O," said the tall young man, "we've been licked."

"That's right," said the stocky young man.

"How'd it happen?" inquired the friend

"We got fresh and got licked. That's all there is to it."

"That's enough, ain't it?" asked the stocky young man.

"One man or two?" inquired the friend

"O," answered the tall young man. "It was one man. He didn't have much trouble."

"But what are you going to do about it?"

"Why," said the stocky young man, "we're going to bed.

"But what are you going to do about the fight?"

"Going to bed, I told you."

"Aren't you going to report it to the police?"

"Police?" queried the tall young man, "Report what to the police?"

"Why, the fact that you have been outrageously treated by someone."

"What have the police got to do with it?"

They could arrest the man who assaulted you couldn't they?"

"Now, see here," broke in the stocky young man, "I told you that we got licked. We did. I told you that one man did it. He did. I told you that we were going to bed. We are. I don't see that you have got any kick coming in this matter. We're satisfied; ain't we, Nelse?"

"Perfectly," said the tall young man, with a sickly sort of a smile. "I'm dead lucky that I didn't get two black eyes, and the fellow might have gouged out one of Jimmy's. O, you bet we're satisfied."

And the stocky young man wiped some blood off his forehead and the two started up the street again.—Buffalo Express.

A Covetous Spirit.

There is not a vice which more effectually contracts and deadens the feelings, which more completely makes a man's affections center in himself and excludes all others from partaking in them, than the desire of accumulating possessions. When the desire has once gotten hold of the heart it shuts out all other considerations but such as may promote its views. In its zeal for the attainment of its end it is not delicate in the choice of means. As it closes the heart, so also it clouds the understanding. It cannot discern between right and wrong; it takes evil for good and good for evil; it calls darkness light and light darkness. Beware, then, of the beginnings of covetousness, for you know not where it may end.—Detroit Free Press.

Why He Procrastinated.

"I don't think papa has any serious objections to you, Harold," said the young woman, encouragingly, "but he will probably ask you for some information as to your income."

"And any information I can give him about my income," replied the young man, disconsolately, "will probably be followed by my immediate outgo."—Chicago Tribune.

DIDN'T SELL THE COON.

The Fat Gentleman Was a Trifle Too Exacting.

A man who had a full-grown coon in a box was showing the animal off the other day on Gratiot avenue. His object was to make a sale; but it was a long time before anybody became particularly interested. Then a fat and jolly-looking man came to a halt, inspected the coon for a minute and inquired:

"My friendt, who vhas dot?"

"That is a coon, sir," replied the owner. "I ketched him on my own farm, out here about 'leven miles."

"Do you like to sell her?"

"That's what I brought him in for. That coon is well worth $10 of any man's money, but as times are hard and I want cash, I'll take $5. He's a big bargain at that price."

"Vhas he good for somet'ings?"

"Was he? Well, I should say he was! In the first place coons are mighty skeerce around here, and, in the second, he's a trick coon. I've spent more than six months learning him tricks."

"Vhell, I guess I take him," said the fat man, as he felt in his pocket. "I believe I like to buy some trick coons."

"Where will you have him delivered?"

"Shust wait a minute. I like to know about dose tricks. Does dot coon vhalk on some tight rope?"

"Tight rope? I have never tried him, but I think he could. A coon, you know, is as intelligent as a dog."

"Yes. I know dot. Does he say to you: 'Ah, dere!' and 'Vhere you got dot hat?' "

"No, of course not. Coons can't talk."

"Does he hang by his tail, like some monkeys in der woods?"

"He could, I suppose. I'll guarantee him to furnish you more amusement than any ten monkeys."

"Dot's fine. I vhas a great hand to be amused. If I haf me some coon to amuse me I sit oop nights and laugh. Can dot coon sing me funny songs?"

"Sing! Who ever heard of a coon singing?"

"Vhell, I doan' see vhy. If he could sing to me it makes me feel better. Doan' he call out to some peoples like a parrot und say he vhants a cracker?"

"My dear sir," said the coon man, "you evidently expect too much of a coon. A coon is not a bird. If you get him for five dollars you are making the biggest bargain of your life. Next spring, when the money market is easier, I'll be glad to give you ten dollars to get him back."

"Yes, dot's so. I belief she vahs a big bargain. I vhas trying to buy a coon for more ash twenty years. How vhas dis coon about burglars?"

"How do you mean?"

"Why, if some burglars got in my house, vhat does he do mit 'em?"

"Do! He won't do anything. What can you expect him to do?"

"Doan' he bark and scare 'em away? Doan' he go r-r-r-r-r-r-r like some burglar alarm?"

"No! Look here, man. You seem to have some queer ideas about coons. As I told—"

"All right—all right—I doan' took him! I doan' gif you even one dollar for him! If he doan' keep burglars away how vhas he any good to me? How vhas he any trick coon? No, sir, I doan' buy him for ten cents, und I like to see you go to shail for a shwindler!"—Detroit Free Press.

Happy New Year!

That is the wish of the Burlington Route for the many thousand Northwestern people who have traveled over its lines during 1893, and the many more thousands who will do so during 1894. Now a word about the development of the Burlington system. In 1880, the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy Company, the parent Burlington road, operated only 1,760 miles. In that year it acquired 836 miles of the Burlington & Missouri River in Nebraska. Branch lines were at once built to almost all the important towns in Nebraska, and in May, 1882, the road was completed to Denver, Colorado. In 1887 the line was opened to Cheyenne, Wyoming, the center of a large cattle trade. To supply coal for the operation of the Western lines, a narrow gauge road running from Denver to Lyons was purchased, and in 1889 a line was pushed to New Castle, Wyo., to take advantage of large coal fields there. In 1886 the Chicago, Burlington & Northern was completed, giving a connection with St. Paul and Minneapolis. In 1891 the road reached Deadwood, giving access to the rich mining regions of the Black Hills and the healing Hot Springs of Dakota By control of several Missouri railroads, the Burlington added St. Louis, Kansas City and St. Joseph as terminal points, and is now engaged in building a bridge across the Mississippi above St. Louis, and another across the Missouri near that city, besides purchasing large terminal grounds. Three gateways are open for traffic from the East—Chicago, Peoria and St. Louis—and from them diverge lines passing through ten different states: Illinois, Wisconsin, Minnesota, Iowa, Missouri, Kansas, Nebraska, Colorado, Wyoming and South Dakota, and reaching every important trade center—St. Paul and Minneapolis on the Northwest, Kansas City and St. Joseph on the Southwest, and Omaha, Deadwood, Cheyenne and Denver on the West. With now 7,000 miles of road in the best possible condition, the Burlington system challenges competition, and assures the public of the same excellent service as in the past. For any information as to tickets, routes and rates, write to W. J. C. Kenyon, Gen. Pass. Agent, St. Paul, Minn.

KNOWLEDGE

Brings comfort and improvement and tends to personal enjoyment when rightly used. The many, who live better than others and enjoy life more, with less expenditure, by more promptly adapting the world's best products to the needs of physical being, will attest the value to health of the pure liquid laxative principles embraced in the remedy, Syrup of Figs.

Its excellence is due to its presenting in the form most acceptable and pleasant to the taste, the refreshing and truly beneficial properties of a perfect laxative; effectually cleansing the system, dispelling colds, headaches and fevers and permanently curing constipation. It has given satisfaction to millions and met with the approval of the medical profession, because it acts on the Kidneys, Liver and Bowels without weakening them and it is perfectly free from every objectionable substance.

Syrup of Figs is for sale by all druggists in 50c and $1 bottles, but it is manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co. only, whose name is printed on every package, also the name, Syrup of Figs, and being well informed, you will not accept any substitute if offered.

DELANO DIARY

—Doctors are kept uncommonly busy now.

—The Delano schools will re open next Tuesday.

--The days are growing longer. Have you noticed it?

—Simon Welder's little Willie died this morning of diptheria.

—Several of our young people will attend the dance at Watertown this evening.

—Our fellow townsman. Louis P Probst, has been promoted from teller to cashier of the Wright County Bank. Good for Louey.

—Rev. Millspough and his choir with their Christmas service at the Presbyterian church on Thursday evening drew a crouded house.

—The ladies of the M. E. church will hold a dime social on Tuesday evening, next, at the parsonage for the church. All are cordially invited.

—Fred Chancellor, who is having a run of pneumonia, is reported to be improving the last few days. Dr Fassett, of Rockford, is attending him.

—Yesterday the residence of Simon Weldelee was quarantined on account of diphtheria. He has three small children who are liable to have the disease.

--Lagrippe is bothering some of the people in this vicinity quite badly The complications of Bronchetis and Pneumonia seem to be the worst forms to deal with.

—I. Gutzwiller is again seen at his desk, having sufficiently recovered from his late operation to allow him to take up the thread of business, where he laid it down a short time ago.

--Geo. W. Bolton received Wednesday a box of Japan oranges, direct from Japan, which were sent him to sell to some of our local dealers. They were purchased by Wyatt Johns.

—There will be an old times dance at the city hall on New Years night given by ye married folks of Delano Tickets to the dance will be 50 cents, the ladies to bring a basket supper.

--A citizen of Watertown threatens to commence suit in the District Court, against a Delano doctor for malpractice soon Alledging a failure to secure a good job on a broken arm.

—Rev. J. W. Powell, was recipient of a nice turkey for Christmas, through the efforts of L. W. Terry, who procured dime contributions sufficient in a short time for the purpose.

—John L Ahmiller, sent his customers a Christmas present, this year each one receiving a half barrel of beer extra. The Eagle force each received a case of bottled beer from the same source.

—The dance given by the K. of P. Monday evening was without doubt one of the nicest dances ever gotten up in Delano and all who attended were well satisfied that they had spent a very merry Christmas.

—Mr. Nick Franzen is making a sale of a small piece of land near the mill to Messrs Johnson who own adjoining land. The mill property will then be quite commodious enough for the growing business of the thrifty firm.

—Diphtheria has appeared again. This time Mattie Sieloff has it. The premises were promptly quarantined on its being pronounced diphtheria, and it is hoped to prevent the spread of the disease though some had already been exposed.

—Mr. Long and others with several hounds chased a wolf from near Howard Lake to Japs farm near Delano where it took refuge in the cattle yard and the dogs were about to make way with it when one of the Japs boys came out and killed it, one day during the past week.

—Brick $8 per 1000 at John Cooley's.

—Owing to the large amount of sickness this week it has been impossible for the editor to attend to his duties on the paper, they have therefore been left to the tender mercies of the compositors, who you must blame for all oversights in proof reading and for the slimness of the paper.

--Old land marks one after another are being removed We noticed while on the Montrose road near the Ziebarth school house a stately elm that has stood the storms of many years and had come to be one of the last in that immediate neighborhood succumbed to the axe and saw of a couple of men. It fell with a crash a very few seconds after we had passed it.

—Some of the sawed wood being sold about town is old poles and down trees that have become water soaked or have become partially rotted and do not add much to the heat of a room nor the peace of mind of purchasers on cold days. Continually poking a fire and putting in wood that simply smoulders away without much blaze makes one think of looking out for coal or other fuel.

--We are informed that a gentleman who is stopping at the Danforth House; says that while in Minneapolis a short time ago he had a check for $15, which he wanted to get cashed and as banks were closed he went into a saloon and made the exchange. When on coming out he was met by a couple of men, and a revolver thrust into his face, with a request to hand over his money. He gave them a $10 bill and quietly watched them run away. It is not safe to carry your money to Minneapolis if you wish to keep it.

—We are in receipt of a copy of the Coeur d'Alene Press, of Idaho, from which we learn that Coeur d' Alene is a city of 1,000 population, beautifully situated on the famous Coeur d' Alene lake, 33 miles east of Spokane on a branch line of the Northern Pacific railroad. Also from which we learn of the marriage of Miss Emma Brothers to Wright B. Kretzer, who is mentioned as a well known mechanic of that place. Both are well known here and have the best wishes of a host of friends.

—If the Board of Education want to be on the safe side so bad they should improve the opportunity of the vacation to disenfect the school room where the patient was attending when she was taken sick with diphtheria A few pounds of sulphor burned in each room, and a general scrubbing of the whole house, with some white washing would be in order, and add to the looks and comforts or the building. Now that the wonderful breathing apparatus of the famous Rotan system has been nailed up it would be a comparatively easy matter to disinfect the house after the ordinary plan.

—Two families are under quarantine in the village. Although they may be abundantly able to supply themselves with necessaries of life when at liberty, when shut up by themselves, it is not always easy to get what they want or what they need. Their numerous friends on the outside can help them more by thinking up what they need and supplying it to them by the man hired by the village to look after them Send them well prepared food, good nourishing food, at regular hours and they will be relieved of much of their labor Be careful to receive no dishes back until they are properly disinfected with boiling water.

—The banquet tendered the city council by the Delano cornet band was a very pleasant event. After their usual practice they adjourned to the City Restaurant, accompanied by the city dads, where an elegant supper was spread, of which all ate heartily. After the meal was finished an hour was spent in speach making and by several selections by the Subert quartette. All enjoyed themselves to such an extent that they decided to make it an annual event. President Vorse arose and wished that, if such was the case, he might always remain a member of the council. After which they all departed to their respective homes feeling that an evening could not have been spent more pleasantly.

—Last Thursday evening arter finishing his business in the city, Charles Brunkow, the manager of the Delano Provision Company with a hundred dollar bill in his hand ran out of a store and jumped onto the wrong side of a passing street car in hopes to make the evening train home. His head came in contact with a post and he was picked up and several hours after returned consciousness to find himself among policemen at the central station, where he had been carried. He found his money in his pocket where he had put it after he was hurt. It was a very narrow escape for Charley. People visiting the cities must be careful not to climb onto passing cars until they come to a stop, and then be sure to get onto the right side, and not onto the side where the wire fence is.

—Christmas was duly observed by Delanoites. Services were held in the Catholic church. Christmas trees, eaves and other contrivences were used for presenting the children with presents. The M. E. Sunday school program was well carried out, and the Fairy in the cave took the place of the older fashioned way, on Saturday evening. At the Presbyterian church on Monday evening a nice program was gone through with and a genuine old fashioned Santa Clause added much to the merriment of the occasion. The Swedish church held their entertainment on Monday evening, also. Other trees were made use of in the village. Some inprivate families. The day was fair after the rain of the day before, and the snow of Christmas eve.

-This might be called a silver Christmas, as every thing shined with the brightness of that metal being covered with ice of various thicknesses below an inch. The rain the day before freezing onto the objects as it fell. Trees had icicles hanging from their limbs, and the branches were covered; fences presented the appearance of having instead of usual boards, huge saws, the sticks of ice extending in same instances from one board to another looked some like a large reed for weaving. When the sun was reflected from trees, shrubs or other objects wrapped in ice they looked as if covered with diamonds. Tiny blades of grass and and weeds that projected above the snow did their share to brighted the whole aspect. It is truly wonderful what a gay dress nature assumed on this occasion in which to celebrate the birth of Christ.

—Yesterday afternoon a well-known Medical Doctor about town was seen going toward his boarding place with a calander or some similar thing pined on his back. He was so full that he could scarcely walk. It is a disgrace to any man who will supply such a man with that which will intoxicate. The saloon keeper who will take his dimes over the conter in exchang for what is taking him to a drunkards grave, deserves to be dealt with. The community which will longer tolerate such a burning shame is a very easy going people. This thing must stop! The mayor informs us that he personally notified all the saloon keepers but one, who he was told did not sell to this particular case, not to sell to him, and each promised he would not. Every man who respects law or morals favors something being done in this matter, and will aid in discovering the defendents, All concerned know who is meant; it is not worth while to make it more public. The first man found guilty of selling or giving to this man any intoxicating liquors is in danger of suffering the full extent of the law. Take warning or look out for the consequences.

County Cullings.

The Buffalo Journal endorses our suggestion of last week that the old settlers hold a genuine old settlers meeting.

This week's Cokato Commoner came to us Saturday morning with a valedictory from W. H. Roll who has solong and ably edited it. W. L. Laurence, of Albert Lea, gives his introductory to the readers of the Commoner, and says with their aid he hopes to maintain its high standard and wishes all a merry Christmas and a happy New Year.

It appears as if quite a large percentage of those against whom suits have been brought in the Wright county courts this term have been discharged for one reason or another, without punishment. There should be provision made by law to reimburse people for their loss of time and the trouble they are put to by being brought into court when they are innocent.

In another column under the head of The Alliance Meeting appears a defence of that party by "Bushwacker" an able writer from Woodland where there are some good Democrats who have become disgusted with party management, rather than party principles and gone over to the new party in hopes of bettering themselves. If these and others would stand up for their beliefs in their own party. Most of them we think find considerable in the new party that they do not approve of and if Democracy was held out to them in its purity, and lyed up to they would be contented to abide by its majority rule.

If all reports are true there will be no need of any republican or democratic county conventions for the coming campaign, as candidates for both parties have been already agreed upon The populists and prohibs, however will have to hold conventions as usual. --Buffalo Journal.

Phillips, the Shooter, Held.

SOUTH HAVEN, Minn., Dec. 23.—William Phillips was arrested and brought before Justice Lino for attempting to shoot Chas. C. Smith. The examination was adjourned until Tuesday and Phillips placed under $300 bonds for his apperance.—Journal.

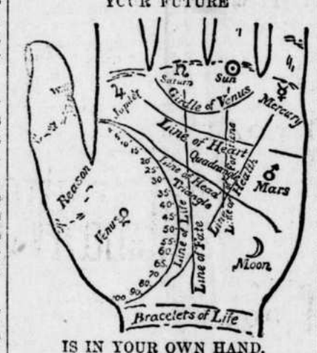
YOUR FUTURE



IS IN YOUR OWN HAND.

Palmistry assumes to tell what the lines in your hand indicate. It will amuse you, if nothing more. The above diagram almost explains itself. The length of the LINE OF LIFE indicates probable age to which you will live. Each BRACELET gives you thirty years. Well marked LINE OF HEAD denotes brain power; clear LINE OF FORTUNE fame or riches. Both combined mean success in life; but you must keep up with modern ideas to win it. You will find a party of these in Demorest's Family Magazine, so attractively presented that every member of the family is entertained. It is a dozen magazines in one. A CLEAR LINE OF HEART bespeaks tenderness; a straight LINE OF FATE, peaceful life; the reverse if crooked. A well-defined LINE OF HEALTH spares you doctors' bills; so will the health hints in Demorest's. No other magazine publishes so many articles to interest the home circle. You will be subject to extremes of high spirits or despondency if you have the GIRDLE OF VENUS well marked. Keep up your spirits by having Demorest's Magazine to read. By subscribing to it for 1894 you will receive a gallery of exquisite works of art of great value, besides the superb premium picture, 17x22 inches, "I'm a Daisy!" which is almost a real baby, and equal to the original oil painting which cost $300; and you will have a magazine that cannot be equaled by any in the world for its beautiful illustrations and subject matter, that will keep you posted on all the topics of the day, and all the fads, and different items of interest about the household, besides furnishing interesting reading matter, both grave and gay, for the whole family; and while Demorest's is not a fashion magazine, its fashion plates are perfect, and you get with it, free of cost, all the patterns you wish to use during the year, and in any size you choose. Send in your subscription at once, only $2.00, and you will really get over $5.00 in value. Address the publisher, W. Jennings Demorest, 15 East 14th St., New York. If you are unacquainted with the Magazine, send for a specimen copy. A large QUADRANGLE means honesty; a large TRIANGLE, generosity; low FIRST DIVISION OF THUMB, strong will; LONG SECOND DIVISION, reasoning faculty. The MOUNT OF JUPITER betokens ambition; that of SATURN, prudence; the SUN, love of splendor; MARS, courage; MOON, imagination; VENUS, love of pleasure; and MERCURY, intelligence. Take our advice as above and you will be sure to possess the last and most valuable quality.
